Thomas H. Hall has a fine lot of Easter lilies ranging from eight to fourteen buds to the pot. He has timed the roses splendidly and will have an excellent cut of first-class stock.

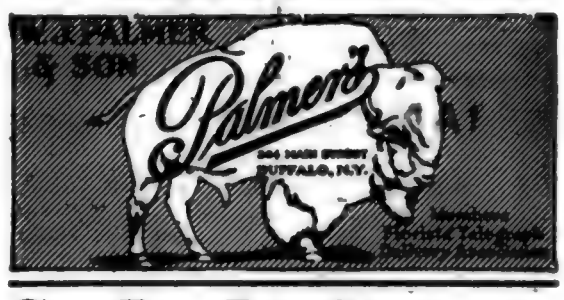
give great support to the large supply houses. Their stores are gay with the latest in basket designs and covers for pots.

The Minneapolis Floral Co. has sold all its azaleas, the prices ranging from $2.50 to $4.50. These were mostly Vander Cruyssen. Lilies and French hydrangeas are selling like hot cakes. The staff is working overtime to handle the rush of shipping orders.



Max Kaiser is asking and, what is better still, is getting $10 per plant for some fine specimen hydrangeas. He is the largest grower of Easter stock in Minneapolis.

Miss H. B. Whitted has returned from Atlantic City, where she spent a short vacation. She is of the opinion that the Minneapolis flower stores are equal, if not superior, to those of any of the places she visited. No doubt much of this is due to the keen rivalry between the Minneapolis florists in window decorations. All windows are smart at all times.

Thomas Lynes has purchased a house and two vacant lots. He intends to utilize the lots for cut annuals. This, he says, will keep the lots clean, the juveniles busy and pay for the lots. Mr. Lynes is one of the old-timers and always takes a great interest in the florists' business here.

O. H. Carlson's Hoosier Beauty roses are well worth seeing, as they are of fine color and have good, long stems. The last two years have demonstrated that the Minnesota climate is suitable for roses, especially around Minneapolis. American Beauty is not all that could be desired, but any of the other standard varieties can be found in fine shape as regards color, foliage and stem.

The Market.

Business last week was unusually brisk and the customary lull preceding Easter was not experienced. The general condition indicated a heavy Easter business. Growers of Easter stock had their plants in excellent condition, and unless a warm spell occurs the holiday will be supplied with the finest of pot plants. Some of the growers had disposed of practically their entire stocks.

The quality of cut flowers coming into this market is fine and a market is readily found for the stock. The florists handling seeds and sundries are in the busiest period of the season, and this, combined with Easter, should make business unusually heavy.

Various Notes.

The St. Paul Florists' Club held its regular meeting at O. R. Eckhardt's place, April 11. A nice lot of plant stock was on exhibition and the attendance was representative.

O. J. Olson, of Holm & Olson, is greatly improved in health since his last operation, but still is confined at St. Luke's hospital.

L. L. May is reported as greatly improved since his arrival in the south.

Mr. and Mrs. D. W. C. Ruff, of Bald Eagle, have returned from a winter's stay in Florida.

The Ramsey County Men's Garden Club held a rousing meeting at the Auditorium April 14. The attendance was estimated at 10,000. Holm & Olson supplied 20,000 packets of seed, which were distributed free of charge. Everyone was presented with a garden trowel, with the compliments of this firm.

Out-of-town business with the O. R. Eckhardt Co. is heavy and a good grade of stock is being purchased.

Visitors last week were C. Schaeffer, of the La Crosse Floral Co., La Crosse, Wis., and A. Miller, of Chicago.

The Market.

A pleasing and decided improvement has taken place in business since last week's report was mailed. The demand has been good and there has been no particular surplus of anything. A feeling of optimism is abroad on every hand; everyone is confident that the total of Easter business will break all records. Judging by the heavy advance orders placed, both plants and cut flowers are largely sold in advance. The weather has been cool for the season, with a driving snow storm as late as April 14, and, barring some such calamitous condition as we suffered on the eve of the great holiday a year ago, business seems bound to exceed all records.

Roses are not in heavy supply and are cleaning up well. At Easter prices advance but little. Hadley is bringing excellent prices; so are Francis Scott Key and Ophelia. In other varieties there is no great change in prices. Some fine Russell, Miller, Stanley and Killarney Queen are coming in. Carnations are stiffening and good flowers are likely to bring $5 and $6 and, in special cases, $8 before the end of the week. Sweet peas will be in abundant crop and are likely to meet with a big sale. They are of superb quality. A few single violets may hold out until the end of the week if we have cool weather, and there will be a good crop of doubles. Prices should vary from $1 to $1.50 per hundred.

Pansies are abundant and all separate shades of color sell well. English primroses put up in bunches of twenty-five, fifty and 100 are in demand. Yellow polyanthus sell nicely. Snapdragons are less abundant than a year ago; pink continues to sell much the best. Narcissi and tulips are in heavy supply, but they clean up finely. This has been a satisfactory bulb season with all the growers. There are plenty of Spanish irises and small lots of Gladiolus Peach Blossom. Sparaxis, anemones, ranunculi, ixias and tritonias are seen. Yellow marguerites are in heavy supply and a fair quantity of the white Mrs. Sander is coming in. Of lily of the valley the supply has increased. Callas are moving rather better. Cut Lilium longiflorum brings $8 to $10 per hundred, according to quality, with L. candidum at $5 and $6. There are plenty of calendulas and smaller lots of Leptosyne maritima, coreopsis, hunnemannia and schizanthus.

Gardenias are in heavy supply, but cattleyas are not abundant and prices on C. Mossiæ have advanced sharply. For both Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri there is an excellent demand. The trade in pot plants appears to be the greatest ever, with lilies, roses, azaleas, bulbous flowers, hydrangeas, genistas and pink spiræas the best sellers.

Club Meeting.

There were 100 in attendance at the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club April 12. F. A. Smith, principal of the Essex Agricultural School, Danvers, gave a splendid practical lecture on "Orcharding." Reports on the International and National Flower Shows were made and Peter Fisher presented resolutions on the death of Albert Roper, who was murdered on the night of March 1. It was decided to have ladies' nights at the June and September meetings and the annual picnic of the club was set for July 25. An invitation was received that the club hold a field day May 15 to inspect the rock gardens on the S. M. Weld estate, at Dedham.

James Wheeler, of Natick, was given a report of merit for his exhibit of grand yellow marguerites. A report of merit also was given to F. W. Fletcher, who showed a new snapdragon. James Methven exhibited some exceptionally fine celery.

Various Notes.

William E. Doyle, one of Boston's oldest and best known florists, died last week at his home at Brookline, in his seventy-second year. A short biography is given in the obituary column of this issue.

F. J. Dolansky, of Lynn, has a heavy crop of gardenias for Easter. He is selling quantities of nice, bushy, well-flowered plants. Of cattleyas his Schroederæ now is running out, but he has a fine lot of Mossiæ. He has a splendid showing of young stock of French hydrangeas carrying single heads, which are in demand.

William H. Elliott is especially strong at present on Hadley, Miller and Ophelia roses. From his Brighton establishment, where George C. Harbison is manager, excellent Beauties and Millers are coming in. The demand for Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri, of which he is a large grower, is strong.

H. M. Robinson & Co. report Easter advance orders heavy and the men are rushed to keep abreast of business. They are having heavy calls for Sim's sweet peas, mignonette and polyanthus.

Kamayana & Serada, of North Cambridge, have fine stock of specimen Tausendschon and other roses, and hydrangeas for Easter.

Mann Bros. are the largest local growers of Lilium candidum, which proves popular at this season. They have good stock of sparaxis and dark red snapdragons.

H. J. Borowski & Sons, Roslindale, have an exceedingly good showing of rambler and polyantha roses, including fine standards. Bougainvilleas, lilies, azaleas and other Easter plants have done well. The additions completed to their greenhouses are proving of great value.

Leptosyne maritima is a pretty pale yellow annual coming in from several growers now, including Wm. Capstick, of Auburndale, and C. B. Luard, of Wollaston. It would sell much better but for its bad habit of coming with twisted stems.

Edward Bingham, of Dedham, has a fine crop of some 40,000 Campbell violets for Easter. His English primroses are remarkably fine and meet with a quick sale.

Seed stores now are rushed to the limit and night and day work is necessary to keep up with orders. Business at counters started late and, therefore, is all the more strenuous.

John W. Foote, of Reading, has a good crop of Pink Delight, White Wonder and Beacon for the holidays. He is marketing a fine lot of well-flowered geraniums.

The Sutermeister estate, of Readville, never had so many orders for bulbous pans before. The leaders are Murillo tulips and Victoria and Double Von Sion narcissi, with smaller lots of other sorts.

Adolph E. E. Koch, of Nobscot, is sending in the best Mrs. Sander marguerites of the season, in addition to yellow marguerites, pink snapdragons and carnations.

Paul F. Brigham, of Westboro, has an excellent Easter crop of Spencer sweet peas in all the leading colors. His carnations look fine, especially Matchless, Pink Delight, Ward and Benora. He has a large crop of pink and white snapdragons.

April 17 crocuses, chionodoxas, scillas, winter aconites, helleborus, Primula Veitchii and denticulata, Draba Aizoon, Narcissus cyclamineus and minimus, Tulip Kaufmanniana, Erica carnea, Arabis alpina, hepaticas and leucojums were flowering outdoors. From this time on additional varieties will open rapidly.

The Budlong Rose Co. has no trouble in selling its large rose shipments early each day, the quality being so fine. Hadley, Russell, Ophelia and Francis Scott Key are the leading quartette at present.

Carnation Alice now is doing splendidly with Thomas Capers and is well liked. Benora and Pink Delight are fine. He has a nice lot of large-sized, well flowered zonale geraniums.

Peter Ball, of Wakefield, who specializes in Asparagus Sprengeri and plumosus, which are handled by Herbert T. Capers, says he never had a better demand for cut sprays than now. Everything is snapped up as soon as offered.

Patrick Welch is delighted with the outcome of the Philadelphia National Flower Show. He spent twelve strenuous days there. It is certainly a great deal to ask of a busy man to absent himself from business for so long a period, but Mr. Welch and some others do it cheerfully for the good of the cause. W. N. C.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

Those who delayed making their purchases until late in the week probably were able to buy flowers at prices below normal for this season of the year, but, on the other hand, they perhaps found themselves unable to procure orchids and valley. Good valley is bringing $6 per hundred at this writing. The retailers were urged to place orders for Easter deliveries, as it was said that the price might go to $7 and $8 per hundred. Cattleyas went to $9 and $10 per dozen last week; the Easter quotations are $12 to $15, with probably not enough to go around.

Roses will be plentiful at $30 per thousand and up. American Beauty roses are plentiful and, while they brought $4 and $5 per dozen last week, the end of the present week probably will find them moving at $7.50 and better. Carnations were exceptionally plentiful last week and this will have a deterrent effect on the Easter supply. There will be just about enough to go around.

At present the market is flooded with Narcissus poeticus, N. Barrii and N. Mrs. Langtry, coming in from Virginian points. They move only at low prices and whatever the buyer chooses to offer is usually accepted. These, however, are about at an end. Daffodils, Emperor and Empress, are plentiful and sell at 50 cents per hundred and less. Some exceptionally fine pansies, the quality being as good as has ever been seen in this market, were offered at $5 per hundred bunches, the bunches containing from six to ten flowers, according to the size of the pansies. Stocks are good and should bring from $2.50 to $4 per hundred.

Among the new arrivals are gladioli, which for the first of the season are good and bring $6 and $8 per hundred. Cowslips, or English primroses, as a novelty, are moving fairly well.

Various Notes.

F. L. Mulford, of the bureau of plant industry, Department of Agriculture, has returned from Norfolk, Va., where he spent a week studying the production of chrysanthemums and ornamental plants.

The Leo Niessen Co. is offering some exceptionally fine cornflowers from the north. Cornflowers have attained considerable popularity this season and are selling well.

William R. Grey, of Oakton, Va., brought 80,000 valley to the market for the Easter business. This is a record output for him. The quality of the stock was good.

Considerable damage was done by the heavy wind and rain storm which visited the city last week. All of the houses in and around Washington lost more or less glass. The Dunbar Floral Co., at Alexandria, Va., will have to replace a number of panes; George Field had some little damage to his orchid houses, while Fred H. Kramer had the large plate glass window at the side of his store on F street blown in by the gale. The wind attained a velocity of fifty miles an hour and destroyed a large quantity of outdoor stock, the rain beating the stock into the ground.

William F. Gude spent several days in Philadelphia last week on matters pertaining to the flower show.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, John M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Thirty-fourth annual convention, Chicago, June 20 to 22, 1916.

COMMENTING on the condition of the retail seed business in Georgia this spring, E. C. Everett, of the Everett Seed Co., Atlanta, Ga., said: "It looks as if everybody is going to make a garden this year. We have never had a busier season."

APRIL business is holding up rather better than it usually does, doubtless because of the backward season and the postponement of much buying due in March. The trade is fearful of the sudden arrival of summer. Continued cool weather will do much to retrieve the losses of March.

THE annual fight over free seeds began in Congress last week. Each year the opposition grows a little stronger, but it is scarcely to be hoped that the appropriation will be omitted from the conference report this year, whatever happens during the earlier stages of the bill's passage.

THE Holland-America line is having difficulty maintaining its service between Rotterdam and New York, no boat having sailed from March 23 to April 15, with no announcement of the probable date of the next sailing. Spring shipments are about all across, but the facilities for moving the autumn bulb shipments are in doubt.

THE decision of the Dutch Bulb Growers' Association this season to add cost of cases and packing to the invoice price of bulbs is creating a great deal of discussion in England, where it is considered that all bulb merchants should combine to resist the imposition of extra charges, and to firmly refuse to buy Dutch bulbs unless they are quoted packing free and delivered for a certain sum agreed on.

SEED IMPORTS INCREASING.

Excluding castor beans, flaxseed, grass, clover and sugar beet seeds, the following is the official record of "all other" seed imports for the last three years for which figures are available:

Year ending June 30	Value
1913	$3,114,812
1915	3,657,084

BAD SWEET CLOVER SEED.

In order to determine to what extent the seeds of the three species of sweet clover are confused in the seed trade, the United States Department of Agriculture caused to be sent to seedsmen requests for samples and prices of white sweet clover seed.

In response to these inquiries 172 mail samples were received, of which 147 were labeled, or described in the letters accompanying them, by one of the following names: White sweet clover, white flowering sweet clover, or Bokhara clover, all of which are frequently applied to Melilotus alba. Of these 147 samples only ninety-one were white sweet clover seed, the remaining fifty-six being either a mixture of white sweet clover and biennial yellow sweet clover seed, or all biennial yellow sweet clover seed, or one or both of these adulterated with alfalfa seed.

In response to the same requests for white sweet clover seed twenty-two mail samples were received which were designated as sweet clover. Of these, six were seed of white sweet clover, four biennial yellow sweet clover, two a mixture of biennial white and yellow, five biennial white and alfalfa, and five were seed of annual yellow sweet clover. Three unlabeled samples were received, of which one was white sweet clover, and two were annual yellow sweet clover.

"yellow sweet clover," seven were seed of biennial yellow sweet clover and eleven were seed of annual yellow sweet clover.

On the basis of mail samples found to be incorrectly labeled seventy-five lots were purchased. Of these purchased lots forty-four were labeled to designate white sweet clover seed and only five were found to be true to name; of nine designated as sweet clover, one was seed of white sweet clover; among twenty-two unlabeled lots ordered on the basis of mail samples described as white sweet clover, only three lots were true to name, while none of the five lots based on mail samples, not specifically designated, was white sweet clover.

Of eleven lots purchased, on the basis of letters quoting white sweet clover, only three were true to name, while seven lots purchased on quotations without designation as to kind were all white sweet clover.

Of twenty-two purchased lots, which should presumably have been biennial yellow sweet clover, four were true to name, and eighteen were seed of annual yellow sweet clover.

It was found that when requests for mail samples of white sweet clover seed were sent to the seed trade fifty-seven per cent of the samples received were true to name; that when purchases were made on quotation without mail samples fifty-five per cent of the purchased lots were true to name, and that when purchases were made on the basis of mail samples not true to name only twelve per cent of the purchased lots were true to name.

Of 172 trade samples twenty-three were found to be adulterated with alfalfa, and of ninety-three purchased lots twenty-seven were adulterated with alfalfa. Several years ago, when the price of sweet clover seed was much lower than that of alfalfa, mixtures of the two were sold as alfalfa seed. Since the prices of the two have been reversed alfalfa seed has appeared as an adulterant of sweet clover seed.

This inquiry into the quality of commercial sweet clover seed shows practically the same condition to exist which was found in the case of Kentucky bluegrass, orchard grass, redtop and hairy vetch, when they were investigated for the first time.

A statement of the facts is now being distributed to the press for the purpose of acquainting the public with the facts.

BEWARE TURNIP RAPE SEED.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture has sent out a warning against turnip rape seed, stating that 200,000 pounds of the seed, or enough to sow approximately 50,000 acres, have been imported from Argentina and Japan and are being sold as winter rape, although it is not suitable for the forage purposes for which winter rape is grown.

The seeds of turnip rape are smaller and have a more deeply pitted surface than those of winter rape. The young plants are easily distinguished by the difference in habit of growth and the character and color of the leaves. Winter rape produces a definite stem, with the leaves occurring along it at intervals. Turnip rape does not produce a definite stem, the leaves all growing in an apparent whorl at the surface of the

THE TEXAS ONION CROP.

The Texas onion crop of 1916 is estimated to cover 10,057 acres, as compared with 8,943 acres in 1915, an increase of about twelve per cent. The condition of the crop April 1 is estimated as fifty-five per cent of normal, which forecasts a yield of about 192.5 bushels per acre, or a total production of 1,935,972 bushels, the equivalent of 4,200 cars of 460 bushels each. In 1915 the shipments amounted to about 4,607 cars.

Laredo, in Webb county, has about 42.8 per cent of the total acreage, which, other things being equal, would give 1,799 cars. The percentage of condition for the county is slightly higher than that for the state, however, and it is probable that at this time the prospect in Webb county is for not less than 1,900 cars.

EASTER WEEK

During Easter week florists can get an idea of what the flower business would be at all times if it were properly advertised. People buy more flowers at this particular time simply because Easter has been advertised in connection with flowers for so many years. But there is no good reason why they would not buy as heavily other times if they were properly solicited by advertisements. Out of 10,000 florists in the United States and Canada not more than 1000 advertise at all, and out of the 1000 not over 200 know how to do it right. The reason why we are interested is because the larger and more profitable the florist business is, the larger and more profitable our business is bound to be. Progressive florists must consume large quantities of lily bulbs to meet the popular demand, and they will need Horseshoe Brand bulbs because they yield more profit than any other brand sold. Think it over—advertise your business; and when you want good lily bulbs get Horseshoe Brand Giganteum. Let us put your name on our mailing list. Write us now.

VEGETABLES AND FRUITS DEPARTMENT

TOMATOES IN TRUCK GARDENS.

Growing the Seedlings in Frames.

A cheap and quick method of growing tomato plants by the hundreds of thousands for home use and to ship out is to use the hotbed. In the first place we have to consider the hotbed, and the method of handling after they leave the hotbed. The horticultural industry as a whole is inundated by writings from armchair gardeners, who have never learned the business but are always ready to give profuse advice to practical men.

The making of the hotbed is worth full attention. It is the foundation of future success. Choose a sunny and, if possible, a sheltered position for the site of the hotbed. Then procure sufficient fresh straw stable manure to make a bed eighteen inches wider all around than the frame and at least two feet deep when well tramped. Copious supplies of water must be given, to generate the heat in the manure. It is always necessary that you have it packed so firmly that you can stand on it without leaving footprints. Moisture and solidity of the compost are vital to the generation of heat and its retention afterward.

The Frame Ready for the Seed.

Having made up the bed, we must then place the frame and sashes on it. This will help to develop the heat. Keep the sashes closed for two days, and then give a little ventilation for two days more, to free the gases which would otherwise be destructive to plant life. Then place a layer of fresh, light, porous soil inside the frame, to a depth of two inches when pressed solid. For the next two days leave a slight ventilation on. The soil will warm up and the gases will be eliminated.

It will then be quite safe to sow the seed. The simplest and best way will be to sow it thinly in drills, making the drills two inches apart. By sowing thinly, the light and air will be allowed to get to the seedlings, and strong young plants will be the result. Slight ventilation should be given in the daytime, to keep the atmosphere sweet. Watering with a fine sprayer on the can should be done when necessary, and then early in the day.

Our Square Paper Dirt Bands are the original of all that are on the market today. All others being sold are imitations of these we advertise, and some of the imitations being sold are made of cheap paper, costing only about half as much as our heavy stock. We sell no experiments. Ours have been tried out by long use in the greenhouse. They will stand up in any wet and heat as long as wanted. Samples FREE.

Gentlemen: * * * We would say that we used all the Paper Pots we got from you to raise tomato plants.
In fact, WE DID NOT HAVE HALF ENOUGH TO FILL OUR ORDERS. WE CHARGED EXACTLY TWICE THE AMOUNT we did other years and yet our CUSTOMERS INSISTED ON HAVING THOSE IN PAPER POTS—Blackadar & Co., Dauphin, Manitoba, Canada.

"SHALL USE NOTHING ELSE FOR BEDDING PLANTS IN THE FUTURE."—Charles Andrews, Susquehanna, Pa.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

Again funeral work has been the chief outlet for stock, which has been arriving in fairly large quantities. Tulips are practically over and are being followed by German irises, ornithogalums, Spanish irises and others. Easter lilies that were too early for the big day were being cut and sent in, and there also were a number of plants being offered. Spiræas are on sale and will be up to the time, but rhododendrons should be over in most cases and azaleas short. There are few bulbous plants in pots and it looks as though the principal trade will be in cut flowers. Outdoor roses are extremely plentiful and good, while the indoor stock is keeping up well for this season of the year.

Various Notes.

The quarterly smoker of the Los Angeles County Horticultural Society was held at the Hoffman cafe, April 8. The attendance was not quite so large as usual, but all sat down to an excellent meal, followed by speeches and story-telling. President Felgate was in the chair.

George W. Smith has purchased a new 2-ton truck for use in his nursery business. He purposes to move most of the stock from the nursery at Twelfth and Wall streets to the new nursery near Beverly Hills.

One of the largest landscape development projects taken in hand here for a long time is that of the Palos Verdes Syndicate, consisting of a number of wealthy men from the east. They have about 17,000 acres on the Palos Verdes hills near San Pedro, and this is to be subdivided into choice building sites. A great deal of nursery stock will be needed and much of this is being grown on the place. L. F. Horner, well known in this section as a landscape gardener and formerly secretary of the Los Angeles County Horticultural Society, is in charge of the work.

The Pasadena Horticultural Society's annual spring show opened April 13, in a tent in Central park. At the time of writing the judges have not completed their duties, and it was quite apparent that they had work cut out for them to select the winners from the long list of competitors in some of the classes. The vegetable classes are always strong at Pasadena and here it was evident that W. W. Felgate and J. Anderson were worthily upholding their end. In the trade groups the usual exhibitors were to the front. Campbell's Seed Store had a pretty exhibit and its pansies certainly were fine. A. Simpson could not bring the fine places he has, but he did the next best thing and showed the pictures. In the Germain Seed & Plant Co. group a new idea was worked out. Not a single flowering plant was used, the color being obtained entirely from foliage plants. At the back of the group a good but rather funereal effect was obtained by weeping willows and an urn-shaped granite vase, this sloping away to a well arranged vista of Japanese maples, Nandina domestica, golden privets, honeysuckles and other foliage plants. Among the latter were some dwarf plants of Pittosporum Tobira variegatum, Lady Pollock geraniums and iresines, while in the larger stock were fine Aucuba Japonica, Biota aurea nana and Euonymus Duc d'Anjou. Paul Howard had for his exhibit what was supposed to represent a small lot, closely planted. Some pretty stock of baby rambler roses and green euonymus were used to line out the beds. The Clemence Nurseries as usual had a pretty display of flowering plants, well arranged and comprising most of the popular kinds now in bloom, the group being helped by the addition of a number of fine standard or tree roses. Coolidge's Fernery & Rare Plant Gardens showed several new fruits and a fine collection of roses. Morris & Snow showed bulbous and other stock in bloom; also many of their specialties in seeds. The Patten Seed Co. had a prettily arranged stand of seeds and flowering plants. Robt. Pegg, of the Mentor Nursery, had a finely arranged group in which every plant was correctly labeled. The private gardeners all showed up well and taken on the whole I have never seen the tent so bright and full of color. The one thing lacking was the fine tulips usually shown, these being nearly over everywhere.

A recent call at the City Nurseries, of Redlands, showed everything in fine shape and Manager W. C. Collett reports business as far ahead of that of last year.

H. R. Richards.

We are much pleased with the results of our plant advertisements in The Review; orders have come in freely and from a wide range of territory.

Germain Seed & Plant Co.

Los Angeles, Feb. 25, 1916. By M. L. Germain, Pres.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The glut of stock that prevailed for two or three weeks was interrupted last week by a cool north wind and now nearly everything cleans up well, especially as much stock is being held back for Easter. Everything is in fine shape at present and the growers are hoping that the hot weather will hold off for another week. From all indications, the Easter displays will be the best ever shown here. Some of the shops are undergoing a thorough renovation for the occasion and the dealers are looking forward to excellent business. Potted stock, while not excessive, is sufficient for all needs, there being more primulas, many rambler roses of good quality and plenty of spiræas, hydrangeas, rhododendrons, azaleas, etc. Lilacs are about gone and tulips are about off crop. Spanish iris is coming better and there still is a liberal offering of good ranunculi.

Carnations continue a little scarce, but no real shortage is felt. Sweet peas are beginning to arrive in fair quantities and the good stock is being well received. Snowball is to be seen everywhere and its quality is rather ordinary; it does not clear readily. Snapdragons are in splendid demand, especially the Silver Pink, which everybody seems to want. Peonies are scarcer after the abundant offerings that have been featured. There still are more roses than needed, but the quality is better and the demand is larger. The cut of Easter lilies was not so plentiful last week, as the best plants were being held in reserve. Some yellow callas are appearing and a liberal offering is in sight for this week. There is much bedding stock and the demand is larger than the normal. Pansy plants in bloom are popular for basket work. Some wild lupines are offered and sell fairly well. There is plenty of asparagus and adiantum.

Various Notes.

The local trade is much gratified over the arrest and conviction of Arthur Wright, who during the last few weeks succeeded in passing worthless checks on a number of florists in San Francisco, Oakland, Berkeley, Alameda, Sausalito, Vallejo and Stockton. He was arrested in Richmond a few days ago, while attempting to work his game on Adolph Winters, a florist of that city. Mr. Winters operates a talking machine business in conjunction with his flower store and had cashed a bad check in that department only a day or two before, so he was on the alert when the would-be purchaser offered him a check for $20.50. He had considerable difficulty in keeping the man in the store while he went back and telephoned to the police, but he succeeded. It was learned that the check artist was wanted in Stockton, so he was taken to that city, and, pleading guilty to a charge of forgery, was sentenced to serve eighteen months in San Quentin. His plan was to visit a florist, with a copious display of tears, and order a floral piece sent to some family, whose name he had seen in the death notices of the newspapers. Incidentally he would discover that he was short of change and would ask the florist to cash a rather large check. Mr. Winters expects to receive a $25 reward offered by a bankers' association for Wright's apprehension.

The MacRorie-McLaren Co. has been offering a few yellow calla lilies at its retail establishment on Powell street and expects to have a fine lot of potted plants for Easter. The improvements in the store have been completed and arrangements were made last week for a formal opening.

The San Francisco exhibition of the American Sweet Pea Society will be held June 9 and 10, in the Palace hotel. Announcements are being sent out to the sweet pea growers to this effect by F. C. Cuthbertson, who is looking after the preparations for the event. A long list of cash prizes and medals is offered.

A committee, consisting of Messrs. Pelicano, Baggs and Axell, appointed at the last meeting of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society to secure a $25 cup for the Marin county flower show in May, has purchased the trophy and it is now on display at the Burns store at San Raphael.

A. J. Rossi, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., has returned from the east.

A. O. Stein last week carried out an elaborate decoration for the formal opening of the new Concordia Club. Quantities of wistarias and rambler roses were used. In the gymnasium and card rooms he arranged false ceilings of bamboo, and these were covered with wistaria, purple being used in the gymnasium and white in the card room. The ballroom was garlanded with yellow and white roses.

A new nursery company, known as the Smith-Lachenmyer Co., has been incorporated at Orland, Cal., with a capital stock of $10,000, the principal holder being J. H. Smith, of the Murdock Acreage. The company will make a specialty of fruit and shade trees especially adapted to the Sacramento valley.

Plans are under way for decorating the streets of Sacramento, Cal., with growing plants and garlands of flowers during the spring festival and causeway celebration in May.

Louis Motroni looks for a quiet summer as compared with last year, principally because the people stayed home for the exposition last year, whereas they probably will go to the country as usual this summer.

At the Art Floral Shop, on Powell street, Mr. Matria reports a big demand for fancy basket arrangements.

S. H. G.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Business last week was brisk in all lines. No special events are reported, but there was a steady run, which indicated improved conditions. Carnations were somewhat scarce, as some of the largest growers are having only a light cut. Heavy cuts of roses are coming from several ranges and are all disposed of at good prices. Ophelia, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Mrs. Chas. Russell, Richmond, Killarney, Chatenay, Cecile Brunner and Hoosier Beauty are the leading varieties. Some splendid sweet peas are being cut and their quality is such as to sell them readily. Forced gladioli have made their appearance. Outdoor daffodils are still offered.

Asparagus is more plentiful, but there is not a full supply. The cut of orchids has diminished and the flowers are not so good as they were a few weeks ago. Cattleya labiata is the producing variety. Silver Pink and Nelrose snapdragons of good quality are seen. Home-grown violets are offered, but their quality shows that the season is about over. Gladstone spiræas, potted Easter lilies and potted roses are appearing as Easter stock. Potted rhododendrons and azaleas in full bloom are seen in some of the window displays.

Various Notes.

A. L. Peterson, of the force at J. J. Butzer's seed store, is the proud father of a son, the first addition to his family.

Gene Robinson grew some of the best snapdragon now on the market.

James Forbes returned April 12 from his trip to the National Flower Show.

Max Smith exhibited some first-class Gladstone spiræas which were grown at his range.

The Martin & Forbes Co. is using sprays of Japanese cherry in its window displays and bouquets. The blossoms are exceedingly attractive.

Leo Wiedemann, the Rahn & Herbert Co. and the Martin & Forbes Co. are having a good cut of Cecile Brunner roses.

The Tonseth Floral Co. showed some large genistas and azaleas in full bloom.

J. J. Butzer has bought a residence at 149 Bancroft avenue and is having the house and grounds put in order. He says the location is quite sightly and he anticipates much enjoyment from the view he will have of the snow-covered peaks in the Cascade range.

Frank Chervenka, foreman at Clarke Bros.' greenhouses, in Hillsboro, says he expects a good output this season. Roses are the principal crop inside and considerable space outside is occupied by nursery stock. Forced gladioli are being cut.

A. Byron furnishes some of the best sweet peas on the market, from his place near Oregon City.

R. C. Cook says business is not nearly so bad as it might be.

Niklas & Son have their Belmont street houses full of excellent bedding stock in great variety. They look for a good spring business.

The Portland Floral Society was represented April 13 at a meeting called by the city commissioners and Chamber of Commerce, and attended by delegates from all the civic bodies, for the purpose of promoting a clean-up and paint-up campaign which will be carried out in May. The florists take an interest in any move toward city beau-

The Market.

There was fully the usual business prior to Easter during the week of April 10 and there was not too much stock of any of the cut flowers. Roses were fairly plentiful, of good quality and selling well. Carnations were of better quality, there being fewer splits, and the demand for them was good. There was a fair quantity of valley and it was moving well. Outside daffodils sold cheaply, but the better varieties commanded fair prices. Spiræas sold as fast as they arrived. Azaleas were almost all gone. The sale of geraniums and other bedders has begun, as usual, prematurely, but some people are impatient to have their flower lots filled as early as possible. There are more of the polyantha roses in the market than usual and small plants are selling well, some of the newer varieties being especially good sellers.

Various Notes.

H. M. Lindley, formerly of Los Angeles, has bought out the stock of the Seattle Nursery & Landscape Co. and will move it to new premises at 5517 Fifth avenue, northwest, where the soil is better adapted to growing nursery stock.

A visit to the range of the Thomas Floral Co. is well worth while. There has been an addition of glass and now it is one of the most up-to-date places in this neighborhood. As usual during the pre-Easter period, lilies were of considerable importance and the stock at the Thomas place certainly appeared to be excellent and on time for the Easter business. There was a large number of rambler and other roses in pots, but they did not appear to have been so well timed. There were fine plants of Easter Greeting pelargoniums, which added variety to the display at the store. The benched roses were looking fine; especially noteworthy were the Hadleys and Ophelias. Geo. Elger is grown in considerable quantity for cutting, but it does not appear to be so free as Cecile Brunner. There are slathers of bedding plants, geraniums and calceolarias. Almost everything in the way of commercial plants and flowers is handled wholesale at this place, and if variety is the spice of life this surely is a spicy spot.

Mrs. L. W. McCoy's greenhouses at South Park contain the usual stock of plants. Especially notable were the fine hydrangeas. Some of the French varieties are grown.

The Seattle Floral Co. had apparently the largest supply of lilies in the district. George Antenen was confident of having them all in time, but it looked as if he, with many others of his craft, had been saving coal in anticipation of plenty sunshine before Easter. Somehow this has been lacking, and there will be lilies in the benches after Easter. The other stock at this establishment was in its usual thriving condition and preparations were being made for a large bedding plant sale.

The Queen City Floral Co. has a fine showing of bulbous stock, particularly hyacinths, of which finer specimens could not be had. There were lilies here, and lots of them, and there will be for some time. Mrs. Holze was suffering from the effects of bulb poison, a complaint that annually affects her fingers to a serious extent. T. W.

Santa Cruz, Cal.—Mrs. F. C. Abraham, who specializes in Asparagus plumosus, but who grows a few flowers, says she is going to study designing and decoration this summer and increase her plantings as she becomes more experienced.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

President, E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Vice-president, John Watson, Newark, N. J.; Secretary, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.

Forty-first annual meeting, Milwaukee, Wis., June 28 to 30, 1916.

OTTO KUEHNEL has resigned his position as manager of the Fruitvale Nursery at Montague, Mich., and moved to Hart, Mich.

THE Northern Nurseries, of St. Paul, Minn., have been incorporated by C. A. Bazille, A. Sjoholm and E. W. Bazille, the capital stock being $50,000.

THE difficulty which has attended the importation of European nursery stock promises to be greater than ever next season. How long will it be before the trade in America can get along without heavy imports each season?

THE nursery trade is working under high pressure, to get as much work done as possible before the arrival of summer. The trade is apprehensive; work started later than usual in most sections and a few warm days will bring the season to a sudden close.

PLACER ground rich enough in gold to cause a stampede in any man's country was taken from the foundation for a warehouse for the State Nursery Co., at Helena, Mont. Unfortunately, the builders who contracted for the excavation reap the profits.

THAT a wide campaign of publicity and education for better gardens be undertaken by nurserymen through their associations is the suggestion of Mrs. H. G. Mitchell, of the Mitchell Nursery Co., Tacoma, Wash. Mrs. Mitchell hopes to have the matter taken up at a nurserymen's meeting to be held in Medford, Ore., in June. John Watson, of Newark, N. J., is the author of an article treating the matter from the standpoint of how to increase the demand for nursery stock. Mrs. Mitchell would use Mr. Watson's article as a foundation for the advertising campaign.

IMPORTS OF NURSERY STOCK.

The following are the official records of the imports of nursery stock for the last three years for which figures are available:

Year ending June 30	Value
1913	$1,339,913
1914	1,514,669

NURSERY STOCK EXPORTS.

The exports of nursery stock from the United States, never large, have shown a decided falling off during the last three years for which official figures are available, as follows:

Year ending June 30	Value
1913	$ 459,769
1914	315,065

SHRUBS FOR NORTH EXPOSURE.

Will you please give me a list of shrubs that will do well on the north side of a house? What variety of hydrangea is most desirable for a shady place? C. M.—Mich.

Among evergreens, rhododendrons, Kalmia latifolia and Euonymus radicans would be suitable. The following deciduous shrubs would do tolerably well: Spiræa arguta, Clethra alnifolia, Viburnum acerifolium, Philadelphus inodorus, Berberis Thunbergii, Ligustrum Ibota Regelianum, Viburnum pubescens, Cornus alba and Cornus stolonifera. None of the hydrangeas will do so well in shade as in the open. H. arborescens grandiflora will endure shade better than H. paniculata.

The Market.

The calm before the storm, the pre-Easter lull in business, was in evidence in the early part of last week, but fair weather on Saturday caused the street boys to buy heavily and the wholesale stores cleaned out a lot of what would otherwise have been surplus stock. carnations. These have increased slightly in price, but the prices of other stock in general were low. The light demand for roses, with an increased supply, caused the price to drop to a low figure and Beauties were hard to move at any price. Sweet peas are fairly plentiful and good stock is moving tolerably well, but shorts are cheap. Violets are deteriorating in quality, and in price as well, while valley is moving rather slowly. Southern daffodils are about over, but Narcissus poeticus and short trumpet jonquils will soon be seen. The green situation remains about the same; both smilax and plumosus are hard to secure.

over this city April 14 did only slight damage to local florists, though the wind at times reached a speed of fifty miles per hour. A large plate glass window, 9x15 feet, in the Seidewitz Flower Shop front, was blown out, but no one was injured. The glass was valued at $200. R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co. lost about 150 lights of glass and some other growers lost a few panes, but no serious damage of this sort has been reported.

Lehr Bros. have had a heavy crop of roses and have a good cut for Easter.

Robert Halliday recently was elected president of the Helendale Athletic Club and manager of the club baseball team for the coming season.

James Glass has a fine lot of rhododendrons, lilies and spiræas, which should sell well.

R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co. has had an exceedingly busy season and the packing room is in active use. A large number of orders are booked for after-Easter shipment.

The next club meeting will be held April 24.

Erdman & Ulrich held their annual spring exhibition April 16. Their stock in general is in fine shape. A house of Chatelaine begonias in full bloom was a splendid sight. The packing shed was filled with lilies, spiræas, azaleas, hydrangeas and rhododendrons, all artistically arranged. A large number of rustic bark boxes, filled with primroses, begonias and miscellaneous plants and scattered around the greenhouses, helped to relieve the monotony of houses of green plants. The arrangement of the stock and its quality reflected great credit on the firm and its staff. The rhododendrons are among the finest seen around the city.

Samuel Feast & Sons have a fine lot of azaleas, among which a new blush pink shows up well. A number of specimen plants of Dendrobium nobile in flower are attractive. Their hydrangeas and lilies are also in good shape.

A number of florists have carried on an extensive advertising campaign for Easter. The effect of this cannot be told at present, but its outcome is being awaited with great interest.

James Hamilton opened his greenhouses to the public, April 16, to show his varied line of Easter stock. The day was bright and the houses were viewed by thousands. Hydrangeas, rhododendrons, azaleas and lilies formed the bulk of the stock and all were in good shape. W. F. E.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Business last week was only fair. The supply of stock was large, but the sales could not take care of all the receipts. Shipping business, particularly in supplies and greens, was good. The early part of this week indications were that we would have a good and large supply of stock for Easter.

Roses are plentiful and generally are of good quality. Carnation receipts, too, are heavy. The Easter lily supply is large and should be sufficient to take care of every demand. Sweet peas are plentiful. Jonquils, daffodils and poeticus narcissi are in good supply. Receipts of tulips and Dutch hyacinths

Belle Washburn THE BEST RED CARNATION

RESULTS ARE WHAT COUNT!

WINNER of the Silver Medal of the American Carnation Society, at Buffalo, 1915; also WINNER of the SAME MEDAL in the same class at ST. LOUIS, 1916; also of Silver Medal of S. A. F. and O. H., at St. Louis, 1916. The color is a most brilliant red. The size of the flower is 3½ inches. Stems 24 to 36 inches long, strong and stiff. We have never had a burst calyx, all flowers grading firsts; and, best of all, it is a constant bloomer, giving a steady run of flowers equal in number to the Enchantress family.

Price of 2-inch plants is $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000. We will bill 500 at the 1000 rate price.

NEWARK, N. J.

The Market.

While business continued good last week, it was a little quiet. Flowers were plentiful, generally of good quality and moderate in price. Carnations and sweet peas also were abundant and cheap. Roses, especially the long-stemmed varieties, are coming in more freely and are more reasonable in price than for several weeks. Valley is of good quality, fairly abundant and has recovered from the slump in price that existed the previous two weeks; the price now is about normal for this time of the year. There was a large influx of pansy plants in baskets last week, about the first that have been seen in quantity for outside planting. Violets are plentiful, but not as a rule of good quality, being soft and not keeping long. Spring flowers of all kinds last week were arriving in large quantities. Spiræa is more abundant and of first-class grade.

Various Notes.

Charles Witheridge reports that with the springlike weather has come a big demand for flower and vegetable seeds.

Peter Penek states that, while business fell off somewhat during the last two or three weeks, trade is fair for this time of the year.

Henry A. Strobell last week said he expected a good Easter trade.

Fred P. Wolfinger has had such a lively trade that he can hardly believe it is Lent. He thinks Newark's anniversary celebration, which will begin within a few weeks, will help business. He is on the main street where the crowds will gather.

Henry Leahy, of Elizabeth, had a unique half-page newspaper advertisement last week. In large letters at the top of the advertisement were these words: "We are mobilizing for a Grand Easter Flower Sale." On the extreme left and the extreme right were pictures of pots of Easter lilies. In the center was a photograph of the store window, in front of which was a long sign: "Leahy, Telegraph Florist of Elizabeth, N. J." To the right of this were cut flower suggestions and to the left plant suggestions. The whole made a neat and unusually drawing advertisement.

The April meeting of the Essex County Florists' Club will be held this week. Plans for the next flower show will be discussed. R. B. M.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Business was exceptionally good for the week ending with Palm Sunday. The weather was fine and the stock was in excellent shape. Roses were plentiful and this kept prices below normal. Carnations, however, were not in sufficient quantity to meet the demand and prices showed a nice increase over those of the week previous. This stock is in fine shape, but few growers are on crop and the supply will be limited for Easter. Prices probably will hold firm at $5, and from the orders booked it can be seen that the late orders are going to run short. There is a fine rose stock on the market, but carnations seem to have the preference and the roses are not moving as well as they should. The large quantity makes it a buyers' market and, with the exception of fancy stock, good bargains are easily obtainable.

Violets and sweet peas will be in good shape for Easter. The stock seems plentiful enough to supply the demand, which is large, considering the lateness of the occasion. Single violets are out of the market and all orders for them are filled with good double stock. Violet prices are not so good, but sweet peas are holding up well. Bulbous stock will be obtainable for the Easter trade and it still is in fairly good condition. It will not last much after Easter, but the supply is really remarkable, considering the lateness of the season.

Plant sales are enormous. The stock is extra fine this year and almost all of it sells itself when it is personally inspected. If reports are authentic, this is going to be an Easter business that will set a new standard for the trade and make them go some next year to keep up to it.

Various Notes.

The Milwaukee Florists' Club at a recent meeting appointed a committee to take up the matter of united advertising. The committee is going into the matter thoroughly and has high hopes of bringing its work to a successful conclusion in the near future. Past experience has proved conclusively that this sort of advertising pays, and if the general trade will only subscribe sufficiently to the fund there is no question but that the output can be increased to a great extent.

Of course there were a large number of visitors last week looking over stock for Easter and transacting other business, and it is impossible to keep track of all of them. Following is a partial list of those who were visitors last week: Mrs. L. M. Birge, of Whitewater, Wis.; J. Sylvester, of Oconomowoc, Wis.; J. E. Matthewson, of Sheboygan, Wis.; August Wegner, of Oconomowoc, Wis.; Mr. and Mrs. Miller, of Racine, Wis.; E. Winterson, of Chicago; P. L. McKee, of Chicago.

The Market.

Flowers are plentiful and business is good, although there are more than enough flowers to go around. The outlook for Easter is excellent. There will be plenty of cut flowers and, perhaps, plants. Easter lilies and bulbous stock will be short; some have been able to hold back the bulbous flowers. Everybody is looking for a big business.

Various Notes.

Karl Zeidler has a splendid stock of plants for Easter sales. He is finishing the erection of three new houses, each 25x100 feet, to be used for roses and carnations.

Julius Niednagel & Sons are doing a good business and their roses and carnations are producing heavily. The bulbous stock is about gone. Easter Greetings are fine, as well as a lot of schizanthus in large pots.

The Blackman Floral Co. will have a large stock of plants for Easter. The lilies here are grand and there are many of them. Held-back bulbous stock will be in good time for Easter. George Blackman was a visitor at the State Florists' Association's monthly meeting at Terre Haute last week. Miss Lulu Nexal, of the store force, is back at work after an illness of more than three months.

Royston & Fenton have a good batch of Easter Greetings for the retail trade. They are preparing for a big sale of coleus cuttings after Easter.

Theodore Kuebler reports a heavy demand for chrysanthemum cuttings. He was a visitor to Terre Haute last week to attend the florists' meeting. The Evansville Florists' Club meeting was held April 12, at Miss Nellie Goodge's greenhouses, where all present enjoyed themselves immensely. The lunch served was the best ever. There was a general discussion on bedding plants. The next meeting will be at Theodore Kuebler's Santa Rosa fruit farm, June 7. No meeting will be held in May, as all will be too busy to attend. E. Stuttgart, Ark.—Frequently items appear in The Review showing the florists' business to be run in combination with many other lines of trade, but probably the only man who runs a greenhouse in connection with a factory for axe handles is H. E. Rhodes, who now is proprietor of the National Handle Co., established in 1888.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

IS GREENHOUSE A FACTORY?

Our greenhouses are situated in one of the largest gas fields in the country. We are compelled to pay the regular consumers' rate for the natural gas consumed in our greenhouses, the monthly bill amounting to more than $50. There is a manufacturers' rate that would cost us one-fifth of this amount, but the gas company and its attorneys contend that a greenhouse range does not come under the head of manufacturing plants and that therefore we are not entitled to the manufacturers' rate. What we are driving at is this: Can not you or one of your readers refer us to a decision of a state or supreme court in which a greenhouse was held to be a manufacturing plant? With such a weapon we may be able to bring the gas company to terms.

M. F. C.—La.

It seems to The Review the way to get action is for you to inform the gas company that unless you get the rate you want you will heat with some other fuel. If there is a profit to the gas company in the rate you demand, you will get it; otherwise the company will continue to refuse, and you cannot expect it to sell at a loss to you just because it may do so in some other case. In this case, of course, a court decision in which a greenhouse was found to be a manufactory would be an excellent argument for you. Any information from readers in this regard would be appreciated.

FAVORS OIL AS FUEL.

In The Review for March 2 there appeared a letter by William Mosteller concerning the use of fuel oil in greenhouse heating, in which Mr. Mosteller advised the inquirer as follows:

"You cannot burn fuel oil under a not water boiler unless you have a small steam boiler, fired with wood or coal, to carry a pressure of twenty pounds or more. This you would connect to the oil burner to operate it, but even at that your fire would be much too hot. There are some burners on the market designed for burning distillate, both with and without air pressure, that are, to a certain extent, satisfactory, but distillate is too expensive in most cases to use for fuel.

WHICH DO YOU WANT?

"I would advise you to let oil alone unless you have 8,000 or 10,000 feet of glass, and install a horizontal return-flue high-pressure steam boiler. Fuel oil cannot be burned successfully with less than twenty pounds pressure. You would be obliged to make your own burner, as there is none on the market that would operate with so small a flow of oil as is needed in this case. Fifty gallons of oil, properly handled, will easily keep 5,000 feet of glass hot in zero weather for twenty-four hours."

Now, I would like to give the circumstances under which we successfully and economically use crude oil as fuel. We burn the oil under a No. 646 Lord & Burnham hot water boiler, and it certainly works perfectly. We use an electric motor in connection with a positive pressure blower and oil pump, maintaining a pressure of about thirty-two pounds on the air blower. We find that one barrel of oil will heat 6,000 square feet of glass during zero weather for fifty hours. The boilers are for hot water heating and we experience no difficulty in maintaining a steady temperature at all times. The burner will burn until it is shut down, and we can regulate the fire and, therefore, the temperature at will. We think, therefore, that Mr. Mosteller is wrong in some of his statements.

During the winter of 1914-1915 we used coal and coke as fuel, but last

The Market.

Business during Lent this year far exceeded that of any previous Lenten season. A part of the increase is due to funeral work and hospital trade. The market is well supplied with cut stock, with the exception of carnations, which fell off considerably in quantity. This may have been due to the fact that growers were holding back the cut for Easter. Roses in all colors are plentiful. Beauties are more plentiful now than at any time since the first of the year. Bulbous stock is arriving in large quantities. There should be a large quantity of pot plants available for Easter, lilies, roses and hydrangeas leading.

Various Notes.

The inauguration of the mayor April 10 created a demand for floral pieces that kept practically every retailer in the city busy. There were a number of extra large floral baskets ordered. Beauties were used to a great extent.

The Peterson Floral Co. had the decoration of the city hall for the inauguration of the mayor. Palms, ferns and smilax were used.

Henry Kusik & Co. received 8,000 yellow jonquils last week and found a ready sale for them. W. J. B.

USINGER'S UTTERANCES.

The Fleming Greenhouses, of Fairmont, W. Va., report business as increasing. A house of fine carnations was noticed.

It is rumored that W. R. Barton and William Steele, of Uniontown, Pa., will again join hands in an up-to-date flower store.

Hagan Bros., of Uniontown, had to replace all steam pipes laid underground, as the pipes were quickly rotting. This handicapped outdoor work, as all hands were needed to lay the pipes.

Stenson & McGrail, of Uniontown, had a nice display of spring plants. Some fine specimen tulips, hyacinths and other blooming plants were attractively staged.

Joseph Haube, of Charleroi, Pa., still wears the smile that won't come off. He finds this one of his greatest assets in business. The seed business is rapidly growing and funeral work has everybody on the jump.

John Paul, of Cumberland, Md., had a store display of hydrangeas, tulips, azaleas and numerous other Easter plants.

R. C. Paupe, of Cumberland, had a good showing of spiræas, hydrangeas and other seasonable stock.

John Dieckmann, of Elm Grove, W. Va., has his usual fine line of Easter stock coming along in good shape. Several benches of hydrangeas and rose plants will be in good shape for Easter, besides some white lilac. A house of giganteum lilies was noted.

The Virginia Flower Shop, of Wheeling, W. Va., is the center of a seed rush. Clever advertising has created a demand for the stock.

Albert Kehrer & Sons, of Martins Ferry, O., has a fine lot of hyacinths and tulips that look well for the Easter trade.

Charles O'Beirne, of Martins Ferry, is rapidly developing a high-class florists' trade. Nothing but the best is handled either in plants or cut flowers. Business has been good all the season and a big trade is looked for at Easter.

Albert Lash, of Wheeling, will open a store Easter week near the Auditorium market. His greenhouses are in excellent condition and some fine plants were noted.

Some excellent stock was seen on a visit to the greenhouses of Frank Seibert, of Wheeling. The hydrangeas and cinerarias were particularly fine.

Arthur Langhans, of Wheeling, had a good showing of novelties. One window was devoted to garden accessories, hand-painted flower pots, bird houses and other novelties. The other window was given to plants and cut flowers.

The H. Weber & Sons Co. store at Clarksburg, W. Va., is having a big demand for "seeds that grow." Some good spring stock was noted.

Moore Reynolds, of the J. W. Dudley Sons Co., at Clarksburg, had a pretty window of azaleas and rose plants last week. Business is rapidly improving here and a good Easter trade is looked for. W. T. U.

GLEN COVE, N. Y.

The regular meeting of the Nassau County Horticutural Society was held in Pembroke hall, April 12, at 7 o'clock. The summer and autumn monthly meetings will be held at this hour, instead of in the afternoon, as has been the custom during the winter months. In the absence of President MacDonald, Vice-president Joseph Adler presided. A letter was received from Harry Jones, who has been secretary of the society for the last year and a half, stating that, as he had moved to a point some distance from Glen Cove, he felt it advisable to resign his office. Mr. Jones has been a hard worker and efficient official, and it was with sincere regret that his resignation was accepted. Henry Gibson, of Roslyn Heights, was elected secretary for the remainder of the year.

A letter was received from the International Garden Club, requesting the coöperation of the society in the open-air flower show to be given by the Garden Club in June. Offers of two prizes were received for our coming rose show, one for twelve peonies and the other for vegetables. An essay on "Estate Management and College Education," by M. Smith, of New York, was received from the National Association of Gardeners. It was well received and a lively discussion followed. Samuel Trepass read a most interesting paper on "Peaches Under Glass." He went into his subject in a thorough manner and gave much practical information. At the conclusion of the essay, Mr. Trepass answered a number of questions pertaining to fruit growing. He exhibited a specimen of a grafted peach tree and some samples of fruiting and non-fruiting wood of the peach.

Schedules for the tulip show and the rose show, which had been drawn by the executive committee, were read and adopted. It was decided to hold the tulip show during the week of May 14, the exact date to be announced later, and to hold the rose show June 14. Henry Gaut, George Gilder and Thomas Twigg were appointed judges of the evening's exhibits and made the following awards: Lettuce, Harry Goodband, first; twelve roses, John Everitt, first; twelve sweet peas, James McCarthy, first; Spencer sweet peas, exhibited by Peter McLeod, certificate of culture; violets, exhibited by William Noonan, honorable mention.

James McCarthy, Cor. Sec'y.

Louisville, Ky.—William Walker won the first award, a silver cup, in the recent window dressing contest given by the Advertising Club of Louisville.

The Market.

Weather conditions last week were exceedingly erratic, a mixture of summer and winter. The cool weather, however, was ideal for holding back bulbous stock. The warm days brought the early shrubs into bloom. Forsythia and the magnolia shrubs have been blooming for several days.

Business was good last week. The demand varied. Funeral work has been plentiful and decorations numerous despite the Lenten season. Stock, on the whole, was quite plentiful. Roses are in better supply and lilies are arriving in large quantities. Pansies are on the market in large numbers and Spanish irises are a welcome addition to the present variety of cut flowers and sell well for corsages and table decorations. Sweet peas are plentiful, but home-grown single violets are scarce.

Handsome specimens of azaleas, rhododendrons, lilacs, crimson ramblers and Easter lilies and a variety of bulbous stock of splendid quality are in hand for Easter sales. The retailer is busy decorating his window in Easter attire and daily newspaper advertising is helping the good work along. Greens are in good condition, with the exception of Sprengeri, which is of poor quality.

Various Notes.

The A. J. Lanternier & Sons Calhoun street store is making a fine showing of Easter plants. The newly decorated interior affords a splendid background for the magnificent blooms.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey are sending good cattleyas to the local retail market, as well as shipping them in large numbers. Will J. Vesey has returned from southern Indiana, where he attended the State Florists' Association meeting at Terre Haute.

The Flick Floral Co. has had several large decorations during the last week. The Saturday special sales continue to bring good returns. R. F.

Columbia, Mo.—Florists of the state have been invited to coöperate with the students of the College of Agriculture in a flower show to be held during the annual fair, May 5.

The Market.

Everyone last week looked forward to a tremendous Easter trade. The market is well supplied with bulbous stock, especially tulips and hyacinths, daffodils not being so plentiful and many of them far advanced. There is, however, a decided shortage in medium and low-priced azaleas. Roses and spiræas are about equal to the demand. Rhododendrons are scarce.

Various Notes.

Beard Bros. put into commission this week a large auto truck. The body, which is of ample proportions, was specially built. This firm has made a practice for several years of inviting the public to visit its large greenhouse establishment on Palm Sunday, and this year more than 2,000 people took advantage of the invitation. Many Easter orders were booked, but Mr. Beard's main idea is just to show the public the heavy work connected with growing flowers and plants.

Charles H. Plumb was completely sold out Monday, April 17.

Herman Pautke, for a number of years foreman at J. Breitmeyer's Sons' Mack avenue range, opened a retail store at 1227 Kerchavel avenue last week.

The electric battery of J. B. Dinser's delivery car became exhausted last Saturday, compelling his son to make his way through Highland Park without lights. When our lights are turned off our electric bills usually stop, but in this case it cost Mr. Dinser a $25 fine.

The writer has been criticised by the local tradesmen for the lack of Detroit news in The Review. I have pleaded guilty and repented, and in order that I may do better I trust every member of the trade in Detroit will make it his business to keep me better posted on any of his contemplated moves, or events of general interest. H. S.

Chilton, Wis.—After having spent fifteen years on the road, calling on the florists' trade, W. G. Schmidt settled here and has established a nice business. In addition to cut flowers and plants he makes a side line of ice cream in season and many who come for one buy both.

"Gladiolus Bulbs Irrigated by the Skinner System averaged three times the bulk of those grown under the old method of irrigation, and five times the bulk of those grown without irrigation. PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

The week ushered in by Palm Sunday found all the florists prepared for a record Easter trade. All that remained necessary was favorable weather conditions, as the reports from all sides indicated a plentiful supply of practically everything, with a correspondingly good demand. Nearly all of the retailers reported unusually early bookings and the growers were prepared to fill orders at notice. Several concerns had extra stands downtown.

The local market, from all appearances at this writing, will be short on violets, which should be largely replaced by arbutus, sweet peas and pansies, while gardenias and orchids should furnish the exclusive class. Roses and lilies should be at a premium and carnations fair to good. There should be loads of bulbous stock, however, in pots, pans and cut blooms, to fill all shortages that occur. Prices all along the line rule about fifty per cent above normal.

Various Notes.

Charles S. Macnair was one of the guests at a banquet April 12 that signalized the conclusion of the Providence Central Club's bowling season.

Charles Smith was in Boston last week on business.

Mr. and Mrs. William E. Wright, of East Providence, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary April 12.

Willis S. Pino has been enlarging his store at the corner of Washington and Eddy streets.

Olney H. Williams and John Burke have opened their new wholesale department in a building at 39 Clemence street, which they have leased for fifteen months.

James A. Budlong II has registered a 31-horsepower limousine.

George E. Kelly is sending in hundreds of genista plants, which are much in demand.

THE "KING" OF THE PHILADELPHIA SHOW

KING
GREENHOUSES

Have a special type of construction, which permits of great strength without the need of heavy, shadow-casting supports. This gives the plants all the sunlight all day long. Note the amount of light and shadow in the upper picture. In addition to its great strength, the King type of construction lends itself to the graceful, sweeping lines which harmonize with any style of architecture. That is why a practical, productive King house is in itself a thing of beauty.

¶ We can build you any kind of a greenhouse you desire. When you send for Bulletin No. 47 why not describe that house you have always wanted—that ideal greenhouse of your dreams? Our experts will gladly and without any obligation work your ideas into a practical sketch. Since the days of fairy tales a King has been able to make dreams come true.

TRI-CITIES.

The Market.

Roses are in heavy supply and sufficient to meet all demands. Carnations are rather on the short side and the daily cut is easily disposed of. Tulips and daffodils are in fair supply, but moving slowly. Sweet peas are plentiful and selling well. Violets are out of the market. Easter lilies last week were in good demand and the indications were for a large supply at Easter. Pansies and hardy plants are selling more freely.

Club Meeting.

The Tri-City Florists' Club met at the residence of William Knees, Moline, April 13, the meeting being called to order by Harry Bills. Emil Kranz, of Muscatine, was elected to membership and the officers elected at the previous meeting were duly installed. The incoming president, Ludwig Stapp, then took the chair.

The report of the committee of the recent Illinois state florists' meeting showed a good balance for the club, after all bills had been paid. C. O. E. Boehm started the discussion of the evening by recommending Schizanthus Wisetonensis as a good plant, both for cut flowers and potted stock. The auditing committee reviewed the books and reported them correct, with a handsome balance in the treasury.

It was decided to hold no meeting during the month of May, as there usually is a light attendance and everybody is busy with bedding plants. After extending a vote of thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Knees the meeting adjourned. W. G.

WHEN TO START CINERARIAS.

When should cineraria seed be sown in order to have plants in bloom at Christmas and Easter?

H. A. M.—Minn.

For Christmas-flowering cinerarias sow the seed about the end of June. For Easter-blooming, mid-August is sufficiently early. For a late Easter, such as we have this year, it is hard to keep back the large-flowered section, but if you grow a batch of C. stellata or the variety Reading Star, both of which carry small flowers but are decorative, you can have cinerarias as late as the middle of May, providing, of course, that you give them a really cool and well ventilated house.

CUTWORMS ON PLUMOSUS.

I have a fine lot of Asparagus plumosus, but cutworms seem to be eating it. I have tried moistened bran and Paris green, with indifferent results. I have sprayed the beds under and above the foliage with a solution of Paris green, but it does not check the cutworms at all. They have been hand-picked at night, but still they come fast and thick. The first night we picked about 300 in an hour. They can be seen plainly eating growing eyes on the stalks of which the tops have been cut. Some of the worms even climb to the tops of the big sprays. They are gray in color, with dark, almost black, streaks crosswise on the back. If these are not cutworms, what are they, and how can they be killed?

F. C.—Pa.

Cutworms are as hard to fight under glass as outdoors. Even hydrocyanic acid gas seems to have little effect on them. Poisoned bait, if persisted in, will gradually clear them out. Give them some poisoned lettuce or cabbage leaves, as well as the mash. Have you tried carbon bisulphide in the soil? This destroys the destructive larvæ of the June bug or May beetle, and there is no reason why it should not prove equally effective against cutworms. This carbon in small lots costs about 25 cents per pound can, but is less expensive in larger quantities. Bore holes in the soil twelve to fifteen inches apart each way with a pointed stick; then pour half a teaspoonful of carbon into each hole and immediately cover it to keep in the gaseous fumes. Cover all your bed in this way, doing the work in the daytime while the pests are lurking in the soil, and few should escape. The carbon is most effective when the soil is damp. As it is explosive, be sure not to use any naked lights near it.

Half Iron Frame Talk No. 4
Column Fittings

YOU have heard about a lot of the growers who have had to wire their columns to the purlins, because when a hard wind blows, the fitting slips. Sometimes they have even been lifted right off the column.

You never heard of a thing like that happening with a Hitchings house, because in all our houses the column fitting is bolted through-and-through the column. It can't slip off.

The only way the roof can budge an inch, is by lifting up the concrete, ground and all, in which the columns are bedded. For over thirty years we have been bolting our column fittings through-and-through.

Yes, you are right; there are a lot of things about our Half Iron Frame Construction that are exactly like our Full Iron Frame. And then again, there are a lot of things that are different—way different. They are so different, in fact, that they make more than a mere difference in price. They make a difference in the durability of the house.

Next to our Full Iron Frame house, the Half Iron Frame is the best your money can buy. But why not have the best, instead of the next best?

Send for our Supply Book and carefully compare each construction.

You know we go anywhere for business. Or to talk business.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

SHALL MOTHERS' DAY ENDURE?

Mothers' day is unlike Easter. Memorial day or Christmas—it is not founded on a popular observance of long standing. Discontinue the Mothers' day publicity and the special demand for flowers will disappear fully as quickly as it was created. To keep it going the trade must keep on advertising—must!

NOW that Mothers' day has become one of the red letter days on the trade calendar, a lot of people are busy claiming credit for it, but let there be no misapprehension; the idea of Mothers' day was conceived outside the trade, it was first exploited by The Review, but it would have amounted to nothing if it had not been for the retail florists. The trade made Mothers' day—made it by advertising it.

Must Keep It Up.

While the trade quite well understands that the enormous sale of flowers at Mothers' day has been the direct result of publicity—first in The Review and then in daily papers—there are many who have not thought of their own duty in the matter. They have not yet realized that they owe it to themselves to put their shoulders to the wheel along with the shoulders of those who have thus far done the work.

And today there is danger that the trade may not realize the result of relaxed effort. It was advertising, nothing but advertising, that made Mothers' day. Nothing but advertising will keep it going.

Of course Mothers' day has back of it an appeal to sentiment that is sufficiently strong to make the date, the second Sunday in May, cling in the minds of a portion of the people, else the day never would have come to the front in the way it has, but the day is not based on such centuries-old customs as are associated with the observance of Christmas and Easter. Even Memorial day, a comparatively new flower day, has back of it a far longer popular observance.

Mothers' day dates back only to 1908. In that year it broke out sporadically at widely scattered points in the United States as the result of a letter written to a newspaper by Miss Jarvis, the lady to whom we are indebted for the idea. But it was not until 1909 that any considerable number, either of the trade or public, heard of Mothers' day. In April of that year The Review told the trade that here was a chance to make another special flower day—a day coming just when needed, between Easter and Memorial day, when flowers are plentiful and cheap, when the trade is most in need of support. In that article all florists were urged to advertise Mothers' day, to give the day a boost in every possible way.

Distance is No Barrier.

It Paid to Push.

While Mothers' day obtained a good start in 1909, as the result of hundreds of florists acting on the suggestions made by The Review, it was not until 1910 that real action was obtained. In that year thousands of florists pushed Mothers' day where only hundreds had done so the year before—the success that had attended the initial effort bore fruit. From that time on Mothers' day has grown like the proverbial green bay tree, until it now is one of the big days for the trade. It has grown almost without other assistance than the advertising done by retail florists.

This much must be remembered, however: A whole year elapses from one Mothers' day to another. People forget. Everybody knows of the cumulative effect of advertising. The more Mothers' day is advertised the wider the observance becomes; the greater the effect each year. But once let the advertising cease and Mothers' day quickly will be forgotten. It is not yet sufficiently well established so that the trade can afford to let the public go unreminded.

If we want Mothers' day to endure it must be advertised these many years. It must be brought to the attention of the people each year.

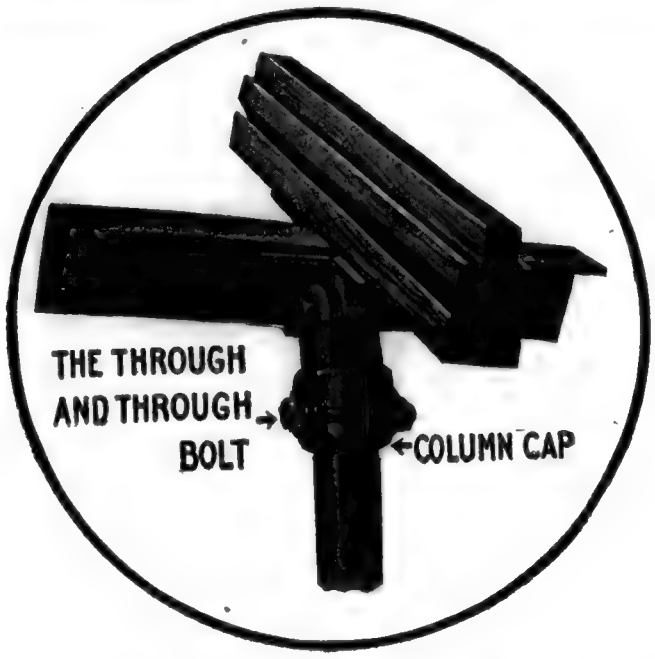
WHEN TO START CINERARIAS.

When should cineraria seed be sown in order to have plants in bloom at Christmas and Easter?

H. A. M.—Minn.

For Christmas-flowering cinerarias sow the seed about the end of June. For Easter-blooming, mid-August is sufficiently early. For a late Easter, such as we have this year, it is hard to keep back the large-flowered section, but if you grow a batch of C. stellata or the variety Reading Star, both of which carry small flowers but are decorative, you can have cinerarias as late as the middle of May, providing, of course, that you give them a really cool and well ventilated house.

CUTWORMS ON PLUMOSUS.



I have a fine lot of Asparagus plumosus, but cutworms seem to be eating it. I have tried moistened bran and Paris green, with indifferent results. I have sprayed the beds under and above the foliage with a solution of Paris green, but it does not check the cutworms at all. They have been hand-picked at night, but still they come fast and thick. The first night we picked about 300 in an hour. They can be seen plainly eating growing eyes on the stalks of which the tops have been cut. Some of the worms even climb to the tops of the big sprays. They are gray in color, with dark, almost black, streaks crosswise on the back. If these are not cutworms, what are they, and how can they be killed?

F. C.—Pa.

Cutworms are as hard to fight under glass as outdoors. Even hydrocyanic acid gas seems to have little effect on them. Poisoned bait, if persisted in, will gradually clear them out. Give them some poisoned lettuce or cabbage leaves, as well as the mash. Have you tried carbon bisulphide in the soil? This destroys the destructive larvæ of the June bug or May beetle, and there is no reason why it should not prove equally effective against cutworms. This carbon in small lots costs about 25 cents per pound can, but is less expensive in larger quantities. Bore holes in the soil twelve to fifteen inches apart each way with a pointed stick; then pour half a teaspoonful of carbon into each hole and immediately cover it to keep in the gaseous fumes. Cover all your bed in this way, doing the work in the daytime while the pests are lurking in the soil, and few should escape. The carbon is most effective when the soil is damp. As it is explosive, be sure not to use any naked lights near it.

Column Fittings

YOU have heard about a lot of the growers who have had to wire their columns to the purlins, because when a hard wind blows, the fitting slips. Sometimes they have even been lifted right off the column.

You never heard of a thing like that happening with a Hitchings house, because in all our houses the column fitting is bolted through-and-through the column. It can't slip off.

The only way the roof can budge an inch, is by lifting up the concrete, ground and all, in which the columns are bedded. For over thirty years we have been bolting our column fittings through-and-through.

Yes, you are right; there are a lot of things about our Half Iron Frame Construction that are exactly like our Full Iron Frame. And then again, there are a lot of things that are different—way different. They are so different, in fact, that they make more than a mere difference in price. They make a difference in the durability of the house.

Next to our Full Iron Frame house, the Half Iron Frame is the best your money can buy. But why not have the best, instead of the next best?

While the trade quite well understands that the enormous sale of flowers at Mothers' day has been the direct result of publicity—first in The Review and then in daily papers—there are many who have not thought of their own duty in the matter. They have not yet realized that they owe it to themselves to put their shoulders to the wheel along with the shoulders of those who have thus far done the work.

And today there is danger that the trade may not realize the result of relaxed effort. It was advertising, nothing but advertising, that made Mothers' day. Nothing but advertising will keep it going.

Of course Mothers' day has back of it an appeal to sentiment that is sufficiently strong to make the date, the second Sunday in May, cling in the minds of a portion of the people, else the day never would have come to the front in the way it has, but the day is not based on such centuries-old customs as are associated with the observance of Christmas and Easter. Even Memorial day, a comparatively new flower day, has back of it a far longer popular observance.

put a sign in the window. Anybody can do that much. Since windows must be decorated, almost anyone can advertise Mothers' day by means of the show-window display—it need call for no greater effort than is necessary to procure, in a near-by art store, a print of Whistler's well known painting of his mother, which can be put among the flowers, where it will carry the idea.

But the best way is to advertise Mothers' day in the newspapers.

"Bright Flowers."

The advantage of Mothers' day lies in the fact that all flowers and plants are salable. In the beginning the estimable lady who suggested the idea designated the white carnation as the official flower of Mothers' day. But it did not take long to show the impossibility of having a special flower for the day. Even now, when everything is appropriate and salable, the demand for white carnations sends the price far above the prices of other flowers. Early realizing this condition, The Review suggested a couplet to change the direction of the demand:

For Mothers at home, flowers bright,
In Mother's memory, flowers white.

How generally the day has been exploited along the lines suggested by The Review is well shown by the almost universal use of these two lines. You will find them, or some variant of them, in almost every piece of Mothers' day printing everywhere in America.

The Co-operative Plan.

Of course the self-reliant man wants to do his own Mothers' day advertising independently of everyone else, but there are circumstances in which it does not seem possible for each flower store to do individual advertising on a scale large enough to create public sentiment. Appreciating this point, The Review suggested that florists combine to advertise Mothers' day on a co-operative basis. The plan was given its first thorough trial at Columbus, O., and the success achieved was so great that it since has been done hundreds of times in other places.

Reproduced in this issue of The Review are a number of the Mothers' day advertisements published in daily newspapers last year. Then the date was May 9. This year it is May 14. It always is the second Sunday in May.

The individual advertisements will be of less interest than those showing coöperative effort. The individual plans his Mothers' day advertisement along the same lines as his regular advertising. If it is his custom, he quotes prices, an excellent method. But the coöperative advertising is planned to meet the views of the majority rather than of an individual.

Let the Newspaper Help.

Usually the Mothers' day coöperative advertising is worked up by the newspaper in which it is to appear. Occasionally it is done by a committee of a florists' club, but most frequently it is the result of a florist telephoning to the advertising manager of his favorite daily, just as you might do now. With the backing of one or two florists, the newspaper usually is able to work up the business without much effort.

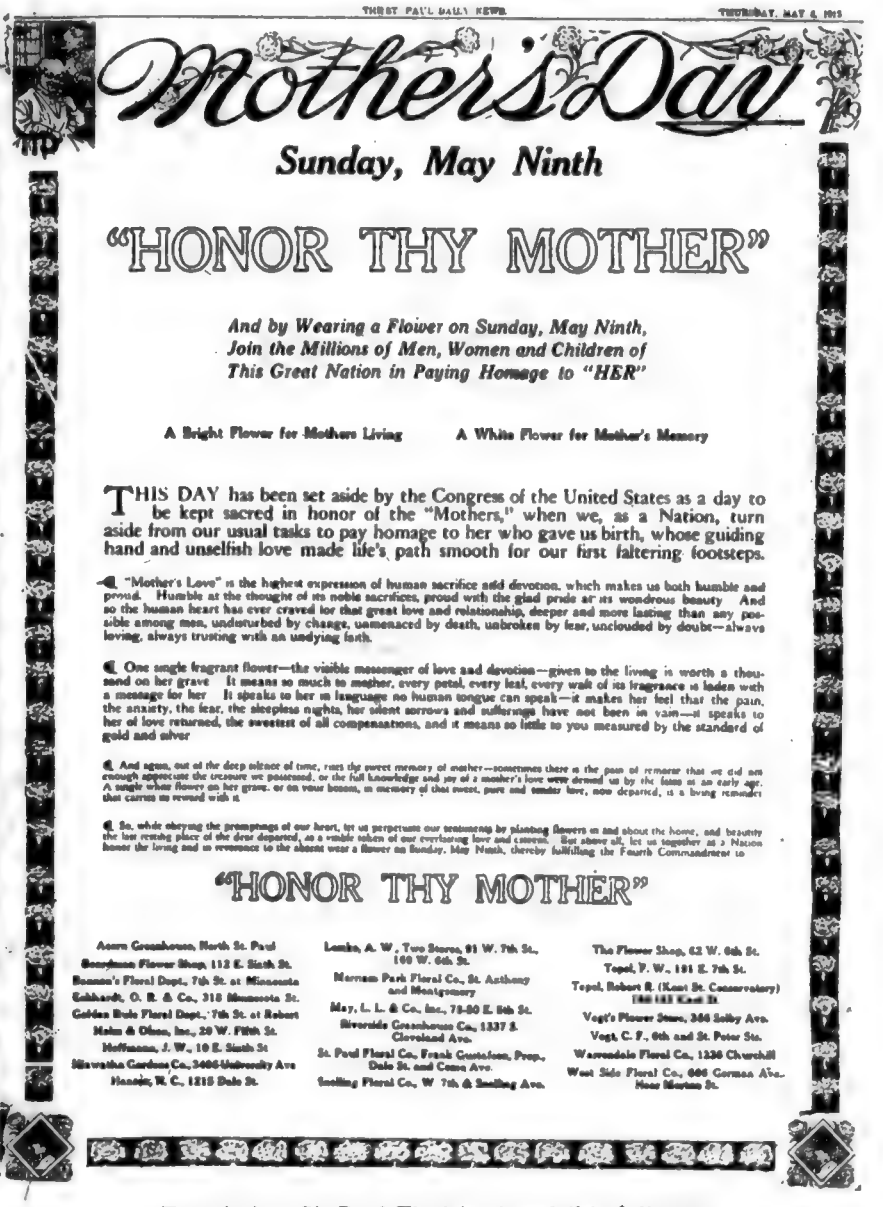
Almost always the beginning is made by taking a page or part of a page and dividing it into smaller spaces, which then are sold, one by one as florists can be found to go in on the scheme. This results in more or less of a hodgepodge, with a tendency toward price cutting and the attempt to outdo the rest of those represented.

The Better Plan.

The second attempt usually is along different lines. Nearly the entire advertisement is devoted to the exploitation of Mothers' day and the use of flowers as most fittingly expressing the sentiment of the day. A small part of the space at the bottom of the advertisement is reserved for the names of those who contributed to the fund. This method does not contemplate the quoting of prices or the making of any definite offer, but for the coöperative exploitation of a special flower day, be it Mothers' day or any other, it has been found most generally satisfactory.

In a few instances it has been found possible to raise funds for a Mothers' day advertisement that did not contain the names of any florists. Two such advertisements are reproduced with this article. The one on the first page was printed last year in Detroit newspapers. It probably explains the Mothers' day idea in pictures more thoroughly than it ever has been done elsewhere, but the text might be improved. The telegraph delivery feature of the business is not yet well enough understood by the public so that the reference to it in this advertisement would be generally comprehended.

Telegraph Delivery.



Much better in this respect is the individual advertisement of Penn, printed on the same page. This was only one of a series of Mothers' day advertisements the Boston retailer used last year, but it states the telegraph delivery proposition so plainly that any reader can comprehend just how Penn delivers flowers at a distance. This is a feature of the Mothers' day business that is capable of wonderful development. It is worth advertising strongly, but the text must be plain.

Now that Easter is over, no time should be lost in making plans for Two Methods of Co-operative Advertising, One Which Merely Groups Separate Ads, the Other Giving Better Display.

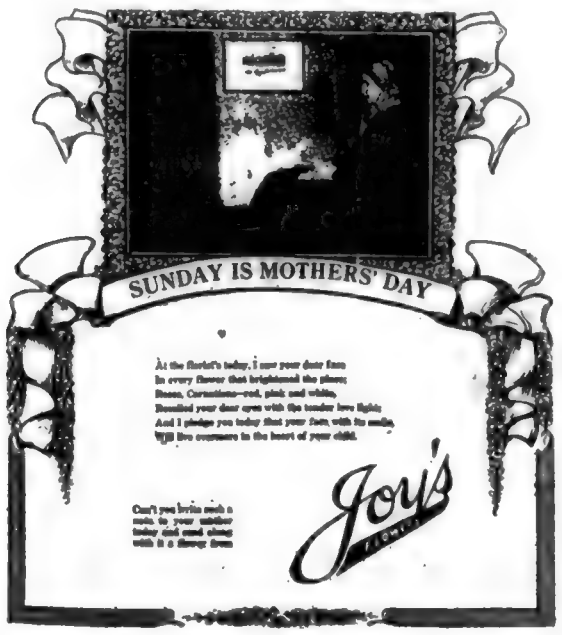
Mothers' day and plans for publicity, broadly speaking, are even more important than plans for supplying the demand the publicity has created and will maintain. Publicity pays the individual, but it also is an insurance for the whole trade.



What are you going to do about it?

BIRDS IN WINDOW DISPLAYS.

Appropriate and Effective.

This is the season when the managers of florists' establishments are devoting a great deal of thought to window displays. The window display constitutes the best possible local advertising medium. The sales that result from window displays cannot be estimated. The results, like those of many other forms of feature advertising, are not always clearly traceable to their source.

Flower stores throughout the country will soon begin the display of living objects in their windows—not only flowers, but little chickens, rabbits, ducklings and so forth. Such window displays, although somewhat time-worn, still draw a large amount of attention. Much of this attention, however, is of no value to the florist, for the average person does not easily transfer his thoughts from the chickens and rabbits to the flowers and plants that should form the background of such displays. While these window displays do not prove a disadvantage to the florist—on the contrary, they do produce a small portion of business—they usually lack the feature which is most essential.

The Joys of Life Include Flowers.

How Birds Suggest Flowers.

One window arrangement which will bring large and direct results is the display of domesticated song birds. The window can be screened in and an assortment of bird houses, bird baths and bird feeding bowls may form the feature of the interior. This window display most certainly will be productive of a large increase in business, for the manufacturer of flower boxes and baskets is now engaged in the business of manufacturing bird houses and so forth, and the bird propaganda that is now being carried on is creating a large amount of interest in beautifying the home and garden in this manner. Also, almost every flower establishment offers for sale bird seed, which can also be given prominence in such a display.

The display of bird life in the windows will draw as much attention at this time of the year as will the display of other animal life, for it is as suggestive and indicative of spring as are chickens and rabbits.

New Sources of Revenue.

Another advantage of this display is the fact that quantities of bird seed can be shown without harm to the birds or added expense to the store, for birds, unlike chickens and ducklings, will not gorge themselves with the food.

Such a window will open new sources of revenue to the flower business that have long been overlooked, and yet the average person will not allow his attention to center entirely on the birds, but will also take note of the flowers and plants that should form the background of such a display. Although the articles offered for sale are intended for use by the robins, swallows, wrens and other wild birds, the display of the domesticated song birds in the window will prove an advantage. A florist could ask for no better feature in such a display than a pair of nesting canaries or finches and at this season of the year it can be had, almost for the asking.

R. Franklin Mundorff.

PLEASE DON'T.

Sweet peas were scarce at Easter. A retailer who paid $1.50 per hundred, when he found himself running short raised his price to $1.50 per bunch. Of course it was for the purpose of turning the demand to other flowers, but it happened that a good many people bought the peas in spite of the price. Now they tell you that florists are robbers.

A retailer filled his window with fine azaleas. There was a sign that read: "Fine azaleas $1.50 each." The would-be purchaser found the plants at $1.50 to be two or three poor specimens in the back of the store; those in the window could be had at $2.50 to $4 each. Some people bought the better plants, but many went out without buying anything—and to hear them tell it, florists are snides.

BY-PRODUCTS OF THE WAR

WAR AND THE PAPER MARKET.

Where It Hits the Florist.

Florists in all parts of the country are beginning to feel the effects of the European war through an inability to get the various kinds of special paper used in their establishments. Wax paper is the most difficult to secure. The trouble, according to a paper dealer, is that wax paper is of such light weight that the returns are not large enough to tempt the manufacturers away from other grades. The production of wax paper requires the same degree of mechanical and human energy and the same length of time as the heavier grades, such as machine-finished book paper. The wax paper will average about twelve pounds per ream; the book paper will reach sixty pounds or more per ream. It is impossible to secure prices on wax paper. It has advanced fifty per cent and more. The wholesalers will not quote prices except from day to day, as their costs are based on prices prevailing on the day of shipment from the mills. They will not give positive promises as to deliveries, nor make any contracts before consulting the mills.

U. S. Short on Dyes and Chemicals.

This same condition is equally applicable to tissue paper, which comes in a size 24x36 inches and averages about fourteen pounds to the ream. This can be produced more easily than wax paper, but because of the dye shortage and for other reasons there are some colors in tissues which are not obtainable at all. For instance, there is the grass bleach tissue. The price some weeks ago was $1.25; today the price is $1.75, but there is considerable difficulty in getting it at that price. The reason for this is that the paper makers cannot get the bleaching compounds from Europe; America does not produce heavily of dyes, bleaches, etc.

There has been an enormous increase in the cost of letter paper, and when one goes to the printer he quickly learns of the high price and the shortage of inks used in printing. Inks for the office have jumped to 85 cents per quart for black, and the price demanded for a quart of red ink is $3. Even at that price one is lucky to get a quart of it. In each case the advance has been thirty-three per cent.

Wrapping Paper and Twine High.

Wrapping paper prices also have soared, and the ordinary manila for which we formerly paid 4½ cents per pound now costs us 6 cents. If we ask for craft paper we may be unable to get our order filled. A large wholesale paper house waited one month to get action on an order for craft paper. One carload was delivered and this was quickly snapped up by pending orders. The price, formerly 5 cents per pound, now is 9 cents.

The shipping department also is hit by the high cost of twine. The colored cords, known as Sea Island twine, formerly 38 cents per pound, now are 50 cents per pound and some of the colors are missing. American hemp, known as No. 36, formerly 14 cents a pound, is hard to get at 22 cents a pound, but the greatest difficulty at present is with respect to jute twine. Practically all of the jute used in this country comes from Italy, Germany and Austria. It has long been under embargo against exportation and, while the price is quoted at 18 cents a pound, one is lucky sometimes to get it at any price. It is for this same reason that boxes have advanced in price, as jute plays an important part in the manufacture of pasteboard, it being used as a filler.

Crepe paper, largely used for pot covers, has become scarce along with the rest, some colors being unobtainable at any price and the general advance being from one-third to one-half on last autumn's prices.

PAPER BOXES GOING UP.

A visible increase in the selling price of paper boxes may result from a conference of some 150 members of the Western Paper Box Manufacturers' Association and their allied interests in Chicago last week. It was decided to hold the next annual banquet and reunion during the week of next year's spring show in New York. The officers elected for the ensuing year were: President, William Free, of Brooklyn; vice-president, James MacPherson, of Trenton, N. J.; secretary, S. R. Candler, of Southampton, N. Y. S. R. PENTSTEMONS DAMPING OFF.

I have a fine crop of seedling pentstemons which I have had difficulty in transplanting. They have from four to six leaves. When transplanted, they seem to damp off at once. Can you suggest a remedy? I should also like to have some cultural notes on these plants. Do they require pinching, as snapdragons do? H. M.—La.

Pentstemons need a cool house. Perhaps you are growing them too warm. I have never had any trouble with them damping off. You will find a coldframe to be a much better place to grow them in than a greenhouse. Use a light, but moderately rich soil. They do not require any pinching. They can be planted out at any time when danger of frost has passed. They succeed well in a bed by themselves, or can be planted in clumps in a mixed border of annuals and perennials. They are at their best in cool weather and I am afraid your summers will prove pretty hot for them. Keep them moist at the root, for good results. C. W.

Orpet, who is awaiting trial for the murder of Marion Lambert, has been named as defendant in a $10,000 slander suit filed by Attorney James Welch, counsel for John Tiplady, a gardener employed by Mrs. Nettie McCormick. According to Tiplady, Orpet senior is responsible for a story that Tiplady during the time he was employed as gardener by A. B. Dick traded a number of rare and valuable plants with another Lake Forest gardener and then sold the plants he received in the trade to a Highland Park florist.

"FLOWER BARRELS."

How They Are Made at Evansville.

Although at first sight "flower barrels" seem to be rather complicated affairs, they really are easy to make when one works by formula. All that is needed is a barrel, an auger, some good soil and about 100 flowering plants in 2-inch or 3-inch pots. The plants are set in holes bored in the sides of the barrel, as well as on top, and in due course of time the whole thing appears to be a great bush, remarkable for the fact that it seems to bear several kinds of flowers.

It is to C. E. Gysemans, head gardener of the parks of Evansville, Ind., that we are indebted for the following directions on "flower barrels." The accompanying illustration shows two of the thirteen "flower barrels" Mr. Gysemans made last summer for the parks of Evansville, and also serves to introduce Mr. and Mrs. Gysemans to the trade. Here is the way Mr. Gysemans makes his "flower barrels":

"I take a common 50-gallon whiskey or oil barrel and remove the top. I then bore forty-four holes in the sides of the barrel, each two inches in diameter and six inches apart each way. The lowest row of holes is six inches above the bottom of the barrel and the top row six inches below the top of the barrel.

The A B C of It.

"After providing for good drainage I proceed to set the plants and fill in the soil until the barrel is filled up to the lower part of the openings of the top row of holes. The soil I use is one part well rotted manure, one part leafmold and one part of rich garden soil.

"After firming down the first soil I introduce my plants, from 2-inch and 3-inch pots, placing them in the holes from the outside. If plants from 3-inch pots are to be inserted I remove some of the soil in order to get them through. When the lowest row of plants is set all around the barrel I fill in soil up to the next row of holes, six inches higher, and then repeat until the top row is reached.

"On the tops of the barrels I made last summer I planted the umbrella plant, Cyperus alternifolius, in the center and around it placed petunias, torenias, zinnias, coleus, geraniums, Drummondii phloxes and lobelias. In the holes on the sides of the barrel I planted the same varieties, two plants of different varieties in each hole. I placed the plants with the longest stems deeper in the barrel, in order to have room to place the second plant in the same hole. In the lower row of holes, in addition to the two plants, I planted a vine of thunbergia and maurandia, alternately.

"The barrel was placed on the trunk of a tree three feet high, about which the vines of the lower holes droop."

The Secretary's Report.

The regular Lent meeting of the board of directors of the society was held at the Hotel Walton, Philadelphia, March 28 and 29. With two exceptions, every member was present, as follows:

Daniel MacRorie, president, San Francisco, Cal.
R. C. Kerr, vice-president, Houston, Tex.
John Young, secretary, New York, N. Y.
W. F. Kasting, treasurer, Buffalo, N. Y.
J. J. Hess, director, Omaha, Neb.
J. A. Peterson, director, Cincinnati, O.
Wm. R. Nicholson, director, Framingham, Mass.
W. J. Keimel, director, Elmhurst, Ill.
Angelo J. Rossi, director, San Francisco, Cal.
Chas. L. Baum, director, Knoxville, Tenn.
S. S. Pennock, president the American Rose Society.
Joseph H. Hill, president American Carnation Society.

Henry Weston, president New York Florists' Club.
Patrick Welch, past president, Boston, Mass.

In addition there were present: Ex-presidents Geo. Asmus, Theodore Wirth and Frank H. Traendly, and the Washington representative, W. F. Gude.

Reports from the secretary and treasurer were presented and accepted, both showing the affairs of the society to be in excellent shape. Recommendations made by the treasurer in regard to certain of the society's securities were approved and adopted. The reports were referred to an auditing committee.

Amendments to Constitution.

The committee on proposed amendments to the constitution and by-laws, Theo. Wirth, chairman, presented a lengthy report covering changes recommended at the San Francisco convention. After considerable discussion, these amendments were all adopted for submission to the Houston convention. The following are the articles and sections as amended:

AMENDMENT TO ARTICLE V.

Article V. Meetings.

Section 1. At the thirty-second annual meeting, to be held August 15 to 18 in Houston, Tex., the meeting places for the years 1917 and 1918 shall be selected by ballot, and at the meeting of 1917 and at every meeting thereafter, the meeting place for the second year following that meeting shall be so selected.

The balloting shall be done at the evening session of the first day of each annual convention.

The time for the annual meeting shall be the third Tuesday of August in each year, continuing for three days, or until all business is completed.

The city applying for the meeting shall, with its written application, provide the free use of a place for the purposes of a convention garden, which place shall be available, if desired, from the early spring of the year before the meeting to the late fall of the year of the meeting.

AMENDMENT TO ARTICLE II.

Article II. Section 2. Elections and Appointments. Paragraph (a).

The president, first vice-president, secretary, treasurer and two directors shall be elected by ballot at the annual meeting of the society, and their term of office shall begin with the first day of January next succeeding the election. The term of office of the president, vice-president, secretary and treasurer shall be one year, and the term of office of the directors three years, or until their successors are duly elected and qualified.

Section 3. Duties of officers.

(a) President—The president shall preside at all meetings of the society, and exercise a general supervision of its affairs. He shall report from time to time such measures as seem necessary for promoting its objects and extending its usefulness. He shall annually, on the first day of January, appoint one botanist, one entomologist, one vegetable pathologist, and one state vice-president for each state or territory represented in the society; he shall act as chairman of the executive board at its meetings and sign all diplomas and certificates of the society.

Section 2. Elections and Appointments. Paragraph (b).

The president shall appoint on the first day of January of each year, or as soon afterward as may be possible, one or more state vice-presidents from each state or territory represented in the membership, to serve for a term of one year. Clubs, societies or kindred organizations of professional florists, gardeners and horticulturists, having a paid-up membership of 100 or more members in the S. A. F. & O. H., shall be entitled to one representative on the board of directors. Such representative shall be the president of such organization and must be a member of this society. Any elective officer or appointed director shall not be eligible as a representative of such organization. When the president of any such organization is already a director, the vice-president shall be eligible for the office. Any organization applying for representation shall submit to the secretary of this society a certified copy of the resolution adopted by their organization that they wish such representation on the board of directors, together with a complete list of its membership. It shall be the secretary's duty to confirm same and submit it to the president for final confirmation. Announcement of such director shall be made by the president.

AMENDMENT TO ARTICLE II.

Article II. Officers, their Election and Duties. Section 2. Elections and Appointments. Paragraph (d).

The secretary shall cause official ballots to be prepared according to the Australian form, containing the names of all candidates nominated for the various elective offices. Balloting shall take place at the morning session of the third day of the annual meeting. The secretary shall prepare four election books, in which the names of members eligible to vote are alphabetically arranged.

Book 1 to contain all names from letter A to letter D, inclusive.

Book 2 to contain all names from letter E to letter K, inclusive.

Book 3 to contain all names from letter L to letter R, inclusive.

Book 4 to contain all names from letter S to letter Z, inclusive.

The secretary shall provide one ballot box for each book. The president or presiding officer shall appoint one checker for each book, and one receiver for each ballot box, and one judge of election, who shall have charge of the checkers and receivers, who, together with him, form the election board. They shall, after the close of the polls, assort and count the votes cast and report the results to the convention. The polls shall remain open from 10 a. m. to 11 a. m., or until all legal voters in line at that time shall have an opportunity to cast their votes. A majority of all the votes cast shall be necessary for an election; and the president or presiding officer shall declare who is elected. In case of failure to elect on the first ballot, the president shall order a new ballot immediately, polls to remain open one hour; should this ballot fail to elect, the president shall order a third ballot, polls to remain open one hour; this ballot shall be limited to the two candidates receiving the highest vote on preceding ballot.

VACATIONING IN CUBA.

The accompanying illustration shows three well known florists near the winter home of Adam Graham, of Cleveland, at Santa Fe, Isle of Pines, Cuba. Adam Graham is the man in the center, with Fred Burki, president of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., at the left and John Walker, of Youngstown, O., at the right. The look of satisfaction on the face of each is easily explained, for they are each holding a cigar taken from a box which Mr. Graham had just received from Philip J. Foley, of Chicago. Oddly enough, the three met accidentally in Santa Fe, none of them knowing that the others were in that vicinity.

Isle of Pines seems to be a favorite winter resort for florists. Robert Craig and John Westcott, of Philadelphia, and Julius Roehrs, of Rutherford, N. J., as well as many others, find time to visit Cuba during the winter. Charles Simms, of Philadelphia, spent some weeks there this winter. All were delighted with the climate and water, and consider the island one of the most delightful places in which to spend part of the winter. John Walker, who has just returned after a six weeks' visit, thinks Cuba one of the most attractive places one can visit. Fred Burki also speaks highly of the climate and recommends it to anyone who wants to spend a pleasant vacation in winter, but he says if you want to make money confine your energies to your own home town, as you cannot make any money in that country. TOMATOES IN TRUCK GARDENS.

The First Transplanting.

When the plants are in rough leaf they should be transplanted. It will then be necessary to determine how many plants will be placed in boxes for special use; then the remainder can be planted out in garden frames. Three inches of fresh soil, with two ounces of bone meal to the square, well worked into it, will give a splendid foundation for the plants to establish their roots in. Make the soil firm. Plant the seedlings three inches apart each way. Always be careful not to injure the primary root, and also do not crush the stem of the seedling. A mischance either way will invariably cripple the plants. After planting carefully, water in the plants, and if necessary shade them.

If a sufficient number of glass hotbed sashes are available, so much the better. If not, other means will be required to give protection to the plants. I have used many things, from transparent waterproof paper, which goes out in the first storm, to light canvas on rollers. The canvas I have found to be the best material. Fixed on rollers to the higher side of the frames, it can be pulled down and up again at will. These canvas covers are easy to manage; they are also cheap and durable and give full protection from storm and frost. At the end of the season they can be removed and can be stored for another season.

Planting in the Field.

When the plants are five or six inches high, they should be planted out in permanent quarters. In doing this, it is as well to adhere to the following rules if possible: Always soak the plants well the day before you lift them from the hotbeds. Lift them in cakes of four, with sufficient soil on the roots to prevent the plants having too severe a check. Pack the plants in shallow flats and place them on a flat cart, with an awning to shade them from the wind. If possible, choose a showery or cloudy day to do the planting.

Planting by hand is the best in most cases. When the land is in a fine state of cultivation, the quickest method will be to make a frame with strong wooden pegs in it, three feet apart. Work this from end to end of the field, as you would a harrow. This will give you straight lines the required distance apart. A man with a hand-planter on the style of the post-planting tool will make the holes as fast as two men can plant the tomatoes. This method allows the use of stronger plants than can be used in a mechanical planter. The plants get away more quickly and a week at the start is worth more than a month at the finish. F. E. B.

TOMATOES UNDER GLASS.

Will you please give me some information on tomato culture? When should the seeds be sown to have the fruit about October? What temperature is required for them, and how far apart should they be planted? Would they do well in a rich soil in which sweet peas have been grown? Can you give me information as to trimming, tying and pollenizing and name the best varieties for greenhouse culture? Would tomatoes do well coming into crop in October? F. C. J.—Ill.

Tomatoes under glass need a minimum temperature of 60 degrees. They require a dry atmosphere, just the opposite of that for cucumbers. They are best grown to single stems, which should have all side shoots or laterals removed. The top should also be pinched out when the plants have thrown five or six bunches of fruit each. Good greenhouse varieties are Comet, Lister's Prolific, Carter's Sunrise and Stirling Castle. All these are

How They Are Made at Evansville.

Although at first sight "flower barrels" seem to be rather complicated affairs, they really are easy to make when one works by formula. All that is needed is a barrel, an auger, some good soil and about 100 flowering plants in 2-inch or 3-inch pots. The plants are set in holes bored in the sides of the barrel, as well as on top, and in due course of time the whole thing appears to be a great bush, remarkable for the fact that it seems to bear several kinds of flowers.

It is to C. E. Gysemans, head gardener of the parks of Evansville, Ind., that we are indebted for the following directions on "flower barrels." The accompanying illustration shows two of the thirteen "flower barrels" Mr. Gysemans made last summer for the parks of Evansville, and also serves to introduce Mr. and Mrs. Gysemans to the trade. Here is the way Mr. Gysemans makes his "flower barrels":

"I take a common 50-gallon whiskey or oil barrel and remove the top. I then bore forty-four holes in the sides of the barrel, each two inches in diameter and six inches apart each way. The lowest row of holes is six inches above the bottom of the barrel and the top row six inches below the top of the barrel.

The A B C of It.

"After providing for good drainage I proceed to set the plants and fill in the soil until the barrel is filled up to the lower part of the openings of the top row of holes. The soil I use is one part well rotted manure, one part leafmold and one part of rich garden soil.

"After firming down the first soil I introduce my plants, from 2-inch and 3-inch pots, placing them in the holes from the outside. If plants from 3-inch pots are to be inserted I remove some of the soil in order to get them through. When the lowest row of plants is set all around the barrel I fill in soil up to the next row of holes, six inches higher, and then repeat until the top row is reached.

"On the tops of the barrels I made last summer I planted the umbrella plant, Cyperus alternifolius, in the center and around it placed petunias, torenias, zinnias, coleus, geraniums, Drummondii phloxes and lobelias. In the holes on the sides of the barrel I planted the same varieties, two plants of different varieties in each hole. I placed the plants with the longest stems deeper in the barrel, in order to have room to place the second plant in the same hole. In the lower row of holes, in addition to the two plants, I planted a vine of thunbergia and maurandia, alternately.

"The barrel was placed on the trunk of a tree three feet high, about which the vines of the lower holes droop."

Good greenhouse varieties are Comet, Lister's Prolific, Carter's Sunrise and Stirling Castle. All these are medium-sized sorts and specially adapted for indoor culture. For successful winter culture it is better to restrict the root run somewhat, as the plants then make less robust growth and set their fruits more freely. From November until March it is a good plan to pollenize the flowers. This can be done by tapping the plants about the middle of the day when it is clear and sunny, or during dark spells a fine brush, rabbit's tail or bunch of cotton-wool tied on the end of a stick can be used to go over the flowers.

For fruiting in early October, the seed should be sown about June 15. Set the plants eighteen inches apart in the rows. Tomatoes during October, November, December and January do not bring as good prices as in February, March and April, when the demand is better. Grown as a spring or early summer crop, to follow violets, winter lettuce or winter sweet peas, they are a more certain crop and pay much better than as a winter proposition.

The Review recently has published a series of brief articles on the culture of tomatoes under glass. The first of these articles appeared in the issue for March 9, page 88. C. W.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

Easter business in Syracuse, N. Y., fully warranted the thorough preparations made by the trade to handle it.

W. E. Day moved enough plants to keep two stores busy day and night, in addition to a tremendous run on cut flowers. Basket conceits, in which heather largely figured, were a leading feature.

The Bard Floral Co. rented a large family residence adjoining its store and struck a happy idea in arranging each room with one kind of plants. There was a rhododendron room, a rose room, etc., which pleased the patrons. "My first experience of an Easter at retail was all right," commented Robert Bard.

Bellamy Bros. relied on their own supply and did well. Good geraniums were shorn of their blooms to give the Easter stock the preference. There were exceptionally good prospects for later business.

Gustav Bartholme reports his usual satisfactory run at this season. Lilies were fine and a batch of Narcissus Emperor and Empress were considered the finest in Syracuse.

Peter Kay, being located close to the principal cemeteries and favored with good weather, disposed of nearly all his seasonable stock, retaining only a good batch for later business.

The P. R. Quinlan estate disposed of an immense quantity of stock at its two stores and the big range of glass, supervised by Edward Dwyer, who may well be proud of the finest lot of pot-grown roses ever produced. There were about 1,000 plants, chiefly Magna Charta and Oakmont, the latter being found preferable in all respects to Ulrich Brunner, in addition to a host of ramblers of many varieties. Jessie is considered the best of the baby ramblers; it is a gem. Roses for cutting were in fine shape. There was a house of Kaiserin in first crop; plants 10 years old in full vigor, with perfect foliage and uniformity of stems and buds. Mrs. Shawyer is a most profitable winter and summer variety. Mr. Dwyer said, however, with emphasis: "Mrs. Russell is queen of them all, but cast your eyes over that bed of Lady Hillingdon; can you beat them?" These were grown at the cooler end of the house, at a temperature not higher than 56 degrees. Killarney, at the upper end of the house, was in equally fine shape. Milady was being dried off for summer forcing; also Hadley. Mr. Dwyer mentioned that he had the pleasure of escorting two classes of university students, fifty in each, boys and girls, through the range, although it happened at a busy season. The girls were especially enthusiastic and tested Mr. Dwyer's knowledge rather severely.

The Baker Floral Co. reported that the vast quantity of stock grown, including nearly 1,000 lilies, which, by the way, were as fine as one could wish this season, was disposed of locally. This also included a crop of 8,000 Enchantress, at 6 cents. "It is our most profitable carnation," said Manager Harold Brown, who called attention to the large size, solidity and perfect color of the blooms. "We shall try some of the newer kinds, but we are not going to discard the old favorite when it behaves so well."

Charles F. Saul and F. H. Ebeling were rushed with seed orders. They do not handle plants. Manager Day, of Ebeling's, said business night and day was rushed. Sales are transacted in five languages, according to a sign posted in the store, which is going some.

George B. Hart, of Rochester, reported a phenomenal sale of plants during the early part of the week. The latter part was given over to the handling of cut flowers, which were abundant, especially lilies, and of excellent quality.

Easter business in Buffalo, N. Y., undoubtedly was found equal, if not superior, to all previous records. W. J. Palmer expressed this opinion and added: "People have lots of money to spend and are buying freely." The stores offered extra special attractions. Palmer's uptown store showed an immense cross in the central window. One day it was filled with Azalea Vervæneana and on Good Friday with Spiræa Japonica.

S. A. Anderson, of Buffalo, had a window of combination baskets. Outside stood a splendid specimen of a lavender rhododendron, dressed with ribbons of the same color.

Barney Myers, of Buffalo, was called on to deliver his best from the Palmer Greenhouses, at Lancaster, and responded as he has done for many Easters.

Will Palmer had given me the last word in a hurried talk and, with steam up, I was heading for the station when I suddenly was seized in the vise-like grip of Fred Lautenschlager, of Kroeschell boiler fame, who, on my stating I was bound for Canada, charged me with being a spy. I felt like exploding, but Fred, who is an expert in the boiler business, declared the water gauge registered safe; so, under a full head of steam, we parted, he for Chicago and I for Canada.

"Another record-breaking Easter business," commented Manager George Geraghty of Dunlop's Flower Store, Toronto. "We certainly feel encouraged in our new home, and although removed from the principal avenue of traffic, the results brought by our increased facilities to show the goods and by judicious advertising certainly are beyond our most sanguine expectations." The building acquired last fall is complete in every detail, for handling both a wholesale and retail business. The store is handsome and arranged to give the decorator full scope. Frank Dunlop drew my attention to some perfectly flowered French hydrangeas, azaleas, rhododendrons and lilacs as samples, at prices that place Toronto in the front rank as a flower city.

H. Dillemuth and Charles Tidy, of Toronto, had similar experiences of big business, while Frank Duffert and Thomas Manton reported conditions in the flower market the best on record. It is seldom that one sees orchids on sale in a market booth, but Mr. Manton had them and found them profitable.

A severe hail storm hit Jamestown, N. Y., on the evening of April 20. It was reported that the Lake View Rose Gardens were heavy losers. W. M.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

The Easter business was good. The supply was unusually large. The heavy demand arrived at the last minute and April 22 saw the buyers for the retail stores hustling to get stock together for the late rush at their stores.

American Beauties were in good supply and sufficient for all demands. Other roses cleared well. Carnations were short of actual needs, although the cut was extremely large. Easter lilies were in such a large supply that they failed to clean up entirely. The blooms generally were of high quality. Bulbous stock sold well. Sweet peas, too, cleared nicely. Valley and orchids were limited in supply and sold well. Other good offerings included callas, snapdragons and violets. The blooming plant business was large, while decorative plants had a fair sale.

Various Notes.

J. A. Peterson & Sons had a fine lot of hydrangeas for Easter.

L. H. Kyrk reports the best Easter business he ever had. Among other items, he disposed of 25,000 poeticus narcissi from George Klotter.

The Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange reported its Easter business as exceeding that of any other Easter.

E. A. Forter has set May 1 as the date of the formal opening of his new store at 128 West Fourth street.

M. Anderson and George Frisch, Jr., of Dayton, O., were in this city recently.

C. E. Critchell featured splendid American Beauties and Easter lilies for his holiday business. C. H. H.

Mankato, Kan.—The business of A. J. Kramer has been growing so splendidly that more room and greater facilities are necessary. Two houses, each 20x100, and a 2-story office building, 22x40, will be erected this spring.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

No other Easter in the memory of the oldest inhabitant has equaled that of 1916 in volume or profit. This may be safely said of every department of the business. The ribbon houses had their banner season; the supply houses had nothing seasonable remaining; the plant growers sold every worthy blooming plant in their greenhouses; the wholesalers were practically sold out when the sun rose Easter morning and at noon every retail store in the city was well cleaned up on both cut flowers and plants. No better weather could be desired.

The night of April 22 was a historic one in the wholesale cut flower section of the trade. It was quiet and reposeful up to nearly midnight, when the invasion began. When peace was proclaimed, hardly a vestige remained of the big supply of the late afternoon. Prices were reasonable; not much above the figures of a good Saturday, except for the flowers on which there was a shortage, such as orchids and valley. These broke their records for the year, some valley touching $8 per hundred and select cattleyas selling at $2 each.

Roses of all kinds were in great demand, but prices remained reasonable at all times, although there was no surplus. American Beauties did not go above 50 cents each at any hour, and 35 to 40 cents for the best was the evening quotation. A few Hadley sold at 60 cents each, the record for the day. Ophelia, Hoosier Beauty, Killarney Brilliant, Double White Killarney, Radiance, Mrs. Ward, Mock and Russell sold at 10 to 12 cents each for select stock. Brunners were excellent but too few for the demand. Prima Donna sold out quickly. Sunburst was a general favorite. In fact, there are no roses coming to this market that did not find a ready sale.

Before the bulk of the shipments arrived the best white carnations brought 6 cents each; some say they received even more. But the demand lessened and 5 cents and 4 cents each was the general price as the night wore on. A good many sold after midnight at 3 cents, but there was no surplus. Most of the carnations were splendid stock.

The naturally increased demand for Easter lilies did not seem to influence the price and there was always enough. The prophecy of 10-cent top was fulfilled and they had to be especially good to command that figure; 8 cents was the recognized top for the cut lilies, and many sold at 6 cents and under. Valley was one of the surprises, as much as 8 cents being paid for it. But of all the Easter flowers orchids attracted the most attention, because of the shortage; there were none obtainable after noon on Saturday. The gardenia supply was large and prices for the best advanced only slightly. This week the street merchants have them again.

The violet season ended with Easter. None sold under 50 cents per hundred. It was a good ending to a bad season. A wonderful display of tulips was seen and prices did not advance. A few southern gladioli came in, with a small supply of excellent Spanish iris and plenty of daffodils and callas. There were pansies and daisies innumerable; also calendulas, mignonette, stocks and snapdragon, the latter especially worthy. Added to all these was the sweet pea supply, the short-stemmed ones in little favor; the Spencers of rare size and beauty.

Many of the wholesalers also handled blooming plants on commission and disposed of everything they had to offer.

Various Notes.

Now, with renewed enthusiasm, preparations have begun for the proper celebration of Mothers' day and Memorial day.

Much sympathy is felt for C. F. Bertanzell, of Roslyn, L. I., in the sudden death of Mrs. Bertanzell, April 17.

The Easter flower display at the Prospect park greenhouses, Brooklyn, drew many thousands.

The department stores did an enormous business in their flower sections for Easter. C. C. Trepel, in New York, and Joseph Trepel, in Brooklyn, were certainly the Billy Sundays of floriculture in the scope of their missionary work.

F. A. Bolze, of Pleasantville, N. Y., died April 19, at the age of 72 years. He was one of the old-time florists, of excellent reputation and widely respected. His specialty for many years had been the growing of smilax, which was handled by Badgley & Bishop. Mr. Badgley attended the interment.

George McGarrett, for twenty-five years salesman and bookkeeper for Alex. McConnell, died at his home in the Adirondacks April 3. He leaves a widow and daughter. Burial was in Woodlawn and many floral tributes were sent by his employer and friends in the trade.

May 6, at Mouquin's restaurant, the annual meeting of the Cut Flower Exchange will be held.

Siebrecht Bros. have removed to 605 Fifth avenue, a splendid location. The store is roomy and the annual rental is said to be $20,000.

Traendly & Schenck say the Easter business was ahead of any in their long experience and so say all the pioneers, J. K. Allen, Walter Sheridan, P. J. Smith, Gunther Bros. and all the rest of them.

Guttman & Raynor had two winners last week in good supplies of Prima Donna and Brunner roses.

Big crowds continue at the plant auctions on Vesey street. MacNiff's importations are continuously arriving. In the three stores over fifty employees are engaged.

More than forty society weddings are scheduled for the present week. The trade has a wonderful May ahead.

Easter in Brooklyn was a success. The wholesale florists found ready sale for everything. Prices were satisfactory. All the retailers are well satisfied.

J. V. Phillips and Mrs. Phillips will spend the summer at their cottage at Bay Shore, L. I. J. Austin Shaw.

The steamer from Bermuda that arrived April 20 brought 590 boxes of Harrisii lily flowers, none of them consigned to florists but nearly all to an express company or a customhouse broker for forwarding inland.

In May, 1915, McHutchison & Co. purchased the building at 95 Chambers street, running through to 77 Reade street, a full block long. The building consists of five floors, basement and subbasement. The firm will occupy the full first floor May 1, 27x150 feet, which will give them room to grow. Since they commenced business fifteen years ago, they have moved four times, and each time they have doubled the occupied space.

NOTES FROM FOREIGN LANDS

London, England.—A number of shipments of Japanese lily bulbs from cold storage recently have gone to America to relieve the shortage there. Because continental markets are closed and the British market dull there is a surplus of bulbs in storage here this season.

Yokohama, Japan.—The success which attended the forcing of Formosa lilies in America last season, when they were more floriferous and longer stemmed than any others, has resulted in a demand that will clear every bulb of the 1916 crop in Formosa. The proportion of large-sized bulbs is expected to be rather less than usual this season and a little more than the usual premium is being asked.

Aalsmeer, Holland.—The prices of Dutch flowers have decreased since Germany prohibited their importation, but not to the degree expected. An important trade is developing with Austrian cities, Austria having placed no restrictions on imports. The German decree applies to all live plants and parts of plants for decorative purposes as well as to cut flowers. An exception is made of bulbs and tubers, so that the usual trade in tulip, hyacinth and narcissus bulbs is expected this autumn.

London, England.—The absence of travelers for Holland bulb houses is a matter for comment in the trade. While no announcement has been made, it seems plain that many men who regularly visit England each spring have been refused permission to make their customary rounds this season.

St. Peterport, Guernsey.—Growers on the island, both of vegetables and flowers, have had a disastrous season, more because of the uncertainty of transportation than because of low markets. There have been days when no sailing occurred, instead of the several sailings incident to a normal season. Many of the regular boats have been sunk by German submarines. Frequently carters have waited with their loads on the open quay for eighteen hours in rain or snow and many times shipments have been not worth loading when the opportunity arrived. Early in March a mass meeting of some 300 growers was held in New Market hall and a conference with the authorities somewhat improved conditions.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

It is generally conceded that the Easter business was as good as any in the history of the trade. Everything sold well and good prices prevailed.

The main story is on orchids, for many of the florists were caught. The warning had gone forth that there would be a shortage of these, but a majority of the retailers paid no heed and continued taking orders, which they later found they were unable to fill. It was practically impossible to pick up a single orchid in the city. Orders had been taken early in the week for Easter delivery at $9 and $10 per dozen; Saturday and Sunday they were worth any price that might be asked for them.

Gardenias sold readily at $3 per dozen. Sweet peas were in heavy demand and the prices ranged from $1.50 to $3. These prices held up during the early part of the present week. White and yellow daisies were in some demand at $1.50 per hundred, and nasturtiums at 15 cents a bunch sold well for use in corsage bouquets. The demand for valley from out-of-town points caused a jump in the price from $6 to $8 per hundred and late in the week it was hard to get at that figure.

American Beauty roses at $9 and $10 per dozen moved rapidly and there was a shortage during the closing hours of the week. The price has since receded to $6 per dozen. All roses moved well. The sale this year was far better than usual. As a rule, the retailers do not do much with roses during the Easter season.

Those who failed to place their orders for carnations early in the week faced a shortage and many orders were turned down. The ruling price was $5 and $6 per hundred and there is little likelihood of much of a reduction, as the growers are apparently holding off in anticipation of Mothers' day, May 14. A number of growers also are off crop, so that there will be no oversupply.

Gladioli, while good, are not in demand. Mignonette is fine, but is moving slowly. Snapdragon is popular and, in fact, is much more in demand than a year ago. Pink sold out completely. The season for daffodils is about over and tulips also are on the wane.

The sale of potted plants of all kinds was exceptionally good. The weather was such as to make deliveries easy and the business moved along smoothly.

Various Notes.

The window exhibition at the store of George H. Shaffer created much comment last week and incidentally won first prize in the contest operated by the International Correspondence School and the Washington Chamber of Commerce. The work of getting the window ready for the contest was done by Mr. Supper. The color scheme was in yellow and pink. Tausendschon roses, violets and yellow lupines were used in profusion, while as a centerpiece Easter lilies rested upon gold velour. The first prize consists of a full correspondence course in the school, while to the decorator goes a specially designed medal. Z. D. Blackistone was the florist member of the committee of judges. A handsome window at the store of Gude Bros. Co. received honorable mention.

A bill has been introduced into the Senate (S. 5677) "for the proper observance of Sunday as a day of rest in the District of Columbia," which, if enacted into law, will close all the florists' establishments on Sundays.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

The Easter business was quite a contrast to that of last year. While it was cool for this late in the season, the weather was clear and agreeable. Business as a whole was good and stock was plentiful, with some few exceptions in the cut flower market. Roses were plentiful and, while they all moved, the prices on the longer grades were hardly consistent with the quality. Callas were in small demand and few were moved, even at low prices. Cut Easter lilies sold well, but as pot plants they sold at extremely low prices. Sweet peas were in heavy supply, yet far from sufficient for the demand.

Good orchid peas brought good prices, but the short sold at lower prices. Double violets sold well, but the stock was not of exceptional quality. Singles were poor and did not sell well at any price; a quantity of these had been kept too long a time and fell to pieces. Carnations early in the week were poor, but later the quality improved and the demand was good. Valley was scarce and sold at high prices, and cattleyas were out of the market. Gardenias sold well at fair prices. There was a large lot of Asparagus plumosus thrown on the market last week and it sold completely.

Pot plants and made-up baskets and boxes sold nicely. Azaleas, hydrangeas, rhododendrons and spiræas moved well. Some few rambler roses were seen, but not a large quantity of them. Potted lilies did not sell so well as expected. Bulbous stock was plentiful and everything in sight cleared nicely.

Club Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club was held April 24, President Hamilton presiding. The attendance was small on account of the rush attending Easter. The schedule for the Maryland Week show, to be held in November, 1916, was distributed to those present and will be mailed to absent members.

Mr. Colyn, a salesman for Holland bulbs, spoke on the difficulties encountered by the exporters of his country in getting goods to this country, particularly nursery stock.

Various Notes.

P. C. Erdman had a stall at the northwest corner of Eutaw and Lexington streets and displayed a good line of garden roses in pots and a number of high-grade rhododendrons.

James Glass specialized in hydrangeas, spiræas and heather for Easter. His Pink Pearl rhododendrons were exceptionally fine and sold well.

L. H. A. Klein featured a number of potted hyacinths and tulips, of which he disposed completely.

Stevenson Bros. had a heavy cut of Killarney and Killarney Brilliant roses of exceptionally good quality.

Edward Kress showed a fine lot of pot roses in flower and azaleas and lilacs, which moved quickly.

The Leo Niessen Co. handled some fine orchid-flowering sweet peas and good valley. A heavy crop of plumosus was unloaded by this company.

C. Fred Fauth, of Woodlawn, and the Baltimore Cut Flower Co. installed delivery trucks last week. F. C. Bauer has purchased a new touring car and Charles F. Feast is riding around in a new Overland. Herbert Wagner also has a smart touring car.

Samuel Feast & Sons last week sold an exceptionally fine lot of potted plants, principally ramblers and lilies. They had a heavy cut of peas and snapdragons.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Easter business was excellent. A general increase in trade was reported by everybody and all seemed well satisfied with the number of orders received. Ideal weather prevailed and helped to clean up all stock. Pot plants sold well. Lilies and hydrangeas were the leaders and there was an excellent lot of them on the market. Baskets filled with plants and cut flowers sold fast and at somewhat higher prices. The cut flower trade was good. There was plenty of stock to be had and everything was cleaned up before noon April 22. Sweet peas were leaders for corsage bouquets. Roses, carnations and other cut stock sold evenly. Prices were slightly advanced. Beauties and Russells were the leaders in roses. Outdoor stock had little effect on the cut flower market. Fruit trees, some of the shrubs and bulbous stock are in full bloom.

Various Notes.

Arthur Newell reports the largest trade he has ever had, particularly in pot plants, of which he sold more than he had expected.

Miss J. E. Murray had a splendid Easter trade. She was sold out completely and had no trouble in delivering orders.

The Peterson Floral Co. had a good Easter display in its large window, but by noon on Easter the display was entirely gone.

The Alpha Floral Co. sold out completely. Beauties and Russells in baskets were snapped up quickly.

A. F. Barbe says he did the largest Easter business in years. His cemetery trade was beyond his expectations. He sold a large quantity of pot plants as well as cut flowers.

The Rosery made a specialty of rustic baskets filled with bulbous stock and all of them sold well.

T. J. Noll & Co. report their Easter business double that of last year. They cleared entirely of plants and cut flowers. The large quantities of roses, lilies and sweet peas were sold before noon on Easter.

Henry Kusik & Co. sold 125,000 cut ferns last week and the sale of other lines was in proportion. An immense quantity of potted lilies was sold.

W. J. Barnes had a busy Easter. All the palms and ferns were sent out for decorations for churches and weddings. His Easter business increased considerably over that of last year.

The Geo. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. cleaned up on everything. A large quantity of out-of-town funeral work came in during the Easter rush and kept all hustling to get orders out on time.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. sold more than 900 baskets and novelties, most of which were filled with plants. This concern sold everything on hand.

Samuel Murray reports a larger Easter trade than in any previous year. The hydrangeas grown at his greenhouses were extra fine and well colored. Novelties and baskets were in heavy demand.

Ed. Humfeld is well satisfied with the way business came in. He sold a larger quantity of lilies than at any other Easter, and says he thinks the business as a whole exceeded that of last year. W. J. B.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

Various Notes.

Last week the business district was a large flower show. It did not matter which way one turned, the eyes were sure to catch a large display. A large proportion of the retail business in this city is in the hands of the Greek florists, carried on for the most part in the department and candy stores occupying the best corners. There were lilies, roses, tulips, ferns and primroses. A fine show they made; nowhere could one find better stock. It was clean, well grown and in good shape. The retailers left nothing to chance, and decorated the plants with the best and latest in ribbons and pot covers.

Will Desmond, manager for L. S. Donaldson's flower department, outdid himself this year. Although always in the lead with a huge show of Easter stock, this season he added a wonderful lot of novelties picked up at the National Flower Show.

Mrs. A. Swanson's store was gay with all kinds of Easter stock. There were handsomely displayed potted lilies, azaleas, roses, tulips, orchids, rhododendrons and hydrangeas. In baskets and boxes crotons, lilies, Boston ferns, hydrangeas and azaleas were worked with good effect.

Miss H. B. Whitted had a temporary branch store near the Tenth street and Nicollet avenue store. A fine lot of novelties in vases, mats, baskets and jardinieres was on show. Rambler roses, baby ramblers, French hydrangeas, lilies, azaleas and rhododendrons were in fine shape. Miss Whitted said business was first-rate.

The Lakewood Cemetery Association sold all its Easter stock and some customers had to go short. Lilies were a feature and second to none in the city. A batch of 10,000 tulips that had been in the ground outdoors all winter, in spite of 35 degrees below zero, were of the finest quality.

Max Kaiser was delivering stock as fast as his staff could pack it. He expected to sell everything.

Wessling's Greenhouses had disposed of all lilies and other Easter stock at top prices.

The Minneapolis Floral Co. had hard work shipping Easter stock. All azaleas, rhododendrons and the bulk of the city stocks were sold. The management reported better prices than last year.

The Chicago Avenue Greenhouses had a quick sale of all stock.

The Hiawatha Gardens Co. reported all Easter stock sold.

Hans Rosacker had a fine cut of roses and carnations, with many advance orders booked.

Nearly every florist in Minneapolis had display advertisements in the local papers. Each one tried to beat his competitor, both in style of the ads and in the quality and quantity of stock displayed at his store. It was roughly estimated that the florists placed on sale for Easter 250,000 lilies.

William F. Holmes had an attractive store for Easter week. His good taste was apparent everywhere.

H. F. Baker, of Lake Harriet, was busy with a full line of Easter stock. He reported good trade in all branches.

With many advance orders, Rice Bros. had a busy time, both in cut flowers and sundries. Everyone was working hard and overtime.

Amundson, the Florist, had a fine arrangement of baskets of plants and cut flowers.

The New York Florists were crowded from top to bottom with potted stock. They specialized in individual plants in preference to made-up stock and had a large sale.

The Sunshine Florist had a handsome display of Easter goods, both in the store and windows. F. E. B.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Business was extraordinarily good this Easter. The majority of retailers had a complete clean-out and in some instances there was difficulty in filling orders for the lack of stock. Beauties were far from sufficient in quantity, though of good quality. Other varieties of roses were limited in supply. On Saturday, March 23, at 5 p. m., there was not a rose to be had. White ones were cleared along with the others. Russell and Ophelia were in great demand. Carnations also were scarce. It is not often that all the Enchantress carnations sell with no difficulty, unless they are used for funeral work. They were in much heavier demand than usual, because of the small supply of bulbous stock. There are a few daffodils still to be had, but of an inferior grade. Jonquils are about done for.

Easter lilies, which a week previously were a drug on the market, at Easter were held at a premium. Short or long, they all sold rapidly. Prices were somewhat higher than usual. Callas were sufficient for the demand and sold quickly. Sweet peas were the feature of the market and there were some elegant ones. Many growers say that sweet peas are better this year than they have been in several years. Some excellent snapdragons were available. As yet the supply of lilacs has made no impression on the market. The demand for violets went beyond all expectations and there was an unusual call for singles. Mignonette was sufficient for all needs. Orchids were scarcer than ever before. Gardenias were substituted for them in many instances. The gardenias were of good quality and plentiful. Greens, too, were abundant, but at the end of the busy day there was little left.

Blooming plants, such as hydrangeas, azaleas, tulips, rambler roses and rhododendrons, met with an almost unparalleled sale. From the appearance of some of the retail stores on Sunday, it was evident that they had an entire clean-out. There was a large demand for hydrangeas trimmed up in baskets. The rainy weather on Easter Sunday kept a good many people at home, greatly decreasing the call for corsages.

Many inquiries are coming in for boxwood bushes and bay trees for the coming season.

Various Notes.

An interesting feature in W. J. Palmer & Son's branch store window was a huge cross filled with azalea and spiræa plants. They had a force working day and night for the entire week.

The delivery problem does not seem to be solved yet. Considerable difficulty is experienced in getting orders delivered on time in such a rush. On Easter morning many retailers had to call on other delivery concerns in order to get their parcels out on time. A. E.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

A thick mist and drizzling rain made Easter Sunday a day of general disappointment, so far as the weather was concerned. It began to threaten Friday, and Saturday was cloudy, with mists and showers. Fortunately, the majority of orders had been placed earlier in the week, but belated purchases and telephone orders combined to give the dealers one of the most complete clean-ups ever experienced, notwithstanding the unusual abundance of plants and blooms. Several florists conducted branch stores, while all the department stores and many drug and grocery stores and other places had large stocks, mostly of potted plants.

There was a good supply of lilies and bulbous stock, with rose bushes, spiræas and azaleas in great quantities. In cut flowers, violets showed a shortage, but the gap was filled by the fine supply of sweet peas. For the best stock the prices ruled about double the normal figures and even the poorest offerings were eagerly sought at some advance over regular prices.

Various Notes.

Johnston Bros. had a branch store at 220 Westminster street and were kept on the jump.

T. O'Connor reports one of the busiest Easters in his long experience, and that is going some.

F. Macrae & Sons had nearly 20,000 fine lily plants and could have sold twice that number.

John Macrae did a big retail business at a downtown stand where he has been for several years.

Charles Hunt was unable to fill all his orders on potted stock.

Macnair's two stores were crowded and, notwithstanding nearly a dozen extra clerks, he was short-handed.

Ed. Brooke had several men on duty all night Friday, preparing retail orders for shipment.

Smith, the Florist, had half a dozen autos from Friday noon until late Sunday making deliveries.

Miss Nellie O'Connor stopped taking orders early Friday, after which she would make no promise for delivery.

Koppelman & Co. had one of the biggest runs on everything in the cut flower line since opening their present store. They cleaned out practically everything in both ranges of houses, at Oaklawn and Riverside. W. H. M.

Waxahachie, Tex.—Bird Forrest lost at least half of his glass in the hail storm that swept over this section April 23. Mr. Forrest has about 25,000 square feet and, in addition to the loss of half the panes, stock was badly cut up.

EASTER developed nothing in the line of rambler roses to contest the leadership of Tausendschon. It is the best pot plant of the generation.

MANY carnation growers now are busy planting young stock in the field, the first time within memory that this task has been begun the week after Easter.

THERE never was a year in which the departure of the Easter plants was more welcome. To finish a crop of bedding plants in less than a month from the Easter stock requires genius of a high order.

THE retailer wants lilies with two or three blooms per stalk—the customer who orders a dozen lilies does not want them on two stems but on four or five. The grower meets this condition by using small bulbs and planting out in benches, or two bulbs to the pot.

AS an Easter remembrance from Secretary A. F. J. Baur, members of the American Carnation Society received the annual volume, this time containing the proceedings of the twenty-fifth convention, list of members and several illustrations. The frontispiece is a portrait of President Joseph H. Hill.

RETAIL florists have been slow to take hold of boxwood plants this season, perhaps because many found them slow sale last spring and perhaps only waiting, as usual, for the passing of Easter. The boxwood is one of the safest buys a retail florist can make; if he does not sell the plants he can cut them up and make wreaths for Memorial Day.

FOR pot plant purposes Crimson Rambler is down and out; its sport, Erna Teschendorff, has taken its place.

YVONNE RABIER, while one of the finest of polyantha roses, is not acceptable to the retail trade; it drops its petals too quickly to be satisfactory either to the retailer or his customers.

ONE of the best azaleas noted this Easter was Daybreak, a variety found in few of the catalogues, but one of exceptional merit for late work; the retail stores that had it found it sold at sight. The variety is what the French describe as tardif, so that the great size of the semi-double flowers and the even color of le point du jour do not count in its favor except where time is no object.

A SPLENDID EASTER.

One who reads the city news-letters in this issue of The Review will come to the conclusion that probably this has been the most generally satisfactory Easter in the history of the flower business. Weather conditions, while not ideal, were much better than a year ago, contributing not only to the volume of business but to the facility with which it was handled.

It is human nature for the man who did a record business to make a noise about it, and for the fellow whose sales showed a falling off to keep quiet, but there can be no doubt that last week the trade as a whole sold more plants and cut flowers than at any previous Easter.

Plants have come to occupy first place in the Easter consideration. Of course there are exceptions, but in a general way the plant growers had their banner season, being prepared with larger stocks than ever before and selling out almost to the last plant. Having bought heavily, naturally the retailers pushed plant sales. Nearly all of them cleaned up in a fairly satisfactory manner. Where so large a stock is laid in, it is too much to hope that every plant will be sold, so that little is heard of the moderate numbers of plants left on hand. In general the plants left were azaleas and hydrangeas in the larger and more expensive sizes; the small plants cleaned up completely. There seems to have been an abundance of lilies almost everywhere, with the result that wholesale prices, both for pot plants and cut flowers, did not run quite so high as in earlier seasons. While the lily is still the big seller, the better class of stores used more rose plants than ever before. Bulbous stock was less plentiful than at earlier Easters.

The strength of the Easter demand is best shown by the quantities of cut flowers sold. In most cases retailers put off ordering cut stock until they had made sure of the disposal of their pot plants. That such great quantities of stock should be sold under these conditions speaks eloquently for the total volume of business done. In a general way cut flowers were everywhere in good supply. Lilies were abundant, rose crops were large and of fine quality and carnations were better than usual at the end of April because of the cool spring. The lateness of Easter resulted in violets taking a much less conspicuous part than usual, the demand being turned to sweet peas, which everywhere sold better than ever before for Easter corsage use. In many cases it is reported that sweet peas were much more satisfactory than violets ever have been and it is predicted next year's earlier Easter will see less call for violets and more call for sweet peas than has been the case in other years. Orchids were unaccountably scarce in all the principal markets.

It is the general report the trade was late in starting and that the immense volume of business was done in a tremendous rush at the last moment. The problem confronting the trade, for future holidays, is to get the buyers started earlier. How can it be done?

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Throughout the Chicago market there is but one verdict on the question of Eastern business, and that is that it was the best in the history of the trade.

There were several causes contributing to the big business. One of them was the lateness of Easter this year, which enabled every grower to bring his crop in at the right time. Of course, this would not have been possible if the weather had been warm, but it was not. Nor is the great improvement in general business conditions to be ignored as an element in the holiday's success. The buying public had more money to spend for flowers. Yet, with all this, prices were no higher than in former years; in fact, they were a little lower. There was at no time a slump, but everything cleared with the exception of short lilies and a few white flowers.

The early part of last week opened with a heavy supply of stock and little evidence of a correspondingly heavy demand. As a result, wholesalers were beginning to feel apprehensive. But Thursday, April 20, shipping orders from distant points began to arrive. By April 21 shipping orders without end were pouring into the market from every point of the compass. The day following, true to nature, the local trade's scramble for stock began. And, as usual, a large proportion of the city buyers found the market absolutely cleared of several important items of Easter stock.

Beauties were extremely scarce and the quality of most of the small supply was distinctly inferior, but in spite of this, all stock, if even passable, sold at good prices. The rose and carnation situation of a year ago was practically duplicated. Everyone anticipated there would be more than enough roses to meet the demand and a corresponding shortage of carnations. Not so, however. Roses, though in abundant supply, cleared in almost every instance. Ward, Ophelia and Richmond were far short of the demand. When the supply of sweet peas for corsages proved unequal to the emergency, everyone seemed to want Mrs. Aaron Ward roses. Under this heavy demand, the supply of Wards was soon exhausted. Ophelia was next brought into requisition, then Sunburst. Milady, Hoosier Beauty and Killarney Brilliant enjoyed a heavy run. Killarney and White Killarney were in larger supply than other varieties, but experienced the least demand. Russell was abundant, but cleared everywhere, as it was generally substituted for medium length Beauties, of which there were but a few.

Fearing a great shortage in the supply of carnations, wholesalers had been advising the use of other stock. As a result, carnations, though only in moderate supply, were plentiful enough to fill orders. Splits again were strongly in evidence, fully twenty per cent of the receipts falling in that class. With reference to the trend of the demand, the red varieties exhibited the greatest activity.

It is quite probable that sweet peas enjoyed the heaviest demand of any one item in the market. This is partly attributable to the rapidly growing custom of wearing corsages in the Easter parades and partly to the fact that violets were in such poor condition that most wholesalers suggested the use of sweet peas in their stead. So great was the demand that long before the local trade was satisfied, there was not a pea to be found on the market.

The supply of valley was exhausted quite early in the rush, and as for cattleyas, they were not to be had at any price.

Of Easter lilies, the supply was tremendous, especially of cheap and short-stemmed stock. But they moved in no uncertain manner. Every retailer bought a large number of plants, while department and even grocery stores took a hand in the general distribution. So successful were their combined efforts that almost every window in the better districts of the city was resplendent with plants Easter morning. In spite of this, however, Easter lilies did not quite clear. Callas experienced a heavy demand April 19 for use on Holy Thursday, but with its passing they receded into the background.

Of miscellaneous stock there was enough to meet all demands, and the several items moved in a manner that left little room for complaint. Bulbous stock cut little figure this year.

In green goods, the only shortage seemed to be in smilax.

The present week opened with excellent business, but stock, as a natural consequence of better weather and the cessation of the heavy demand, is much more plentiful. Most of the retailers have a few leftover plants to work off, and everyone is beginning to get ready for Mothers' day.

What Mangel Did for Himself.

Good Friday's Evening American contained an article, written in the first person, descriptive of John Mangel's rise since he came to Chicago in 1885 from Greece with $3.50 in his pocket and started selling bananas from a pushcart. The article was one of a series entitled "What America Did for Me." It said that today Mr. Mangel owns several flat buildings on the north side, in addition to operating one of the largest and finest retail flower stores in Chicago. All the credit is given to "America," when, as a matter of fact, all the opportunities in the world would not have led to the result without such energy and acumen as that with which nature endowed this florist.

the erection of one house 60x500 feet, two houses 30x415 feet and a service building 60x100 feet, with a chimney 7x150 feet. In addition there will be a packing room 17x30 feet, tiled, on steel construction. The total cost will be approximately $65,000. The work is to be completed on or before October 1.

At Crown Point Alois Frey is cutting an extremely fine crop of snapdragons, varieties of his own raising from cross-fertilized seed.

C. W. McKellar notes an increased call for corsage bouquets for the Easter parades. He says the call this year was so strong it produced the only shortage in the market, that of flowers suitable for corsage use.

Felix Reichling says the records show last week's sales to have made the largest Easter total in the history of the Peter Reinberg establishment.

One Rudolph Cohn has been arrested for paying a bill at Charles T. Neiglick's with a bad check, pocketing cash change. The complaint was signed by Robert D. Vardaman.

Early in the morning of April 21 the office of the Geo. Wittbold Co., on Buckingham place, was the scene of another attempted robbery. Two watchmen, on duty at the rear, noticed that the light in the office had been turned out and one of them went to investigate. He encountered two masked men, who demanded information as to where the money was kept. The watchman refused to answer and was dragged into the new Wittbold apartment building and severely beaten. The robbers escaped. The other watchman called Louis Wittbold, who had the injured man taken to the hospital.

N. J. Wietor took time during the Easter rush to contract for a few train loads of West Virginia smokeless coal for next season's supply. He expects to see a Mothers' day demand almost equal to that for Easter.

The local retail trade is keeping the seedsmen on the jump. At Winterson's Seed Store the crowd already has cleaned up many items, but the slow sale of boxwood is a subject for comment.

A. T. Pyfer, whose predictions regarding the course of the carnation market have been remarkably accurate this season, says he does not expect the market to be overloaded with carnations any time during May, but that he looks for a dip in the rose market between now and Mothers' day.

Speaking of rose crops, the E. C. Amling Co. reports that Wendland & Keimel Co., Elmhurst, cut 93,000 roses last week. C. J. Michelsen noted an unprecedentedly large out-of-town call for sweet peas, three of the shipping orders requiring a total of 87,500.

The Easter window of C. A. Samuelson was perhaps the finest of many excellent displays at this store, and showed a result of Ed Enders' trip to the eastern shows. It was a rose garden, including a pergola covered with Tausendschon and Dorothy Perkins.

George C. Wagner plans to sell out and retire. His is the old E. Hobbs place, one of the oldest in Chicago. Mr. Wagner has been there ever since he was boy.

The Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co., which recently absorbed the James H. Rice Co., is making a number of alterations in the Rice building, which it will occupy sometime during May.

A. F. Poehlmann and wife celebrated their twenty-first wedding anniversary April 18.

The first word heralding the near approach of the peony season comes from H. B. Kennicott, of Kennicott Bros. Co. He says there is every indication of a peony crop of most excellent quality on the Kennicott farms. Incidentally, the firm's Easter business this year exceeded that of last year by thirty-five per cent.

Among those whose work attracted special attention at the annual flower sale for the benefit of the Memorial hospital for crippled children, held last week in the Congress hotel, was R. J. Sampson, formerly with H. W. Buckbee, Rockford, Ill., now gardener for Edward F. Swift. He staged a table of blooming plants which were ticketed "Extra well grown." The sale was a large one, but most of the stock was supplied by retailers at prices slightly above cost.

Fred Lautenschlager returned home for Easter, after having made an eastern trip that included exhibits at the Philadelphia and New York shows for Kroeschell Bros. Co.

Report comes from the Armitage Floral Shop, 2065 Milwaukee avenue, that the volume of this, its first, Easter's trade far exceeded the hopes of its proprietors.

According to M. Pekarek, of the California Floral Co., 3402 West Twenty-sixth street, he enjoyed such a lively Easter demand that his stock was completely cleared out April 22.

Much of the success of the Easter business must, in the opinion of Frank Johnson, of the A. L. Randall Co., be attributed to general business conditions, which, he says, are the best in years. To his way of thinking, there is no excuse for an able-bodied man's being out of work in the United States.

As they are through grafting rose stock, Weiland & Risch are cutting some splendid Champ Weiland, which they are sending to the downtown salesroom for display purposes. The firm enjoyed the best Easter trade in its history.

Word comes from Allie Zech, of Zech & Mann, that they cleared everything daily from April 20 on, except Easter lilies. He says orders for Mothers' day already are coming in.

"From a trade standpoint," says C. L. Washburn, of Bassett & Washburn, "this was the greatest Easter on record." He says the Chicago market supplied flowers for the whole country, as there were any number of large shipments to New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Denver, Winnipeg, Can., and Dallas, Tex. This, he thinks, surely establishes Chicago as the nation's greatest flower market.

By way of celebrating their first Easter in their present quarters, O. A. & L. A. Tonner worked late every night last week.

Members of the trade will be pleased to learn that Miss Agatha Greeley has resumed her place with the John Kruchten Co. Miss Zandra Anderson is now quite recovered and at her desk.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Easter reports indicate that business was satisfactory. It was a big plant Easter. The weather was glorious. The wholesale market never before was so loaded down with cut stock as this year, and the quality was excellent. Large consignments came in daily last week and an extra large supply arrived April 21 and 22. Roses were abundant; only the fancy grades brought a good price. Among these were Russells, Ophelias, Wards and Hoosier Beauties. Carnations, too, were abundant and the prices on these dropped to $3 and $4 per hundred. Although the demand for them was large, it did not consume the supply. Sweet peas glutted the market. Orchids were scarce and the demand for them was large. There was a large cut of lilies and these were sold at $12.50 per hundred. Snapdragons did not sell so well. Bulbous stock was at its height. The demand for tulips, daffodils, valley and Dutch hyacinths was large. There also was a good supply of mignonette, daisies, stocks and forget-me-nots. Greens were plentiful. On the whole, the demand the first part of the week was somewhat slow, but by Friday shipping orders were numerous. A large local demand cleaned the market Saturday. Lilies, the main Easter flowers, were overplentiful, both in cut stock and pot plants.

Various Notes.

The Review's advertisers are again thankful for the many telegraph orders received for Easter. F. H. Weber says his advertisement paid him especially well.

George Waldbart's Easter business was large. He was completely sold out of blooming plants early Sunday morning. Extra fine rhododendrons, azaleas and Tausendschon roses were seen here.

Fred C. Weber did a hustling Easter business and disposed of a tremendous amount of stock. His specimen rambler roses, lilies, rhododendrons, azaleas and other plants were equal to the best seen anywhere.

Miss M. S. Newman and the Ayres Floral Co. had a splendid trade. Bulbous stock in pans, hydrangeas, lilies and azaleas had a great sale at these places. The pot plant business greatly exceeded that in cut flowers.

The Kelley Floral Co. and Ostertag Bros. used vacant stores as annexes for the large plant trade, which was the best in years.

A big Easter rush, the biggest in their experience, was reported by Grimm & Gorly. Their enlarged store looked like a flower show.

David Geddis, manager of Vandervoort's flower department, showed some of the finest blooming plants in gay Easter dress. He reports a good sale of lily plants at 50 cents each.

E. W. Guy, the St. Clair Floral Co., Gust Grossart and Henry Emunds, all leading Belleville florists, say Easter trade was as good as any in the past. Blooming plants, as usual, had the call.

C. Young & Sons Co., at Fourteenth and Olive streets, attracted the attention of the Easter plant buyers with a magnificent plant display.

Fred H. Weber's show house was ablaze with a handsome plant display, which brought him good returns in Easter orders.

Sanders, Young Bros., J. W. Boerm, Kalisch Bros. Floral Co. and H. Young & Son report a large business in all lines.

In the south end, Windler, Schoenle, Eggeling, Beyer and Bergstermann report a great sale of plants. Lilies, as usual, had the call. Attractive window displays were seen at these stores.

Kruse, Bruenig and Meyer had excellent displays in their show houses and all did a rushing business last week.

The north end florists, the Bentzen Floral Co., Brix, Mullanphy, Koenig Floral Co. and Meinhardt, had the usual heavy Easter business. Cut flowers and plants sold well.

The Schackelford Nursery Co. supplied the west end florists with a large quantity of excellent outdoor bulbous stock. The daffodils and Darwin tulips were of extra fine quality.

The Retail Florists' Association held its monthly meeting April 17, at the Mission Inn Garden. Owing to the Easter preparations, the attendance was small. No business of importance was transacted, but all matters were laid aside for the next meeting, May 15.

George Angermueller's Easter shipping orders in supplies were larger than ever. He says the southwestern florists are largely calling on this market for supplies and cut flowers.

The Windler Wholesale Floral Co. received a large shipment of florists' supplies last week, in good time for Easter demands.

C. A. Kuehn has been marketing some extra fine valley, grown by Henry Aue. First-class sweet peas and carnations were seen here.

The shipping demand for cut flowers at the establishment of Henry Berning was large and the great quantities of stock handled here enabled him to fill all orders promptly.

The Riessen Floral Co. has been reorganized and will continue business at 21 South Broadway. The new officers

The W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. had large consignments of seasonable stock of extra fine quality last week.

The Western Union Telegraph Co. had a handsome flower-bedecked window, in which was displayed a large sign: "Flower orders telegraphed to any city in the United States."

Julius Koenig, city forester, in a letter to florists, is soliciting coöperation in encouraging the planting of trees. Mr. Koenig is chairman of the tree planting committee.

The Missouri Botanical Garden is using street car placards to advertise the free tulip display at the garden. Superintendent Ohlweiler says the bed of 30,000 tulips was a grand sight and attracted thousands of visitors all the week.

J. J. Beneke has sold his lease of the stand at 1216 Olive street, where he has been doing business since 1876. He has retired from business. His plans for the future have not been definitely settled.

The St. Louis County Growers' Association will hold its regular monthly meeting May 4, at the Eleven Mile House. Secretary Deutschmann says he is looking for a large attendance, as Easter business will be the topic of the evening. Other important business will also be transacted.

F. J. Ammann says I made a slip of the pen when I said business prevented his attendance at the National Flower Show; the fact is, a little thing like business would not keep Mr. Ammann away from duty! The reason Mr. Ammann remained at home was that his aged mother was critically ill in South St. Louis. I am pleased to report she now is much improved. J. J. B.

week had a large number of plants on sale in the store of the Steiger-Dudgeon Co. W. M. P.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Easter Market.

Easter brought the greatest demand for plants and flowers that Philadelphia has ever experienced. The general prosperity of the country, the splendid condition of the stock and the extremely favorable weather combined to bring the most satisfactory results.

Considerably over one-half of the value of greenhouse products this Easter was in plants. Every variety of plants that was well grown and successfully timed sold well, at prices rather better than those of last season. Lilies were in heavy supply. Most of them were giganteum; the rest were multiflorum and Formosa; the latter were grown for cutting. The average price on lilies was $10 to $12 per hundred; short-stemmed and poor stock sold at $6 to $8 per hundred. The large number of these short or poor lilies was a drawback to the general satisfaction. There were more spiræas than had been anticipated. Prices ranged from 35 cents to $1 each. Some sparsely flowered spiræas were left over and some were late. Most of the spiræas were Gladstone. There was a larger number of the pink Queen Alexandra than usual, which, when well done, was popular. Azaleas were fine, the carried-over plants particularly so. Practically everything in the shape of a respectably flowered azalea, of whatever color it might be, was sold.

Roses showed a larger percentage of late plants than any other kind of blooming stock forced. The large, strongly growing varieties led; Tausendschon was first; Hiawatha, Dorothy Perkins, Lady Gay and Excelsa followed. The trained plants were rare. Most of them were just grown into perfect specimens of the bush rose. The baby type showed improvement. Baby Rambler has been discarded by the wide-awakes. Its place is taken by Orleans, Phyllis, Erna Teschendorff and Ellen Poulsen. Quite a lot of Magna Charta and some of the better hybrids also were offered.

The hydrangeas, through alum or iron filings or something, seemed to show a decided predilection for Alice blue, which color seemed popular. Another point of interest in the hydrangeas is the gradual advance of some of the finer French varieties in popularity; they are more refined in appearance than Otaksa. Owing to their different natures, each of these varieties requires skill in timing to flower them all at once. Rhododendrons were good and a little more plentiful than in previous seasons. Genistas are retrograding. While beautiful with their lovely yellow flowers and delicate green foliage, they are fearfully perishable, even under favorable conditions. Lilac, valley in pots and pans, daisies, cinerarias and deutzias were all grown in moderate numbers. The bulbous flowers had a great following; they were not equal to the demand. Hyacinths led at advanced prices; daffodils and tulips also were largely used.

BERGER BROS.

It is a well known fact that in May Greenhouse Flowers are very fine and very reasonable.

In the foliage plants, great numbers were sold; palms, largely in decorative sizes, ferns, crotons, dracænas, pandanus, etc. The colored foliage plants sold best in the medium sizes at from 50 cents to $1.25 each. The shipping demand for Easter plants was a little larger than that of last season. The greatest gain was in the local demand. The favorable weather and the absence of that terrible Saturday-before-Easter snowstorm materially aided. The local stores bought freely; the final clean-up accomplished Saturday afternoon and evening was remarkable. Plants that were not good enough for the stores or not ready in time went to the curbstone marts, where they brought prices that were often better than wholesale. The greatest of these marts was on City Hall Plaza. North, east, south and west the Plaza bloomed like a flower garden. It bloomed not in vain, for nearly everything sent there was sold and carried away by the happy purchasers. There were lots of other marts, at Fifty-second and Market streets; in Frankford, in Kensington, in Germantown—they were everywhere, all helping to swell the sum total of Easter plant sales for the hard-working florist.

The Cut Flower Market at Easter.

Considering the great size of the plant market, it was wonderful that the cut flower market should have exhibited such strength so late in the season. Of course, the weather helped enormously, as did the fine quality of the flowers. The shipping demand opened briskly April 19 and was well maintained that day and for the two days following. Before it ended the local demand was in full swing, keeping pace with the supply more nearly than is usually seen, until the close of business on the night of April 22. The scattering orders that came in Easter Sunday morning were sufficient to consume much that remained. Prices were excellent.

The sweet pea undoubtedly was the leading Easter flower. The supply of peas was nowhere equal to the demand. This is due partly to the fact that it is well-nigh impossible to produce enough sweet peas for a late Easter, when violets are out of the running, and partly to the fact that the growers of these dainty flowers had not made the most of their opportunity. The timing was bad. The height of the sweet pea crop passed with many growers three weeks ago. This means that they not only did not have so many flowers as they could have had, but also that these flowers graded lower. In other words, they were less valuable. Considering these conditions, sweet peas brought high prices, ranging from 65 cents all the way up to $2 per hundred. A few brought more. The lower grades of peas were flowers that nobody but the street men would look at the week before.

The other corsage flowers shared to a lesser extent the popularity of the sweet pea. Orchids were so extremely scarce that they shot up from 75 cents on advance orders to $1 each on all orders received after the middle of the week. Even at this record price there were not enough of them. Valley brought $4, $5 and $6 per hundred. The first price was on poor stock; the second on advance orders; the last on late orders and especially fine spikes. While the supply of valley was larger than expected, it was at times insufficient. Violets were only satisfactory where special arrangements were made for rushing them through from Rhinebeck, P. D. Q. Otherwise the New York doubles were unsatisfactory. Local violets were rather well over. All this helped the sweet peas. The price on violets was from $10 per thousand down. Gardenias were plentiful, good and popular. The prices on them ranged from $1.25 to $3 per dozen.

Carnations were in fair supply and in toll-loll demand. That means that there was no special life in it. Really good Mrs. C. W. Ward and whites brought from $4 to $5 per hundred, and extra special selects $6. But there were lots and lots of carnations sold at from $2 to $3 and it took selling to sell them.

Roses were, in point of value, the most important cut flowers at Easter. Particularly fine Hadley and Mrs. Charles Russell brought from $25 to $30 per hundred, but I have some doubt whether this phraseology be not misleading, for it was not easy to find many Mrs. Charles Russell or Hadley roses worth that much. Still, a few brought it, but few compared with the thousands and thousands of Killarney roses, their sisters, their cousins and their aunts, which brought from $3 to $8 per hundred. A few hundreds of this family brought $10, $12 and, it is said, even $15. Ophelia and Sunburst were popular at from $12 down, mostly down, while dear little Mrs. Aaron Ward soared as high as $10, thanks to her swell corsage company. There were white roses left over and some others, but, considering the number, not so many. The weak points in the cut flower market were Easter lilies at from $8 to $10; callas at from $2 per dozen and down, down, down—nobody ever saw so many callas; yellow daisies, white daisies, mignonette and, most surprising of all, snapdragons were flower market report without mentioning Beauties. The best brought $6 per dozen; a few went higher; the shorts $3 to $4 per hundred, and they were short indeed. In fact, it may truly be said that Beauties were in rather short supply. There were few mediums. The last of the lilac was in for Easter. It was hardly up to the mark, but welcome at $1 per bunch. The first peonies, pink and white, and gladioli, in three colors, have followed the southern daffodils from the south.

Easter in the Retail Stores.

The aim of every retailer at Easter is to clean out, or, to describe it more accurately, to buy all the stock he dare and sell it. To this laudable end every nerve is strained. A trip around the retail stores shows that this ambition was more nearly attained this Easter than usual. It was a pleasure to see the eagerness with which empty spaces that had been piled high with bloomers were pointed out by the smiling chiefs. Plants sold well, but they did not do this unaided. Lovely baskets, soft ribbon, bewitching combinations and energetic salesmen helped materially. In some cases the doors were closed perforce, to check the onrush of customers, flower hungry, the proprietors said. In other cases hurry-up calls for vans of plants and boxes of cut flowers made it possible to keep the doors open, I was told, with no less pride. In every case everybody did his best and everybody reaped a harvest. Whether it was an erica in its blue basket, with ribbon of Alice blue, or the big combination pan with its swell azalea center, mattered little in the general result. Each found a friend.

Phil.

J. D. Eisele states that the congestion of orders this spring is the worst in the history of the house of Dreer. The entire staff is working industriously to keep abreast of the flood, but it has been impossible to keep orders from accumulating.

Trade here for Easter was the heaviest ever. An enormous quantity of stock was sold. The number of potted plants to be seen was never equaled and all were cleaned up. Azaleas were in great demand, but the majority were overripe. There was a big supply of lilies and most of them were in fine condition. It is doubtful if so many lilies were ever disposed of here before. Rhododendrons came in for their share of the demand; so, also, did ramblers, but the readiest sellers were the baby ramblers in sizes priced at 75 cents to $1.50. These sold on sight and as many more could have been disposed of. There were quantities of bulbous stock in pans, also primulas, spiræas, lilacs, etc., and they were all taken in the finish. All available decorative stock went out on decorations. This made the houses look quite bare, after being filled with Easter blooms and greens.

In cut flowers the trade was heavy and the quality of the stock was never better. Roses were in fine condition. While Beauties were scarce, there were other roses of quality that took their place, such as Reid, Russell, Ophelia, Sunburst, Kaiserin, Richmond, Killarney, etc. Ophelia was in the best of condition and was really preferred above all others. Carnations were not so plentiful as was expected, but there were about enough to go the rounds. Sweet peas were in great demand and thousands more could have been sold, as the corsage work was never so heavy as this Easter and everything available was used for this purpose. J. M.

The Market.

The consensus of opinion is that the Easter trade this year was enormous. That it has set a record is fully apparent, even at this early writing. The lateness of Easter this year and the unfavorable weather preceding the holiday did not have the slightest depreciatory effect in this vicinity.

The public ordered flowers late this year. The bulk of the business was transacted April 22, and this feature made the holiday difficult for the florist who did not have a large sales and delivery force. The most noticeable feature of the Easter business was the select class of trade. High-grade flowers, especially in the cut flowers, were heaviest in demand, although all grades were eagerly bought. The report everywhere is that the supply, although great, was wholly unequal to the demand. This was more noticeable in cut flowers than in plants, although the majority of florists were entirely sold out of potted bulbous stock and could have sold many more plants had they been available.

There was a fine supply of roses, Shawyer, Killarney and Russell predominating in the pink varieties; Richmond and Rhea Reid in the red, although these were far less plentiful than the pink; Sunburst, Ophelia and Ward in the yellow; Kaiserin and White Killarney in the white varieties. The carnation crop from the local growers was quite large. Easter lilies were sufficient, and they were the only flowers of which this could be said. Snapdragons were cut in great numbers and were of excellent quality, with stems thirty-six to forty inches in length. The supply of cut bulbous stock was large, especially of tulips, jonquils, daffodils and narcissi; the demand was especially good.

Orchids were short of the demand. The supply of cattleyas from local growers was good and the quality excellent. Valley was poor and hard to obtain. Violets were not to be had within reasonable distance. Aaron Ward roses, forget-me-nots and swainsonas were used to a great extent for corsages. Sweet peas were plentiful poeticus narcissi were entirely sold out. Martha Washington geraniums, pelargoniums, valley and begonias formed a good variety and sold well. Easter lily plants were of superb quality and the supply was more than equal to the demand. Many of the florists' forces worked practically all night Saturday, filling cut flower orders and making corsages for Easter delivery, and many stores did not close their doors until 5 o'clock Easter Sunday afternoon.

Various Notes.

The new flower store that went into business last week is owned by Ed Hauswirth, formerly with the Bradley Flower Shop, of this city, and for the last three years in the Chicago market. Mr. Hauswirth was located temporarily, during the Easter business, at 210 West Berry street, but has secured a three years' lease of the store at 220 West Berry street, where he will be located after May 1. He had a fine line of Easter flowers and plants and had an encouraging Easter business.

Edgar Wenninghoff, the Calhoun street florist, rented another store room at the corner of Calhoun and Washington streets, where he had a handsome display of plants and cut flowers. His Easter business was large. The demand for cut flowers was equal to, if not greater than, that for plants.

Markey Bros. had lilies and a wide variety of potted plants. Here, too, the plant trade was large, and the cut flowers ran a close second.

BOSTON.

The Market.

It cannot truthfully be called the best Easter Boston ever has had, but it undoubtedly would have beaten all previous records had weather conditions been better. April 3 last year we had the worst snow storm of the winter, starting about noon. April 22 this year, at almost the same hour, a cold, pitiless northeast rain mixed with sleet, the heaviest storm in many weeks, set in and seriously hurt retail trade and the wholesale flower markets. As Good Friday had been dark and threatening, the weather was decidedly discouraging for Easter trade.

It was more than ever a plant Easter. All the big growers sold out clean at good prices and plants were pushed ahead of cut flowers at all the stores. Lilies were, as usual, the greatest sellers. These were to be seen on every hand, including large quantities at dry goods and 5 and 10-cent stores. Rose plants came next in favor and met with a big sale. Tausendschon was easily the leader; sales of this variety must have almost equaled that of all other ramblers combined. Dorothy Perkins, Hiawatha, Excelsa, Wedding Bells and American Pillar came next in favor. There was a big sale of polyantha types, also hybrid perpetuals. Azaleas met with a large sale, but there was some surplus. French hydrangeas sold much better than the old Otaksas, but were not particularly popular. There was a big sale of Dutch bulbs in pans, also of primroses, polyanthus and myosotis. Hard-wooded plants, such as ericas, boronias, acacias and camellias, were less conspicuous than usual, owing to the lateness of the season. Boronias sold well. Genistas sold tolerably well. Other plants, including Rhododendron Pink Pearl, Clematis Jackmani, lilacs, herbaceous calceolarias, spiræas, magnolias, malus, marguerites and bougainvilleas, sold in large numbers. Among the Dutch bulbs, Darwin tulips appeared in quantity and sold well. Pots of valley were popular.

Coming to cut flowers, the market was good April 18, 19 and 20. It weakened somewhat on Good Friday and took a decided slump April 22. Growers followed the familiar practice of hoarding stock until the last day. It was disastrous, as usual. Roses sold well until April 22, when they weakened. American Beauties of the best grades sold well at $25 to $30 per hundred. Few were willing to pay higher prices. Hadley made up to $25 per hundred. Hoosier Beauty, Russell and Ophelia sold from $4 to $20 per hundred, a small number higher. White roses, as usual, went poorly, and yellows only moderately well. The various pink Killarneys were in good demand, as were Shawyer, Miller, D'Arenberg, Key, Taft and Maryland. Carnations made $6 as a maximum price, but broke badly April 22. The popular varieties were Pink Delight, Alice, Ward, Matchless, Benora and Rosette.

Violets sold at $12 to $15 per thousand. A few singles appeared, but these were small. Doubles were of good quality. Sweet peas were abundant and in tremendous demand at $1 to $2 per hundred. Peas seemed to be the most popular flower on the market. Pansies, primroses and polyanthus all sold well. Snapdragons of grand quality appeared in unwieldy quantities and many were unsold. Yellow marguerites made $1 to $3 per hundred, according to quality. There was an abundance of these, also a good number of whites. Lilium candidum was popular at $6 per hundred buds. Cut longiflorums sold only moderately well. Mignonette was much overstocked. Valley was scarce at $4 to $5 per hundred. Tulips, daffodils and hyacinths sold well until the general slump came. Some ixias, sparaxis, Peach Blossom gladioli, ranunculi, anemones, pink larkspurs, hardy delphiniums and tritonias were noted. Calendulas were druggy. Cornflowers sold fairly well, pink being preferred to blue.

Gardenias of the best grades made $3 to $4 per dozen, but short-stemmed stock sold much lower. Of cattleyas there was almost a famine. C. Schroederæ made $6 to $7 per dozen and C. Mossiæ made as much as $9 to $12, in some cases even more. Asparagus sold remarkably well.

Business April 24 was adversely affected by the surplus carried over and prices showed a general decline. The continued cold weather prevents an excessive output and quality remains good.

Easter with the Retailers.

At Carbone's the volume of business exceeded that of all previous years. A large assortment of choice stock is carried here. Among other varieties of plants noted here were Jackmani and Miss Bateman clematis, magnolias, herbaceous calceolarias, Lilium candidum, crinums and boronias. Tausendschon was far the best selling rose. Among cut flowers Ixia viridiflora, Narcissus albicans, ranunculi and anemones proved popular among the smaller varieties.

Harry Quint, at 520 Boylston street, has an unequaled location for making an open-air, garden-like display and took full advantage of it. He had a grand display of flowering plants and did a splendid business. He pointed out Pelargonium Easter Greeting as a desirable novelty for Easter.

noted some nice chorizemas, strelitzias, boronias, hybrid delphiniums and crinums. Easter trade was ahead of 1915.

At Zinn's Tausendschon roses, lilies, azaleas and French hydrangeas proved heavy sellers. Business here was satisfactory.

At Galvin's, on Park street, were especially fine specimem bougainvilleas, marguerites, Tausendschon roses, azaleas and ericas. A large volume of business was done.

The Houghton-Gorney Co. always has tasteful window arrangments, the flowers being less crowded than in many other stores. A splendid Easter trade was done. Among other good things in the way of flowering plants were hybrid lilacs, malus, magnolias, Spiræa Peach Blossom and bougainvilleas. The favorite rose was Tausendschon.

Wax Bros., on Tremont street, are always hustling and I found them rushed with business. One window of Easter lilies and yellow marguerites and another of roses and azaleas were finely arrayed. A beautiful casket cover of Easter lilies and valley was furnished for the Talbot funeral April 22.

At Penn's emporium, 124 Tremont street, everyone was on the jump and it had been a case of night and day work for several days to keep abreast of orders. Heavy advertising in the leading Boston dailies brought a flood of orders. The windows and store were most tastefully arranged and plants were charmingly decorated, which enhanced their value. Lilies, Tausendschon roses and azaleas sold best among plants. April 22 a force of eighteen autos and forty-nine messenger boys was used in making deliveries of the heaviest Easter business the firm has had.

At J. Newman & Sons', Tremont street, lilies had much the heaviest sale. Other favorites were roses, bougainvilleas, spiræas, azaleas and bulbs in pans.

The Boston Cut Flower Co. passed its 1915 volume of business. Specially good sellers were lilies, Tausendschon roses, azaleas and French hydrangeas.

Various Notes.

Noteworthy among the many fine roses seen in Boston for Easter were the magnificent Hadley, Russell, Thayer, Storey and Killarney Queen roses from the Waban Rose Conservatories. These were in a class by themselves.

The Sutermeister Estate, of Readville, sold thousands of pans of bulbs for Easter, selling out clean. Couronne d'Or, Rose Luisante and Murillo tulips, Victoria and Golden Spur narcissi, Gertrude, Grand Maitre and L'Innocence hyacinths were the leaders.

Welch Bros. Co. reports a fine volume of business. Roses and sweet peas sold particularly well. Valley was in short supply; carnations, snapdragons and bulb stock in excess of the demand. Large sales of lilies in pots, shipped direct from the growers, were made.

At the next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, May 16, Thomas Coles, head gardener to General S. M. Weld, will read a paper on rock gardening. The club's field day on or about May 15, according to the season, at General Weld's, is sure to prove a popular one. An immense assortment of rock plants is to be found here, all most tastefully planted.

William H. Ward, of Montvale, had a fine Easter crop of callas, sweet peas, carnations and forget-me-nots. He will start cutting Gladiolus The Bride this week.

The Halifax Garden Co. is getting fine cuts of Taft, Ophelia Sunburst and Killarney roses, Beacon, Benora, Ward, Pink Delight and Matchless carnations, also snapdragons, ixias and sparaxis.

H. M. Robinson & Co. report Easter sales as ahead of previous years, all departments showing an increase.

James Wheeler, of Natick, had the heaviest shipments of yellow marguerites of any local growers and their quality was such that they sold quickly. Mr. Wheeler's carnations were also in good crop.

The W. W. Edgar Co. reports sales as far ahead of all previous years. They were practically cleaned out.

James Philbrick and W. E. Turner, of Woburn, and C. T. Beasley, of East Milton, were heavy shippers of high-grade pansies for the Easter trade. Pansies in large bunches proved popular.

The Boston Rose Co. handled a lot of American Beauties of fine quality for Easter. They also had superb Hadley, Russell, Ophelia and Killarney Queen from the Montgomery Co.

W. C. Stickel, of Lexington, was one of the earliest shippers of Gladiolus Peach Blossom. His Pink Delight, Matchless and Benora carnations also were good.

The Fottler, Fiske, Rawson Co., Faneuil Hall Square, did a fine business in Easter plants. It has been a rush in the seed department of late.

For the big exhibition in Horticultural hall, May 10 to 14, visitors will be relieved to find that the terrible red brick walls have been painted a light color.

W. S. Phelps, of Lexington, is cutting a fine lot of hardy delphiniums, anemones, ranunculi and Spanish iris.

John McFarland, of North Easton, did a fine Easter trade. All his lilies sold, Galvin's taking a large proportion of them. W. N. C.

would provide an area of 20,000 square feet for display space, which he thought would be ample. The hall was located three blocks from Rice's hotel, which would be headquarters, and five blocks from the convention garden. Work on the convention garden, he said, was in active progress, and its success was practically assured. Some action had been taken, he said, in regard to getting low railroad rates to Houston, and it seemed quite probable that a one and one-third rate would be secured over all railroads in the United States.

The committee on convention garden was appropriated a sum not to exceed $500 for purposes of the garden.

Adjournment was then taken until 10 a. m. Wednesday.

The first business at Wednesday morning's session was the reading of the report of the auditing committee, which found the reports of the secretary and treasurer to be correct, and complimented these officers upon the efficient work shown in the reports.

The matter of arrangements for the trade exhibits at Houston was again discussed, and it was decided to make the rate for exhibition space 40 cents per square foot.

A Publicity Campaign.

The publicity committee, through its chairman, Irwin Bertermann, reported progress. The committee had not had a full meeting. Consequently, a report could not be presented at this time. Mr. Bertermann, however, made a short address, in which he embodied his personal ideas. It was evident that the prevailing idea as to a publicity campaign was that its cost was not within the reach of the society. He was of the opinion that a small beginning might be made through the employment of a capable man, well versed in matters pertaining to the business, with compensation of $500 to $1,000 per year for his services, and he made this recommendation. A lengthy discussion of this proposition ensued. Finally, on motion, it was decided that a publicity man be engaged to operate under the direction of the secretary, at a salary of $15 per week, with the approval of the publicity committee, any legitimate expenses to be vouched for by the chairman of the committee; and, further, that if the committee should see fit to send out an appeal for funds to carry the campaign further, it is authorized to do so.

Mothers' Day.

A communication from the Mothers' Day International Association, Inc., was read, asking the society to coöperate with the association in giving publicity to the proper day for the celebration of Mothers' day, the second Sunday in May, and the fact that the emblem of the association is the white carnation.

On motion of Mr. Kasting, the board unanimously acceded to the request, and a copy of the resolution was immediately given out to representatives of the daily press and Associated Press.

by the association headed by Miss Anna Jarvis was discussed at length and, on motion, the secretary was instructed to send an appeal to all the members of the society for a subscription toward the Mothers' day fund.

The secretary was directed to invite the presentation of two essays at the Houston convention.

Adjournment was then taken until after luncheon.

At the final session many matters tending to make the work of the society of greater service to its members were considered, among them the compilation of a trade directory which should be reliable and strictly up-to-date. Some earnest discussion upon the subject ensued, resulting in the carriage of a motion that a committee of three be appointed to look into the advisability of the issuance of a trade directory by the society, or any other publication, the committee to report at the Houston convention.

The secretary was instructed to prepare an order of business for the convention, and another one for the meetings of the executive board, anything not covered to be proceeded with under Roberts' Rules of Order.

The professor explained that he appeared before the board as the representative of members of the society connected with the faculties of different universities and colleges who desired, in the interests of the society, to organize a section to be composed of all members interested in educational and research work pertaining to the profession. The group was strongly interested along certain lines, the work being sufficiently important to warrant the support of the society to the extent of making it a section and furnishing accommodations in the way of quarters for its members at the society's different exhibitions, where contact could be had with florists and others having problems which merited the active interest of such a section. Such a section, he suggested, should be known as the "College Florists' Section." The proposition proving favorable to the board, the section as stated was on motion authorized.

Other matters were considered informally, taking up the time of the board until adjournment. At the close of the meeting Mr. Welch pointed out that his membership on the board was practically then expiring, and in a graceful speech he expressed the pleasure he had experienced in meeting at different times with his brother members and his regret at not being able officially to continue with them, but he was satisfied that the affairs of the society were in good hands and the organization would be kept moving along progressive lines.

After a motion directing the secretary to transmit a letter of thanks to the local organization for courtesies shown to the board, adjournment was taken to Monday, August 14, at Houston.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, John M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Thirty-fourth annual convention, Chicago, June 20 to 22, 1916.

T. Sakata, of Sakata Nurseries, Kanagawa, Japan, is in the United States to see who wants lily bulbs.

L. L. May, of St. Paul, who is in the south for his health, is reported as greatly benefited by the change.

The canners say the 1916 acreage of peas will be reduced materially and one hears of several packers offering seed peas.

Growers are not finding it at all easy to get the bean acreage they need this year. The 1916 crop will almost certainly be short.

Charles N. Page, who has wintered in southern California, is planning to attend the Chicago convention of the American Seed Trade Association.

In spite of the general shortage of seeds, so much talked about during the winter, customers are not turned away from any seed store without something to plant.

The British trade press is felicitating the country over the fact that the authorities are drawing tighter the embargo against German seeds exported through neutral ports.

Labor shortage steadily becomes a more important factor with the European growers of seeds, bulbs and nursery stock, affecting those in Holland and Denmark as well as in the countries that are at war.

The Bloomfield Nursery & Seed Co., of which H. R. Engleman is president, is a new concern at Monticello, Fla. A specialty is made of watermelon seed, some 500 acres being grown under contract for seed only, no melons being shipped.

The Western Seedsmen's Association held its annual meeting April 22, at the Rome hotel, Omaha, Neb. After the meeting the members sat down to a five-course banquet and later enjoyed an automobile ride through the city.

The Dutch bulb salesmen are starting for home. Some of them are taking the usual route through England, but a majority are awaiting the sailing of a Dutch steamer. They all say they have had an excellent season in the United States in spite of some difficulties resulting from 1915 crop bulbs failing to flower as expected.

There is fair prospect that the June convention of the American Seed Trade Association will break all records for attendance. While there are no vital questions before the trade this season, save the one of keeping the business going on a profitable basis, Chicago is so centrally located that nearly everybody will come to swap experiences and pick up information.

SEED EXPORTS INCREASE.

Exports of vegetable seeds and of certain flower seeds from the United States are on the increase, according to official figures. Excluding cotton seed, flaxseed, grass and clover seeds, the following are the exports of "all other"

WINTER SWEET PEAS.

We had thought in America that A. C. Zvolanek and George W. Kerr were doing all the pioneer work on the winter-flowering type of sweet peas, but apparently we are much mistaken, as according to the articles recently appearing in Australia it would appear as if the Australians were even going ahead of us in this work.

It is interesting to learn that they are using Yarrawa almost exclusively as the seed-bearing parent in their crosses. This is just duplicating what Mr. Kerr has been doing from the time he first flowered Yarrawa at Burpee's Fordhook Farms some four seasons ago. He is looking forward with interest to second generation crosses from Yarrawa which will flower this season.

GOVERNMENT SEED TESTING.

Its Effect on the Seed Trade.

"Twenty-six states have passed laws regulating the sale of seeds," writes E. Brown, botanist in charge of the government seed laboratory at Washington, "and in most of them certain labels indicating quality are demanded, but the information thus conveyed is meager at best, and is required only when sales are made within the state. In only one state has there been an attempt to apply the provisions of the law to keeping out of its boundaries seeds which would not be permitted sale within them. No statement of quality is required with the large proportion of agricultural seeds sold from one state into another.

"Seed testing gives the seedsman accurate information about the seeds he is selling and makes it possible for him to conduct his business with that intelligent interest which has too often been lacking, but which is rapidly becoming necessary to the successful seed merchant. Through the increased attention that is given to the importance of good seed the general quality of commercial seed has greatly improved, the demand for high-grade seeds is increasing, and more of the refuse which was formerly sold as seed is now cleaned out and destroyed; but there is still much to be desired.

The Seed Importation Act.

"Through the enforcement of the seed importation act, the quality of the seeds brought into the United States has greatly improved. This act prohibits the importation of the seeds specified only when they are adulterated or unfit for seeding purposes as defined in the act, but it does not prohibit the importation of seed that is dead or that contains large quantities of chaff and dirt. Before this act became a law it was not uncommon for red and alsike clover and alfalfa seed which was worthless for seeding purposes to be imported.

"The United States had become a favorite market for European seed screenings. Conditions are now changing, and seedsmen are commonly making their foreign purchases on the basis of the seed importation act, so that few lots of low-grade seed unfit for entry under that act are being offered for import. When an occasional lot of such seed is now brought to the United States it is either returned to the country of origin or cleaned in bond under customs supervision and the cleanings exported or denatured.

"Tests of samples of foreign seed received through the customs service show that between July 1, 1914, and October 1, 1915, over 300,000 pounds of lightweight orchard grass seed were imported which contained an average of only twenty-eight per cent of seed, the remainder being chaff and dirt. Nearly 2,500,000 pounds of the crimson clover seed imported during the six months following April 1, 1915, contained an average of only fifty-four per cent of live seed, and of this the germination of 500,000 pounds averaged but thirty-eight per cent. In other words, enough orchard grass seed was imported to sow 20,000 acres and enough crimson clover seed to sow 120,000 acres, none of which could be expected to produce a stand in the field when used at a normal rate of seeding.

"Dead crimson clover seed can not be effectively separated from live seed, and both the crimson clover and orchard grass seed were imported at such prices that the good seed in these shipments cost more than the best grade of seed on the market at the time. All of this crimson clover seed of low vitality and chaffy orchard grass seed is sold to the farmer without recleaning. While the individual farmer can protect himself from the use of such worthless seed by having each lot tested before he sows it, such seed should not be allowed to come into the country. Its importation can result only in profit to the dealer selling it and the loss of the crop to the farmer who sows it.

Result of One Embargo.

"The United States annually imports from 1,000,000 to 3,000,000 pounds of winter rape seed, most of it coming from the Netherlands. Owing to an embargo placed on the exportation of rape seed by the Netherlands in the spring of 1915, seed was imported as rape from other countries, including France, Argentina and Japan. This has resulted in seed of three distinct plants being imported and sold as winter rape, as follows: (1) Winter rape, a biennial forage crop with fleshy, succulent leaves, furnishing an abundance of forage the first year and seeding the second year after planting; (2) an oil seed-producing plant, similar to winter rape in the early stages, but maturing seed in midsummer of the first year of growth; and (3) an oil seed-producing turnip, blossoming the second season after sowing and differing from the common garden turnip especially in having no thickened root. This plant has thin, hairy leaves, furnishing little forage compared with winter rape. To point out to the farmer and to seedsmen the identity of the seeds of such substitutes is one of the important applications of seed testing.

Seed Adulteration.

"It has been an all too common practice for seedsmen, either knowingly or unknowingly, to sell seed of a cheaper kind for that of a higher price when they are similar in appearance.

"Red clover seed has been adulterated with millet and yellow trefoil, Kentucky bluegrass with Canada bluegrass, orchard grass with meadow fescue and rye grass, hairy vetch with spring vetch, and redtop with timothy. Alfalfa has been adulterated with yellow trefoil or sweet clover, and now that the relative prices are reversed sweet clover seed is being adulterated with alfalfa seed. During the spring of 1915 there was a profit of $75 to $100 a carload on each one per cent of timothy sold as redtop. Over 100 lots of adulterated redtop examined contained an average of twelve per cent of timothy seed.

Publication Works Cure.

"After the United States Department of Agriculture collected each kind of seed and published for the first time the analyses of those lots found to be adulterated, with the names of the seedsmen who sold them, a marked decrease in the adulteration of that particular seed followed the next season. In the case of the different kinds of seeds investigated, however, the seed trade has not changed its practice until after such publication has been made.

"While all crop failures due to the use of poor seeds may be avoided by having seeds tested before sowing, such tests should be made in the most practical and economical way. Seed should be tested, as far as possible, in large lots in the hands of the wholesale dealer, a copy of the analysis accompanying each sale as a guaranty of quality, instead of repeatedly testing seed from the same bulk for individual buyers."

LANCASTER, PA.

The Market.

The week preceding Easter was bright and warm, bringing a wealth of blooms to the growers. The sweet pea and carnation growers, with only a few exceptions, were astonished at the quantities of blooms that opened under the favorable weather conditions. The stores in general had a most successful Easter; never before were such quantities of flowers sold in Lancaster. Azaleas, lilies and all kinds of bulbous stock met with a good demand, but it was interesting to note the alacrity with which well grown calceolarias, cinerarias, marguerites, pans of sweet-scented dwarf stocks and baskets of pansies were snapped up by the plant buyers, showing the wonderful opportunity to the young men in the business for further development along these lines.

Various Notes.

At the store of H. A. Schroyer six extra clerks were pressed into service and a fine business was done. Mr. Schroyer's new delivery car was a great help. His giganteum lilies possibly were the best locally grown ones seen.

B. F. Barr & Co. experienced the best Easter business since they have been in business. Paul Murphy, manager, had an unusual quantity of corsage work and other flower arrangements. An extra store was opened on East King street.

At the new store, the Rose Shop, Charles F. Edgar in charge, a most successful Easter business was done. The salespeople handled large quantities of plants and did an exceptionally fine business in corsages.

The Rosery, W. A. Hammond and Mrs. Goldbach each did a remarkable business.

Charles M. Weaver and E. P. Hostetter had exceptionally fine sweet peas in almost unlimited supply.

Ira H. Landis had as an extra for Easter a fine lot of Spanish irises.

Elmer J. Weaver had a profusion of cut stocks, in addition to his regular lines.

Thomas R. Fries, in addition to his market stands, had a store on North Queen street filled with choice Easter stock of his own growing. Mr. Fries was well pleased with the Easter trade.

April 27 the Lancaster County Florists' Club held a ladies' night in the Brenneman building. H. K. R.

New Early-flowering or Winter-blooming Giant Pansies

An entirely new and distinct strain of Pansies. The main advantage of these new Pansies over all hitherto existing Pansies is the extreme earliness of flowering and their unusual hardiness. Sown at the same time as other Pansies, they begin flowering the early part of March, or as soon as the snow is off the ground, many times having four or five large flowers to a plant, when all other Pansies are only showing buds. The flowers are large, well formed and fragrant. Seed ready July 1.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

Writing on the eve of Easter, it is not possible to give any exact data as to the Easter business. Early in the week everybody looked blue. There were no orders coming in and lilies by the thousand were stocking up, too early, of course, to be of any good use. Hardly any other plants were in the market, a few roses and some excellent spiræas and hydrangeas alone filling the bill. The last day or two orders have come in more lively and prospects look a little better. Out-of-town shipping business has been fine, but Easter came too late this year for it to be heavy. Spanish irises are in and sell well, and these, with a few late tulips and tritonias, constitute what is left of the Dutch bulbous stock. Cut lilies are plentiful and good. There is an abundance of all kinds of greens.

Various Notes.

One of the finest pieces of work recently carried out here was a casket cover by C. Lewis, of the Freeman-Lewis Co. It consisted of lily of the valley, white roses and orchids. A new delivery car has been put on by this firm. Mr. Lewis intends to take a trip east as soon as he severs his connection with the firm, probably around May 1.

Tom Wright, of Wright's Flower Shop, said he never had his lilies so well timed for Easter as this year, and they surely were an extremely fine lot of plants. The cut flower stock, too, was in excellent order.

Walter Garbett, of the California Cut Flower & Evergreen Co., left April 13 for a business trip that will embrace the north, middle west and east. He intended to visit the principal cities en route and expected to be gone two months.

Charles J. Muller has purchased the Roserie from E. Woelfel. By this deal Mr. Muller returns to his old business and no doubt will meet many of his old customers. His brother, who was formerly associated with him on South Broadway, will be with him in the new location at 328 West Twenty-third street.

The L. A. Floral Co. reports the shipping business to out-of-town points better than the city trade. The reason for this probably is that many growers of local repute try to time their stock for Easter and peddle it locally rather than ship to wholesalers. The out-of-town customer evidently prefers to deal where he can be assured of service.

C. Gutting, of the Superior Nursery, has had rather a serious relapse and has been more or less confined in his business operations. He evidently has not lost hope, as he has purchased a new Overland car with which to cover the territory.

Tassano Bros. are handling the surplus stock grown in the greenhouses at Gardena, which are owned by Thomas Wright.

A free flower show was held in Glendale April 20, 21 and 22, with a fine attendance every day. A number of women interested themselves in the show and are to be congratulated on the results of their efforts. Roses were shown in large quantities; also many of the better known annuals and perennials. The Germain Seed & Plant Co., of Los Angeles, had the center of the tent and staged an attractive group of foliage plants and a few pot roses. The wild flower exhibits from the school children were fine. Theodore Payne and H. R. Richards were judges.

Darling's Flower Shop has opened a store in the Hayward hotel building. Mr. Darling has surely turned on the white lights and has carried out several original ideas there which can hardly fail to bring success.

"Easter plants from Sawtelle to Armacost & Co.," was the legend on a large uncovered truck used to deliver this well known concern's stock, the letters being about two feet high.

H. W. Turner had a splendid rose cut for Easter, Mrs. Geo. Shawyer and Prima Donna being especially good. Among the newer roses, Dora is magnificent and looks as if it might be a good outdoor rose.

J. McLellan, of San Francisco, was a visitor last week.

At the Nurserymen's Exchange meeting, held in the store of the Germain Seed & Plant Co., the question of quarantine and other inspection matters were taken up, with a view to taking some definite action in the nature of a test case to resolve the constitutionality of some of the laws on the subject.

Mrs. B. P. Garrett, of Eagle Rock, is sending in excellent Spanish irises, some of the deeper blue types being especially good.

R. Fisher, of Santa Ana, has decided to offer his beautiful new lavender freesia to the trade this summer, and it will be noted that only one kind will be offered. Mr. Fisher is determined to keep up his policy of thoroughly proving up his novelties before sending them out, and not to send out anything in mixture. H. R. Richards.

We are much pleased with the results of our plant advertisements in The Review; orders have come in freely and from a wide range of territory.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Much energy was put into the preparations for Easter, and at this date, two days before the holiday, there is every indication that the week's business will be a record-breaker for the local trade. Conditions are all that can be desired. There is an abundance of stock of prime quality, but no overproduction. The warm weather early in the month brought out many flowers that otherwise would have been on the market for Easter and, with the last two weeks of cool weather holding back other stock, some seasonables are a little scarce. Flowering plants are a bigger feature than ever in the holiday offerings. Roses form such an important part of the downtown displays that they almost eclipse the lilies.

The supply of lilies is not so great as it would have been two weeks earlier, but no real shortage is anticipated, especially in view of the enormous supply of rose plants. Callas are particularly fine, the yellow variety being more in evidence than ever before. In rambler roses the pink varieties hold supremacy, although the crimson and pure white varieties are much in evidence. Dorothy Perkins appears in wonderful crosses, arches, baskets and other forms, well done. Tausendschon also makes a fine showing. The rose market generally is in good condition. Some extra fine stock can be had. The Easter cut of American Beauties is about the best ever, there being many perfect flowers with 10-foot stems. Frau Karl Druschki made its appearance. Cecile Brunner roses are plentiful but continue to experience a good demand. Ophelia, Killarney and Sunburst show up well.

There is some exceptionally fine Spanish iris right for Easter. More French hydrangeas are offered this year than formerly and they are popular. Some rhododendrons appear, but most of them bloomed too early. The supply of spiræas is rather limited and azaleas are scarce. Many herbaceous peonies still are to be had and much hawthorn is being used. Miscellaneous stock, such as daisies, mignonette, snapdragons, pansies, forget-me-nots, etc., is sufficient for demands. Many wild flowers, principally poppies, are used, and snowballs are plentiful. Sweet peas are available in quantity, but the quality does not average well, really good stock being scarce.

Some nice valley appears, but the supply is rather limited. Orchids are in great variety and plentiful. There is a fine cut of C. Mossiæ, phlænopsis and dendrobiums for Easter. Gardenias are between crops.

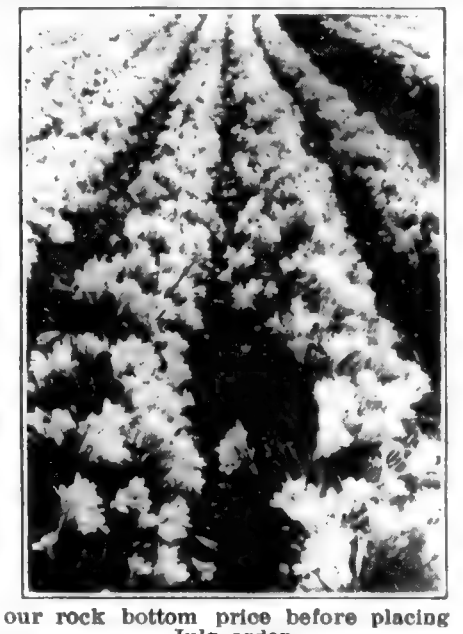
Various Notes.

Last week the writer had the pleasure of visiting the greenhouses of E. James, on the Foothill boulevard, in Oakland, and found the houses in excellent condition. One house, devoted to Dorothy Perkins plants, was a wonderful sight, with crosses, arches and baskets, all just right. The house of Tausendschon was equally fine, the plants appearing in many shapes, including fans and umbrellas. This year Mr. James has quite a number of Hiawatha ramblers. He had not grown this variety for several years, but he says there seems to be a renewed demand for it. A nice lot of bougainvilleas were heavily flowered and all that could be desired. Mr. James practically supplies the San Francisco market with rambler roses, and he admitted that it would be a big job to ship the entire output in four days.

Upon his return from his eastern trip A. J. Rossi, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., said at no place that he visited did he see as fine stock for Easter as here.



G. Poulos brought in a nice lot of callas from his place at Colma, where he had four acres devoted to these this year.

Walter Garbett, of the California Cut Flower & Evergreen Co., of Los Angeles, Cal., passed through here a few days ago on his way east.

Frank Pelicano has practically sold his dahlias, but still has a good deal of Burgle, which he grows in great quantity.

Daniel MacRorie, president of the Society of American Florists, has returned after an extended trip through the south and east. He says everywhere he visited he found much interest being shown in the coming convention at Houston, Tex.

The E. W. McLellan Co. brought in a fine cut of American Beauty roses for Easter, a large percentage being the finest specimens ever offered. Manager Axell says they had many with stems ten feet long. They had a nice cut of Frau Karl Druschki roses. The company had about 10,000 Lilium giganteum, and found no difficulty in disposing of them. They also brought in a big cut of Spanish irises.

Joe Proietti is bringing in a nice lot of hawthorn, both white and red, and some large irises.

Domoto Bros. had a large cut of lilies for Easter and a nice lot of spiræas, which they say sell better this year than they have for several seasons. They had good rhododendrons, but these had mostly bloomed before Easter.

A few days before Easter the shop of Podesta & Baldocchi, on Grant avenue, looked like a bower of roses. A series of arches extended across the store, the rear being filled with a large windmill and the sides banked with smaller plants. With the roses as a background, the lilies and other plants showed to excellent advantage.

The rambler rose was the predominating feature of the display at Joseph's, but the effect was entirely different, owing to the size and shape of the store. The central feature was one of the large

The Market.

There has been a lively demand for all kinds of flowers, cut and in pots. Indications last week pointed to no overproduction in any line, so that the stores in all probability cleared on almost all their stock. As usual, lilies are everywhere and the street venders have more displayed this year than ever before. There are none too many and growers are entirely cleared of plants in bloom. Spiræas were not much in demand and azaleas were quite scarce.

Various Notes.

Ralph Richardson last week commenced shipping cucumbers from his plant at Brighton. He has a good crop.

There was the usual influx of buyers last week from neighboring towns looking for Easter supplies. T. W.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

The Easter rush, as this is being written, obscures all other features of the market, and everyone is so busy that information is hard to obtain. Cut stock is scarce and there seems to be no surplus of potted plants. One or two large bunches of lilies are behind time and there is a scramble to get late supplies of them. Funeral work and the demands for flowers not prompted by Easter had taken a normal quantity of stock.

Club Meeting.

At the meeting of the Portland Floral Society held April 18, visitors answering the roll call were R. S. Woodworth, of Eugene, and W. H. Dunham, director of school gardens of Portland. A committee was authorized to study the state and municipal laws relating to the pilfering of flowers and plants from parkings, lawns and cemeteries, with a view to urging the law's enforcement. The business of the florist is injured by such vandalism, and it is hoped that this committee will hit upon some plan to discourage the stealing of florists' products. A. J. Clarke, chairman; H. Niklas and R. W. Gill constitute the committee.

James Forbes gave an interesting account of his trip to the flower shows at Philadelphia and New York. Several short papers and brief discussions were heard on timely topics.

H. E. Weed reported that F. W. Power, of the Orenco Nursery Co., had severely injured his hand while splitting kindling at his home.

W. H. Dunham said that the March rains had delayed preparing the ground for the gardens conducted by the children of the city schools, but that he now was getting the gardens in shape rapidly. Thirty-seven schools have community gardens and about 6,000 children have individual plats that they are cultivating at their homes.

Otto Griessel, of the Mountain View Floral Co., said full crews were at work in the nursery and at landscape work. Practically all the stock prepared for this season has been sold.

The son of John F. Carroll, honorary member of the Floral Society, was buried April 20.

Various Notes.

The Floral Studio has furnished decorations for several large weddings lately.

According to the report of William Dunham, supervisor of school gardens, about 500 children, whose home gardens are one-tenth of an acre or more in area, are taking up industrial club work, carried on by the state department of education, in coöperation with the Oregon Agricultural College. These students are permitted to exhibit at county and state fairs and compete for valuable prizes. S. W. W.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

President, E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Vice-president, John Watson, Newark, N. J.; Secretary, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.

Forty-first annual meeting, Milwaukee, Wis., June 28 to 30, 1916.

McHutchison & Co., New York, are moving May 1 to the building at 95 Chambers street purchased a year ago, where they will have room to grow.

The Bloomfield Nursery & Seed Co., Monticello, Fla., is a new concern, specializing in grafted and budded paper-shell pecan trees. H. R. Engleman is president.

The weather man is, perhaps, doing us a good turn now, by prolonging the season. Frosts in the lake region, the Ohio and northern Mississippi valleys are predicted for the latter part of the present week.

NURSERYMEN WAKING UP.

Under the new constitution the usefulness of the American Association of Nurserymen is to be greatly enhanced and the outlook for greater future success is promising. Notwithstanding that the new schedule of terms for membership requires some to pay larger fees than hitherto, the registration for 1916 at this writing equals that of last year, with more than double the revenue. A few pessimists predicted failure, being unable to grasp the vision of the future possibilities in the line of achievement, but there is encouragement in the tone of the correspondence accompanying remittances of membership fees. One writes: "Have not done $10,000 of business the past year; I did before the war and expect to do again; but I see no reason why an active member doing a business of less than that amount should get off with a smaller fee than an associate member." Another, a New Englander, writes: "I am in sympathy with the effort to raise the standard of membership and increase the value of the association, so that it will mean something," and he enclosed a check for $65 as his fee. Such declarations furnish illustrations of unselfish loyalty.

The attendance at the forty-first annual convention at Milwaukee, June 28 to 30, ought to be a large and inspiring one. The new constitution will be further discussed after its first year of operation, and the program will include items of most vital interest to the trade. The management of Hotel Wisconsin has been liberal in its proposals and members should write early for rooms.

Not many days remain in which to send in memberships and, busy as members doubtless are, I urge them to take the few minutes necessary to attend to this item of business, and thus facilitate the work of preparing the badge book for publication from this office, 204 Granite building, Rochester, N. BEN DAVIS LEADS.

There are more Ben Davis apples than any other, according to the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Ben Davis last year produced 14.5 per cent of the total crop. Baldwin ranked second, with 10.9 per cent, and Winesap third, with 7.3 per cent of the total crop. Of the total crop produced, about sixty-five per cent was sold, varying by varieties from 77.7 per cent of the crop of Tompkins King to 42.7 per cent of Limbertwig sold by producers.

the windmill, three of his largest pieces.

Many pedestrians on Powell street halted to gaze into the window of the Art Floral Co. The attraction was a brood of little white chicks scratching in the soft green moss or huddled up to the tiny electric lights. In another section of the window were several rabbits.

The Easter display at the MacRorie-McLaren Co. store, on Powell street, had double significance, as it formally marked this company's advent into the retail business and signalized the approach of the spring holiday. Tuesday was the formal opening, and on that occasion many friends and patrons of the firm called to extend their best wishes and congratulate the firm upon its beautiful store. Since taking over the store formerly conducted by the Fairmont Floral Co. the place has been thoroughly renovated, modern lighting devices installed and much new equipment added. On the mezzanine floor offices have been installed for the wholesale department. The front section is given over to a commodious drafting room, which is separated from the private offices at the rear by the cashier's office. This entire section is finished in white and gold and beautifully furnished throughout to harmonize with the rest of the store. On opening day as a special feature phalænopsis corsages were presented to all women visitors, and a special display of orchids was made in the window. This was replaced later in the week by an Easter display, in which lilies formed the principal feature. The potted plants were banked in the back of the window in tiers and in front was a huge basket of Cattleya Mossiæ.

Mark Ebel, of Sacramento, Cal., was in town during the week end before Easter. S. H. G.

Belle Washburn — THE BEST RED CARNATION

Plants in 2½-inch pots, ready for bench or field

WINNER of the Silver Medal of the American Carnation Society, at Buffalo, 1915; also WINNER of the SAME MEDAL in the same class at ST. LOUIS, 1916; also of Silver Medal of S. A. F. and O. H., at St. Louis, 1916. The color is a most brilliant red. The size of the flower is 3½ inches. Stems 24 to 36 inches long, strong and stiff. We have never had a burst calyx, all flowers grading firsts; and, best of all, it is a constant bloomer, giving a steady run of flowers equal in number to the Enchantress family.

Price of 2½-inch plants is $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000. We will bill 500 at the 1000 rate

The Market.

Business last week was only moderately active until Saturday morning; then it came with a sudden rush. The consensus of opinion is that the total of Easter sales this year is far in excess of that of any previous Easter. With the possible exception of carnations, there was an abundance of all kinds of stock. Lilies never were better or more plentiful, and they brought good prices. The department stores cut the prices down to 9 and 10 cents each, but this did no harm to retailers, who cleaned up well at 20 and 25 cents per bloom. There was a large supply of roses and all the blooms sold well. While not in oversupply, there were some nice, long Beauties that found ready sales. Sweet peas were rather scarce and poor in quality. Bulbous stock, both cut and in pans, was fine and brought good prices. Hydrangeas, genistas, rhododendrons and well filled fancy baskets found a good sale.

Various Notes.

Since remodeling and redecorating, the Stewart Seed Store has a smart appearance. A rushing business was done last week in garden tools and seeds.

John H. Bath sold out completely and was compelled to turn some customers away.

Peterson Bros. had a good Easter business, but they think it will fall short of that of last year.

With three stores and about twenty-five extra salespeople, Lewis Henderson was a busy man. He says it was by far the best Easter he has had.

The Parker Flower Shop was rushed with work, and at the conclusion everybody admitted he was glad that Easter came only once a year.

No customers were disappointed at the store of Hess & Swoboda, as they had a supply of stock that was hard to equal anywhere. As to variety, they had everything that could be wished for. Beauties, Russells, Richmonds and Killarneys were in good supply here, and brought good prices. The lilies and bulbous stock never were better, while the hydrangeas, rhododendrons and potted roses were exceptionally fine. The call for corsage bouquets was heavy. Adolph Gude, son of A. Gude of the Gude Bros. Co., Washington, D. C., has accepted a position with Hess & Swoboda and will make this city his home.

I was unable to attend the last bowling match, but I understand that the Council Bluffs boys beat the Omaha bowlers to a standstill; in fact, so badly were they beaten that the scores were confiscated rather than give them for publication—at least that is what Lewis Henderson says. L. S. H.

The Market.

Taken as a whole, Easter was satisfactory to the trade. Business was good, despite adverse weather conditions. While the clean-up was not so complete as we have seen it, the volume of sales was extremely large. Saturday and Sunday were cold and rainy and dampened the ardor of the flower-buying public to some extent.

Sweet peas and violets were in great demand and hard to obtain. Single violets were out of the market entirely and the double stock was not plentiful and of only medium quality. This stock cleaned up early at good prices. Sweet peas were scarce; in fact, toward the end they were not obtainable at any price. The scarceness of sweet peas, of course, was due to the cold, cloudy weather, and this same condition was responsible for the large supply of bulbous stock in the market. Owing to the lateness of the season, it was only to be expected that this stock would be out of the market. It cut a big figure in the sales, however, and wound up its season in a final burst of sales that easily made this the best season for bulbous stock we have seen for a long time.

Carnations were in sufficient supply to go around and the quality was good. Of course, the trade tried to buy as much of this stock as possible, and but for the extremely large supply an acute shortage would have been felt. Roses were plentiful, but they cleaned up well, despite the big supply. They were in fine shape and, while prices were only medium, the volume of business was satisfactory. Short stock was in the greatest demand, but the long, fancy stock moved well at fair prices.

Plant sales were enormous. The clean-up would possibly have been more complete had the holiday been earlier, as some stock came in too early to bring what it should have. A few kinds were sold out early and late orders had to be turned down or something else substituted. There were a few plants on the wholesale market Easter morning, but the quality was negligible.

Various Notes.

April 19, three days before Easter, Milwaukee was visited by a hail storm that left a path of broken glass and much damage in its wake. The damage to greenhouse property was confined to the west side of the city, and the Schroeder Floral Co., Twenty-fourth and Pease streets, was the heaviest loser, as far as could be learned. This company lost about 4,000 panes of glass and some slight damage was done to the stock. It was a blessing that the storm was not followed by freezing weather, as there was glass broken in nearly every establishment in the west section of town. Some of the hailstones measured nearly two inches in diameter. A local newspaper photographed one of the hailstones together with a duck egg, and the egg had nothing on the stone in size. H. J. S.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Indianapolis enjoyed one of the best Easters ever. Probably more flowers were sold than ever before. Flowers were plentiful and the market was so well cleaned up that there was no stock available on Easter morning. American Beauties were not sufficient for the demand, but the stock obtainable was of good quality. Roses had a good call, retailing at from $1.50 to $5 per dozen. The market was well supplied with carnations, for which the prevailing price was $1 per dozen, though some of the stores got $1.25 and $1.50 for the better grades. Orchids had a good call, but the supply was limited. Of sweet peas there were not enough to go around. Violets were of poor quality, with a fair demand. Valley, lilies, pansies, forget-me-nots and snapdragons found a good market. First-class bulbous stock was not overplentiful and was cleaned up. The market was well supplied with Easter lilies, which found a ready market.

Pot plants were sold by the thousands and the market was well supplied with a great variety. Easter lilies probably had the best call. Azaleas, lilacs, rhododendrons, genistas, pansies, ramblers and bulbous pot plants were in great demand. Plants bringing from $1 to $3 were the ready sellers; the higher-priced arrangements were not sold in quantities.

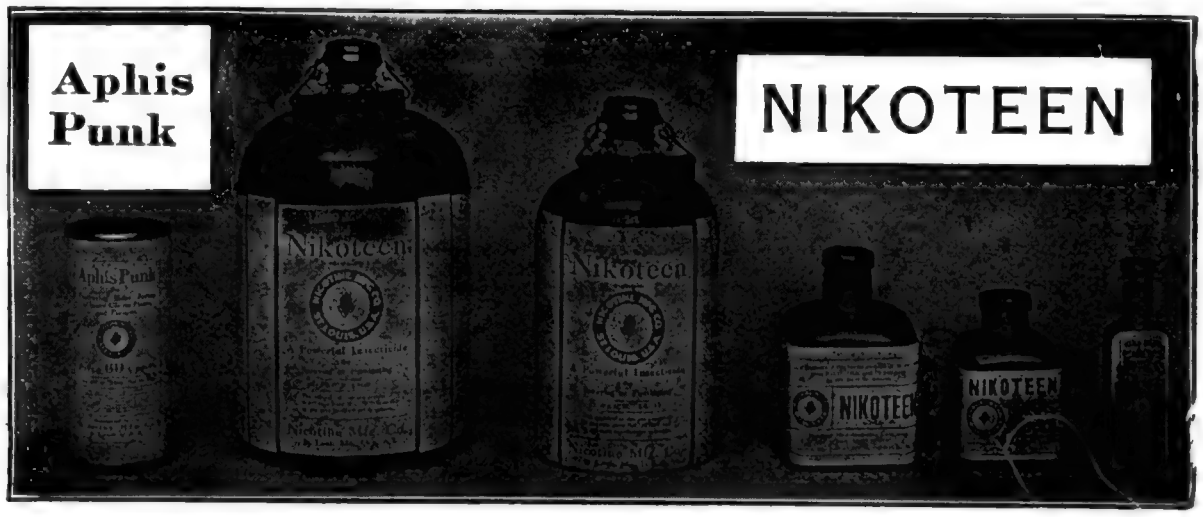
The city market was loaded down with flowers and reports a satisfactory trade. A number of the retailers opened branch stores for Easter, meeting with fair success.

Various Notes.

A. Wiegand's Sons Co. had a satisfactory Easter trade, cleaning up its large supply of blooming plants, with the exception of a few large rhododendrons.

Clarence Thomas, with the Hill Floral Co., reports a fine trade, well above expectations.

The Pahud Floral Co. reports an excellent Easter trade. This firm opened a branch store, which showed good results.



The Bertermann Bros. Co. also had a satisfactory trade. The unusually fine line of blooming plants sold readily.

John A. Rieman had a fine trade, being sold out early in the forenoon.

The Claypool Hotel Florist reports business far ahead of last year.

The Smith & Young Co. handled an immense lot of stock through its wholesale house, being unable to fill all the orders. H. L. W.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

THE COAL MARKET.

The week's reports from the coal trade may be summarized by the paradoxical statement that the market is both weak and strong; it is weak in spot business, but strong in the closing of contracts. On the whole, the situation is considered encouraging to the coal dealers, for the reason that the dullness in spot trade at this season is an annual condition and is decidedly temporary, being usually limited to about six weeks, while the prices specified in the contracts are in most instances appreciably higher than they were a year ago. Of course the cost of operating the mines has been increased by the concessions to the miners in the new wage agreement, but this extra cost seems to be amply provided for—and "then some"—in fixing the prices of fuel. It is stated, also, that present contract prices are the lowest that are likely to be known this year; the entire current of events, we are told, has a tendency to force prices upward.

As to the florists' favorite fuel, smokeless coal, the situation is described as "somewhat mixed." While the new circular price of mine-run, $1.35 f. o. b. the mines and $3.40 f. o. b. Chicago, is generally maintained, a surplus of lump coal has had the effect in some cases of depressing the price of mine-run. Perhaps these circumstances provide a fleeting opportunity for florists.

The discouraging status of the anthracite conference in New York, at this writing, has a strong indirect influence on bituminous conditions. "Apparently," says a report, "a deadlock in the controversy has been reached, and a strike May 1 seems to be imminent."

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

The long looked for Easter rush has come and gone, leaving behind it memories that are not easily forgotten. The uptown stores worked practically night and day the whole of last week in preparation for the event, which was highly successful. It had been hinted that stock would be scarce, but there was enough for all and the quality was extremely good. A large business was done in corsages, and sweet peas, violets and roses were used extensively in these. A mammoth business was done in plants of all descriptions, and the baskets this year were artistic and attractive. Each store was ablaze with a mass of color.

The weather during the latter part of the week was not bright and Saturday was somewhat stormy. Nevertheless, deliveries were gotten out nicely and in good shape. Sunday was gloomy. In cut flowers daily shipments were quite heavy and in good condition. Roses were fine and sold well, especially the long-stemmed ones. Carnations were good and sold well at Easter prices.

Easter lilies were abundant, both in crocks and cut, and sold well. Valley was in demand. Violets, considering the lateness of the season, were good and sold quickly. Sweet peas were in big demand. Daisies, myosotis, snapdragons, lilac and all bulbous stock cleared nicely each day.

Various Notes.

John A. Murrell, of the Fernwood Greenhouses, had an Easter annex at 106 State street. He disposed of a large quantity of stock and did a good business.

The Easter window displays were a great attraction last week. Each florist made a beautiful display of baskets, with the usual background of lilies and lilacs. Ducks and chickens added to the effect.

John Dunbar, assistant superintendent of parks, completed his twenty-fifth year of service with the Rochester parks Saturday, April 22, and was the recipient of many messages of congratulation. Mr. Dunbar has done much to beautify the city parks and has seen almost the whole development of the city park system. He is a proficient botanist as well as expert grower of plants and flowers. He is the official botanist of the Society of American Florists and often is a speaker at horticultural meetings in this country and Canada.

Extensive advertising by the individual florists of the city was done during the week and good results were obtained thereby.

George T. Boucher reports an excellent Easter trade. His stock cleared nicely. His windows were a big attraction and brought good results.

E. P. McLuis, the "Unique Florist," did remarkably well at the store. His stock was good and he appears to be quite well pleased with business. He did a good business at his stand on Clinton street.

Charles W. Curtis, of Irondequoit, N. Y., did well this Easter. His large quantity of potted plants was about cleaned up. His Easter Greeting pelargoniums sold well and were in great demand.

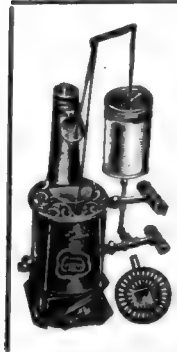
Now that Easter is over, spring cleaning commences—quite necessary in the florists' business after such a rush.

H. J. H.

BRAMPTON, ONT.

The Market.

Although a large percentage of the lily bulbs had to be thrown out early in the season, the bulk of the remaining stock produced superlatively fine blooms, which found a ready Easter market at $10 and $12 per hundred. More lilies were sold this year than at any previous holiday. Flowers of all descriptions were relatively scarce last week, but a fine crop of antirrhinums came to the rescue, and a heavy cut of the cheaper grades of roses helped to fill orders.



Orchids were ordered in large quantities, but not ten per cent of the stock was available. Violets also had to be taken off the list, as two or three warm days put them entirely out of business.

Various Notes.

The Darwin tulips brought in for Easter were the finest ever grown at the Dale Estate; most of the stems measured about thirty inches in length and met with a great sale at $4 per hundred. Repeat orders came in continually and the heavy staff in the packing room, including soldiers on furlough, were going at it steadily until late Saturday night.

The Market.

The day preceding Easter started with a heavy shower that developed into a thunder storm, but the rain ceased before noon and did not keep people indoors. Easter business was satisfactory. Owing to the lateness of the season there was an unusual variety of flowers, and they were abundant. Orchids, which were low-priced during the winter and early spring, sold at high prices again. There was a fair quantity of violets offered at a medium price. Spiræa was of excellent quality; pink was one of the novelties. Another popular item was the pyramid azalea. Some thought there would be a shortage of Easter lilies, but these were sufficient for the demand. Prices were about normal. Valley was of good quality and brought a good price. Potted rambler roses were sold in large quantities. Callas were fine and were in considerable demand; the yellow were sought after by some. Hyacinths, tulips, daffodils and sweet peas sold in large quantities. Hampers and fancy baskets filled with flowers or plants proved popular and brought good prices. There were good potted hydrangeas of both the white and colored varieties. Many of the retailers had branch stores in order to handle the business.

Various Notes.

Philips Bros. report that their Easter trade was an unusually good one. In addition to the Easter orders, they had much funeral work last week, selling some exceptionally large pieces.

August Begerow had an attractive window last week, representing an outdoor scene. The floor of the window was covered to represent a lawn. At various places about the "lawn" were potted hydrangeas, ramblers and other blooming plants. Suspended from the ceiling, in such a way as to appear to be flying through the air, were artificial birds. There were bird houses on posts, with the birds apparently at home.

The S. A. Rogers Nursery Co. displayed an unusually fine stock of hydrangeas in pots, in addition to pink spiræas and other Easter specialties.

John W. Blakeley, of Elizabeth, had a good Easter trade. To handle the business he rented an annex at 86 Broad street.

The H. & H. Florists have started a flower store at 25 Union avenue, Cranford, N. J.

E. P. Wolfinger had a fine window display last week, made up almost entirely of filled hampers and fancy baskets. His Easter business was more than good. R. B. M.

DETROIT.

Easter trade exceeded all expectations and, had the weather been more favorable, business would have been still better. The weather was mild, but there were light showers nearly every day and almost a steady rain on Saturday. Sunday was dreary and damp, with clouds threatening rain all day.

The stock of cut flowers was well equal to the demand, except valley and good sweet peas. Sunday morning found some of the retailers offering retail prices for valley, in order to fill all orders, while sweet peas also were at a premium. The market was well supplied with tulips, but daffodils were scarce. Carnations were in good supply and every one was sold. The quality was fine.

In the line of plants there was a scarcity of small and medium-sized azaleas; large ones were plentiful. Choice hydrangeas and spiræas also were scarce. Plenty of good lilies were to be had, although the sale was heavy. Rose plants were not any too plentiful during the week at the greenhouses, although some of the stores had an oversupply. Bulb pans were in big demand; every available plant, some of them not very choice, was bought by Friday, and evidently all were cleaned up at the retailers' places.

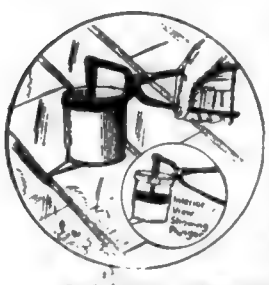
URBANA, ILL.



Nearly 4,000 people attended the fourth annual exhibition of floral arrangements staged in the Floricultural building at the University of Illinois, April 16. There were on exhibition many types of corsage bouquets made of various flowers. Wedding bouquets also were in evidence, including everything from the bride's bouquet to the flower girl's basket. The table decorations illustrated the use of different types of flowers. Besides this, there were numerous baskets, funeral designs and sprays, box and vase arrangements, and feature bouquets.

This show is the work of students in Horticulture 32, a course in floral decoration required of all floricultural students. It is merely to give them an idea of what work would be in a florist's establishment during a rush season. The students were assisted by Miss Emily Dorner, of La Fayette, Ind.

The Market.

The Easter business, if not the best, was as good as the best. Stock of all kinds, excepting carnations, sold at regular prices. There was enough to satisfy all demands and the wholesalers were cleaned up Saturday night. The retailers did an excellent business. It rained from Friday to Monday, but this did not seem to interfere with business. There was a good demand for plants during the first part of the week and little attention was given to cut flowers until Friday. There certainly never were so many plants sold as this year; anything with blooms sold at a fair price.

Various Notes.

Mrs. E. A. Williams had a fine collection of made-up baskets of blooming plants in her store, and they sold as quickly as she could get them in.

Randolph & McClements had their store and the conservatories adjoining filled with pretty plant arrangements. One of the representatives of a western house remarked that they could never sell half of the stock on hand, but Easter Sunday saw them cleaned out of everything fit to sell.

G. P. Weaklen & Co. were well stocked, but sold everything.

The A. W. Smith Co. had an extra force of salespeople to take care of the increased trade, but Saturday there seemed to be a riot in the store and one could scarcely get near the counter. This concern reports the largest Easter trade it ever had, in both plants and cut flowers.

Miss E. B. Maxwell reports a clean-up of stock and that the volume of business done was only limited by the facilities for taking care of it.

The Blind Floral Co. made a specialty of plants and expressed astonishment at the number of them sold.

Wm. Turner knows, without waiting for his bookkeeper's report, that business this Easter exceeded that of any previous Easter.

The W. & W. Flower Store, of Washington, Pa., reports cut flowers to have come into their own again. "The biggest Easter business ever by fifty per cent," was the report.

J. M. Johnston, of McKeesport, says: "Believe me, it was some Easter. I have four stores and each of them sold everything in sight and needed more."

The express companies were handicapped with too much business and florists had to suffer with other people. Most of the stock arrived twelve hours late, especially stock from the Hudson. Violets, which were a glut, seemed to drop out of sight. Few came in for Easter and, as a result, orders taken were never filled. Some of the orders delivered came back marked no good.

The market stands certainly had a harvest. Prices were right and they did a big business.

The frequent rains this spring have kept growers from getting their fields plowed for the carnation cuttings. The result will be late planting and a big rush to get stock out.

Many out-of-town people were disappointed when the express companies refused to accept cut flower shipments after 3 o'clock, April 22. Clarke.

The Easter Business.

The Easter business this year was better than that of last year, and if we had not had two days of unfavorable weather it would have surpassed all previous records. It was difficult to obtain violets, which, as usual, were in great demand for corsages. Valley and primroses served as substitutes. Potted lilies were plentiful and sold well, as did azaleas, genistas, rambler roses, hydrangeas and bulbous stock. There were not so many temporary retailers of flowers this year, but several grocers sold lilies at a price one-half of that asked by the florists. The public apparently preferred to pay the difference, as the cut prices did not seem to affect the sales of those in the trade. The weather was warm and deliveries easy.

Various Notes.

H. F. A. Lange did a fine business, selling most of his large supply. His 150,000 square feet of glass were working day and night in preparation for the holiday, and his stock was excellent. A batch of pelargoniums pleased so many that by Saturday noon the supply was exhausted. Mr. Lange had many varieties and anyone wishing a novelty had no difficulty in finding it at his store. His windows were good and attracted many customers.

Harry I. Randall, proprietor of the Randall Flower Shop, reported his Easter business better than ever. His supply of stock was large and his customers were not disappointed.

Fred Madaus did a good business and his satisfaction was recorded by a broad grin. He had a large number of small plants and they sold well.

H. F. Littlefield opened a store at 564 Main street for the week.

TOO LONG IN SAND?

I am sending you a sample of diseased acalyphas. I bought 2,000 of the original stock of plants a year ago. They were not in a good growing condition and the foliage was a whitish color, looking as though arsenate of lead had been used on them. I had the plants potted and put in a temperature of 75 degrees, but they would not grow, except that they formed that little round growth which you will see on the sample. When a leaf does come, it hardens. I bought them for an amusement park where I use 35,000 plants every year, and I spoiled two long beds with these plants last summer. Late in the fall they grew a little. I saved some stock and propagated about 3,000, but now they are almost all like the one enclosed. I have had stock of my own for fifteen years and there is no trace of this trouble on it. I bought the stock for $18 a thousand and I have never seen it offered at any other place for less than $30, but as the firm is one of the largest in the trade I thought it was all right. Kindly tell me what the trouble is and if anything can be done to remedy it.

E. A. H.—Mo.

The plants arrived much shriveled, but, so far as could be seen, they were hard, stunted cuttings which had probably been in your cutting bench too long. Cuttings of almost any kind, which have remained in the sand a long time after they are rooted and have become hardened, rarely amount to anything. A great part of the disease in geraniums and other bedding plants is due to this long period of starvation in sand. C. W.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

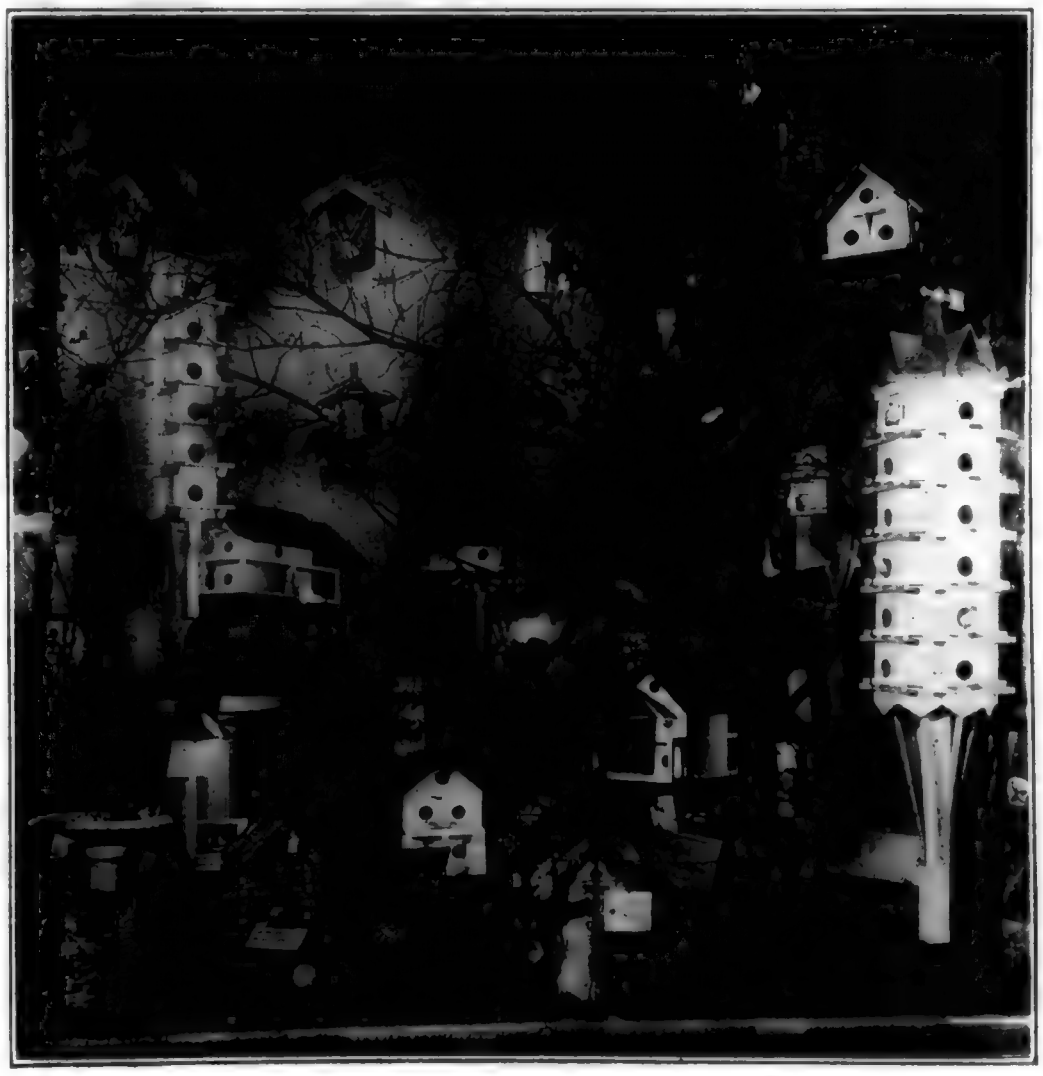
BRINGING BACK BIRDS BRINGS BUSINESS

The popular propaganda for the preservation of birds is producing a demand for a class of merchandise that is peculiarly suitable as a side line for florists. Aviaries are being featured by aggressive florists, who have been quick to cash in on a movement that bids fair to become national in scope.

IT MAY be said that the good people of this country are highly susceptible to fads, whether the fads or popular hobbies be of the indoors or outdoors, whether sensible or nonsensical. John Smith and Henry Jones, for instance, their wives, daughters and sons, for reasons sufficient to themselves, but also to have the satisfaction of knowing that they are in the running socially and not occupying back seats, are liable to surrender to any worth-while fad that happens along, the only essential being that the fad arrive at a psychological moment and that the Smiths' and the Joneses' pocketbooks be sufficiently lined.

Fortunately, most fads and hobbies live and die in the districts in which they originate and never become national in scope; but sometimes a capital idea starts rolling and does not stop until it has the entire country in its clutch, and then continues in vogue and is followed with more or less exaggerated zeal until it has lost its novelty. Most of us remember the years when bicycling was "the thing," and recently we were at the tail end of what once was the great tango dance craze.

Fads Sell.



Now, while fads may provide interesting subjects for sociologists, they are of greater importance to business men. The commercial aspect is that a widespread propaganda of any sort creates a large demand for the class of merchandise required in its fulfillment. It has been said, by those qualified to speak, that a fad of national proportions, as a selling factor for the given merchandise, is greater than any other form of sales promotion, save advertising. Further, it is intimated that the commercial effects of such a fad are on a par with those engendered by a nationally conducted advertising campaign, the only difference being that the former is free of charge.

Two Well Known Fads.

That a popular movement of any kind has a latent selling power is demonstrated by an incident some years ago, when certain manufacturers of a novelty tried to devise a fad that would produce a quick distribution for their goods. Their idea, however, was not novel enough to catch the fancy of the fickle public and, therefore, failed. The comic statuette commonly known as "Billikin" is said to have found a quick sale, because it became a fad through efforts on the part of the makers.

From the business axioms established in this direction it would be reasonable to assume that the tango surely accelerated the sale of dancing pumps, gowns, floor wax, graphophones, etc. The sum total of business created by that fad, if it could be computed in dollars and cents, certainly would be astonishing.

Heretofore there does not seem to have been any fad or country-wide hobby that directly benefited florists commercially, not considering in this connection the customary heavy spring buying on the part of the people, Mothers' and Memorial day business and other plant or cut flower holidays. Now, however, there is under way a propaganda that florists, by means of a side line, can cash in on. During the late winter there has been and at present is in operation a so-called "Bring Back the Birds" movement. Each spring there has been an alarming decrease in the number of birds, a condition that of late has been the subject of frequent editorials in the public press. As a result, many people have affiliated themselves with societies for the protection and care of birds. Of course, there always have been Audubon clubs and ornithological societies, but this year the efforts of the bird lovers are taking the form and force of a propaganda, and it is likely that next year and the year after the thing will become wider in scope.

"Bring Back the Birds" Window of Holm & Olson, St. Paul.

Bird Homes.

The argument of the bird lovers is that the birds must be provided with specially made houses for nesting purposes, that they must be fed and shielded from all agencies of destruction. This naturally creates a demand for bird houses, bird baths and bird foods and, as these are more or less associated with gardens and flowers, it is fitting that florists should reap the profits from their sale. Here is a side line for florists that a fad or propaganda will help to sell.

Window box manufacturers and a well known Detroit florist, in anticipation of the boost given the sale of bird houses, etc., by

TOO LONG IN SAND?

I am sending you a sample of diseased acalyphas. I bought 2,000 of the original stock of plants a year ago. They were not in a good growing condition and the foliage was a whitish color, looking as though arsenate of lead had been used on them. I had the plants potted and put in a temperature of 75 degrees, but they would not grow, except that they formed that little round growth which you will see on the sample. When a leaf does come, it hardens. I bought them for an amusement park where I use 35,000 plants every year, and I spoiled two long beds with these plants last summer. Late in the fall they grew a little. I saved some stock and propagated about 3,000, but now they are almost all like the one enclosed. I have had stock of my own for fifteen years and there is no trace of this trouble on it. I bought the stock for $18 a thousand and I have never seen it offered at any other place for less than $30, but as the firm is one of the largest in the trade I thought it was all right. Kindly tell me what the trouble is and if anything can be done to remedy it.

E. A. H.—Mo.

The plants arrived much shriveled, but, so far as could be seen, they were hard, stunted cuttings which had probably been in your cutting bench too long. Cuttings of almost any kind, which have remained in the sand a long time after they are rooted and have become hardened, rarely amount to anything. A great part of the disease in geraniums and other bedding plants is due to this long period of starvation in sand. C. W.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

BRINGING BACK BIRDS BRINGS BUSINESS

The popular propaganda for the preservation of birds is producing a demand for a class of merchandise that is peculiarly suitable as a side line for florists. Aviaries are being featured by aggressive florists, who have been quick to cash in on a movement that bids fair to become national in scope.

IT MAY be said that the good people of this country are highly susceptible to fads, whether the fads or popular hobbies be of the indoors or outdoors, whether sensible or nonsensical. John Smith and Henry Jones, for instance, their wives, daughters and sons, for reasons sufficient to themselves, but also to have the satisfaction of knowing that they are in the running socially and not occupying back seats, are liable to surrender to any worth-while fad that happens along, the only essential being that the fad arrive at a psychological moment and that the Smiths' and the Joneses' pocketbooks be sufficiently lined.

Fortunately, most fads and hobbies live and die in the districts in which they originate and never become national in scope; but sometimes a capital idea starts rolling and does not stop until it has the entire country in its clutch, and then continues in vogue and is followed with more or less exaggerated zeal until it has lost its novelty. Most of us remember the years when bicycling was "the thing," and recently we were at the tail end of what once was the great tango dance craze.

Fads Sell.

Now, while fads may provide interesting subjects for sociologists, they are of greater importance to business men. The commercial aspect is that a widespread propaganda of any sort creates a large demand for the class of merchandise required in its fulfillment. It has been said, by those qualified to speak, that a fad of national proportions, as a selling factor for the given merchandise, is greater than any other form of sales promotion, save advertising. Further, it is intimated that the commercial effects of such a fad are on a par with those engendered by a nationally conducted advertising campaign, the only difference being that the former is free of charge.

Two Well Known Fads.

That a popular movement of any kind has a latent selling power is demonstrated by an incident some years ago, when certain manufacturers of a novelty tried to devise a fad that would produce a quick distribution for their goods. Their idea, however, was not novel enough to catch the fancy of the fickle public and, therefore, failed. The comic statuette commonly known as "Billikin" is said to have found a quick sale, because it became a fad through efforts on the part of the makers.

From the business axioms established in this direction it would be reasonable to assume that the tango surely accelerated the sale of dancing pumps, gowns, floor wax, graphophones, etc. The sum total of business created by that fad, if it could be computed in dollars and cents, certainly would be astonishing.

Heretofore there does not seem to have been any fad or country-wide hobby that directly benefited florists commercially, not considering in this connection the customary heavy spring buying on the part of the people, Mothers' and Memorial day business and other plant or cut flower holidays. Now, however, there is under way a propaganda that florists, by means of a side line, can cash in on. During the late winter there has been and at present is in operation a so-called "Bring Back the Birds" movement. Each spring there has been an alarming decrease in the number of birds, a condition that of late has been the subject of frequent editorials in the public press. As a result, many people have affiliated themselves with societies for the protection and care of birds. Of course, there always have been Audubon clubs and ornithological societies, but this year the efforts of the bird lovers are taking the form and force of a propaganda, and it is likely that next year and the year after the thing will become wider in scope.

"Bring Back the Birds" Window of Holm & Olson, St. Paul.

Bird Homes.

The argument of the bird lovers is that the birds must be provided with specially made houses for nesting purposes, that they must be fed and shielded from all agencies of destruction. This naturally creates a demand for bird houses, bird baths and bird foods and, as these are more or less associated with gardens and flowers, it is fitting that florists should reap the profits from their sale. Here is a side line for florists that a fad or propaganda will help to sell.

Window box manufacturers and a well known Detroit florist, in anticipation of the boost given the sale of bird houses, etc., by the bird propaganda, now are making houses for birds in many novel designs and shapes. An idea of the variety may be had from the illustration on page 13, which is a reproduction of a recent bird window in the store of Holm & Olson, of St. Paul. Other florists and retailers have been quick to take advantage of the movement and are doing a good business in the side line. Following is a letter by Hermann Lange, of Worcester, Mass., who speaks enthusiastically of the new source of profits:

Birdology.

"With the campaign for feeding the birds of Worcester and vicinity during the period that the ground was covered with snow, has come a more general interest in the care of birds and conservation of bird life. 'Bring Back the Birds' is a slogan that may well be adopted by every community where the birds have been driven away or killed through various agencies. But in order to bring back the birds their faith and friendship must first be gained, and they must be shown that, while formerly they were abused and driven away, they now will be protected and cared for.

"With the advent of spring, bird lovers are turning their thoughts and attention to making and placing bird houses in their gardens. Within a few weeks the birds will begin to nest, and if they find houses for their special use they are sure to return in full force to the places from which they have been absent so long.

A Style for Each Kind.

"Recently I had a display of happy bird houses, little bird boxes made from hollowed logs, covered and combined with birch and cedar bark. These houses are made in several styles to conform with the nesting peculiarities of the birds for which they are intended.

"The birds that need boxes for their nests are the bluebird, the house wren, chickadee, tree swallow, purple martin and flicker. The houses are easily cleaned and some of the larger ones, when placed on the tops of long poles, are pretty ornaments for any garden. When they are inhabited they make an interesting and educational feature.

"One of the bird houses is designed for the wren family and is made from a hollowed cedar post, with a slanting top and a perch bracket in front of the entrance. Another wren house is made of slabs of wood, covered with a combination of cedar and birch bark. Another house may be opened and closed, thus making it easy to clean at the end of the season. The martin houses are designed for several families and range from a plain 4-family house to an elaborate apartment house for fourteen families.

Propaganda Likely to Grow.

"The public in general are enthusiastic over the idea and have already installed the little houses. I have received many orders, and, no doubt, the birds of Worcester will have beautiful made-to-order homes this summer."

It is evident that Opportunity, accompanied by Additional Profits, is rapping loudly on the doors of those who retail, and the men who conduct their stores with their heads as well as with their hands at least will give heed. Inasmuch as the bird propaganda is likely to grow each year, there is not much danger of overstocking or having unsalable goods on hand. What won't move this year may be featured next year.

ANOTHER DE LUXE STORE.

As self-laudation nowadays is in vogue even among the elite and those heretofore occupying pedestals, the florists of the country may as well have a try at a few self-made encomiums. But for what can the trade clap itself on the back and say: "We did it; they are ours"? To be sure, nothing more or less than the de luxe flower stores of the country! What other trade or line of business can boast of prettier, more artistic stores? French mirrors, handsome tile floors, classic stone seats, rich draperies, delightful fountains, costly woodwork—all the materials that help to make ideal settings for flowers have been utilized. A New York millionaire was so fascinated by the interior of a San Francisco flower store while on a visit there last summer that at New Year's, in New York, when ordering a batch of floral greetings to be presented to his San Francisco friends, he specified the store that had pleased him as the one that should execute the orders. But the San Francisco store does not stand alone—there are replicas of it everywhere.

The accompanying illustration shows one of the de luxe stores on a smaller scale. Look at it closely and note the artistic get-up. Surely every man or woman that enters will be glad that he or she did so. And this business of pleasing the æsthetic senses of the people is not extravagance; there is a commercial equivalent that makes for bigger and better business.

The illustration is of the new store of the MacRorie-McLaren Co., on Powell street, San Francisco. On the day of the opening, April 18, every woman visitor was presented with a phalænopsis corsage. Incidentally that day marked the company's advent into the retail end of the business.

New Retail Store of the MacRorie-McLaren Co., San Francisco.

MAKING CARRIERS LIABLE.

It will be good news to those of the trade who have suffered through delays on the part of the express companies that the courts are beginning to afford prompt redress.

A Municipal court decision at New York April 27 held that the Erie railroad was liable for loss sustained by delay in delivering perishable products. William R. Mankoff & Co. purchased four carloads of onions at Pine Hill and Florida, N. Y., valued at approximately $1,800. They accepted the goods on arrival, but alleged that when an attempt was made to dispose of the onions it was found one-half of them had been frozen and damaged, causing a loss of $811.16, for which they brought suit and obtained judgment. The defense took a stay for an appeal.

It was charged by the plaintiffs that the shipment should have been carried to its destination within twenty-four to seventy-two hours, whereas seven days elapsed from the time of shipment to delivery, and this delay was responsible for the damage to the product. Allen S. Hubbard of counsel for the railway company contended the product was in bad condition when received by the railroad. Justice Jacob Marks said:

"I find for the plaintiffs on the ground that it is the duty of the railroad company to notify the owners where there is congestion at the time of shipment, and where unreasonable delay results in delivery of perishable goods."

BADGLEY TO THE DEFENSE!

The Sunday Call, of Newark, N. J., for April 30 gave another illustration of the truth of the old saying that "a little knowledge is a dangerous thing" by printing the following editorial:

Tremendous sales of Easter flowers, which now include every variety, were recorded a week ago. One splendid American Beauty, bought on Saturday night of a Newark florist, was still in perfect bloom on Wednesday. An observant grower said: "Well, that flower wasn't pickled." It seems that is the trade name for flowers that are put on ice or in cold storage. The grower delivers these to the New York middleman about three weeks before the busy season and he "pickles" them until the big demand comes and high prices prevail. Then the flowers are taken from cold storage and sent to the retailer, "iced up," and he keeps them in much the same condition until sold. A couple of hours in a warm room destroys their loveliness, where a fresh flower would have lasted days, with ordinary care. The fault is mainly with the New York middleman, and thousands of customers are being lost to florists by the practice. Those retailers who buy directly from the grower and avoid the New York dealers give their customers what they should have, a fresh-cut flower, but the trade is monopolized to a dangerous extent by the metropolitan commission houses. As an instance of the difference in the prices of flowers, a month before Easter orchids could be had for $10 a hundred at Lakewood, and the day before Easter they were selling for $2 apiece.

Whereupon William G. Badgley, grower, commission man and publicist, took his pen in hand and indited the following epistle to the editor of the Call:

In reply to the above editorial, entitled "Tremendous Sale of Easter Flowers," I advise you that there is not a wholesale commission florist in New York city who "pickles" American Beauty roses or any other cut flowers for three weeks, and none, to my knowledge, for even one day, unless the demand for them on the day they come in is not great enough to cause them to clean up.

If there is any "pickling" done, it is absolutely done by the grower, and such "pickling" on their part has been vigorously condemned by the wholesaler for the past twenty-one years to my knowledge.

The particular case that you have come in contact with no doubt was a retailer who had purchased "pickled" goods at a low price and endeavored to sell them at the true value of fresh goods, and, having been caught in the act, has undertaken to shift the responsibility to others, as I do not know one retailer in Newark who could be fooled into buying "pickled" flowers if he did not want them.

The wholesale florists of New York are not a monopoly to any dangerous extent; in fact, they are not a monopoly at all. There is as much competition in our trade as there is in any business that ever existed, aside from the fact that the goods we handle are so perishable that they cannot be held for fixed prices.

I do not see, either, how our business could be monopolized, unless a few growers could control the glass market, which I consider quite remote, for should it come to a point where a few did get control and fix prices that would make their dealings profitable, there would be nothing to prevent anybody from building greenhouses and participating in those profits.

The prices we obtained for orchids and lily of the valley for Easter were not made possible by any fixed agreement by anybody, but were caused by the long established principle of supply and demand, and cannot be traced to any other source.

Your editorial is absolutely contrary to true conditions that exist in our business, and absolutely unjustified, and I further advise you that if all lines of industry were conducted on a principle as fair as ours, and by men as high in principle as those engaged in our business, there would not be much cause for complaint from the buying public. Wm. G. Badgley.

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE—AND WHY

IRA L. PILLSBURY.

WHEN you hear the name Pillsbury do you think of flour or of carnation staples? Ira L. Pillsbury was born February 3, 1859, at Macomb, Ill. His father was a minister, but the son became a gardener. He built the first greenhouse in that part of the state. In 1894 he removed to Galesburg to get a larger field. Growing a general stock for retail trade, he used tiny rubber bands to mend carnation calyxes when they split. Feeling the need of something better, he invented the first wire staple used for the purpose, which he had so perfected by 1908 that he patented it and introduced it to the trade. Today it is known the country over. Mr. Pillsbury is a member of the S. A. F., the F. T. D., the Carnation Society and is first vice-president of the Illinois State Florists' Association.

FARFUGIUMS FOR POTTING.

Will you please tell me how to care for farfugiums during the summer so they will make large clumps for separating? When should they be separated and what care should be given so as to have nice plants in 4-inch pots for early spring trade? What kind of soil is best suited to them. A. B. C.—O.

Plant the farfugiums out in any good garden soil now. They will make good-sized clumps, which can be lifted and separated before potting, about the end of September. Use a good fibrous loam, with some sand and a little leaf-mold added, when potting these divisions and keep them in a close frame until established. C. W.

OPEN LETTERS from READERS

F. T. D. WAVES ON EASTER.

Never in the history of the business was there so much use of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery and out-of-town service as during Easter week of this year. It is plain that the retailer is waking up to the fact that if he does a little advertising he will get results.

I believe that the orders sent out of Detroit during Easter week amounted to several thousand dollars. The business kept the F. T. D. girl busy all the week giving addresses to florists here.

Of course many retailers will make a fuss about small orders for only $1 or $2 each, and I will admit that I have had some of these myself, which required some of my money in order to make delivery, but the larger orders make up for these and, considering the advertising these small orders have given us, we ought to be good-natured and not kick. When one looks at it from another standpoint all arguments have no foundation and are even unbusinesslike. It is ridiculous for any one to tell a customer who wants to spend $1.50 or $2.00 that we do not deliver such small orders.

It is not at all businesslike to sidestep the F. T. D. service; it has come to stay and its foundation is strong, as it means money in every member's pocket. The time is here when every member is waking up to the fact that more members in more cities will help to increase the efficiency of F. T. D.

Really, why so many retailers cannot see the advantages of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery is beyond my understanding. Albert Pochelon.

FLORISTS POOR BOOKKEEPERS?

There is nothing more provoking than the results of a lack of ordinary bookkeeping and billing systems on the part of some of the rather substantial florists. From recent experiences it seems necessary to request your paper to open its columns to a narration of the miserable experiences arising out of poorly kept records of telegraph orders or orders placed by correspondence between two florists. In order that the subject may be opened, we will relate recent incidents and show the necessity for some consideration of the subject.

Last December we placed an order by wire with an Illinois florist, to deliver a corsage of violets and pink roses to a person attending a seminary in the suburb of the town in which the Illinois florist had his establishment. In the usual way we specified "Card" and "C. P.," giving the name of our customer, who desired his card in the box of flowers. In due course of time, among other mail, there came a letter addressed to the individual who had placed the order with us, in care of us, instead of being addressed to us. Our office records did not show anyone of that name employed by us, and, in the routine handling of several hundred pieces of mail daily, the letter went through the usual course of being returned to the writer.

April 22 the same customer placed a similar order and we endeavored to give this order to the same florist, who bears a rating of from $10,000 to $12,000, and has a first-grade credit. We were much chagrined to receive a reply from the florist stating that, unless we paid last December's bill, the order could not be accepted. No invoice had ever been rendered us. No communication of any kind had been received from the florist mentioned, but we now received from him an invoice addressed to our customer, care of us, showing that, without authority, he had entered a charge against our customer instead of against us.

We had a similar case of this kind in February, in dealing with a Massachusetts florist. In that instance the communication reached our customer, who had paid his bill to us when placing the order, with the result that he was furious.

We are placing these instances before you in the hope that some discussion may be started on proper methods of booking and billing orders between florists. We shall be pleased to see your columns carry the opinions of others in this regard.

BOSTON SHOW PLANS.

The present year appears to be one of more than usual interest in horticultural exhibitions. The success of the recent flower shows at Philadelphia and New York indicates this emphatically. The next important horticultural event will be the Grand May flower show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, which is to be held in Horticultural hall, Boston, May 10 to 14.

The management of the society is making preparations for this event and no effort is being spared to make the exhibition a notable success in every way. In addition to the liberal appropriation for premiums made by the society, many special prizes are offered by a number of prominent and influential members, which will make this show the most brilliant and most comprehensive of recent years.

The best products of many of the noted private collections in the vicinity of Boston will be offered to public view, as well as the specialties of the most famous growers of plants and flowers in this and other states. Notable features will be the collections of orchids, rhododendrons, roses and artistic displays of flowering and foliage plants. A class for miniature Japanese gardens will be one of the novelties of this exhibition.

The show will open Wednesday, May 10, at noon, continuing through Thursday, Friday and Saturday, from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m., and Sunday from 1 to 10 p. m. The Bostonia Orchestra will furnish music every afternoon and evening from 3 to 5 and from 7:30 to 9:30 o'clock.

Commercial growers, especially, will find this exhibition an unusual opportunity to call public attention to the products of their greenhouses and nurseries.

The premium list, which aggregates about $5,000, may be had on application to the secretary at Horticultural hall, Boston, and special trade tickets will be sold in lots of twenty-five or more at half the regular admission price. W. P. Rich, Sec'y.

Haarlem, Holland.—A list of the members of the Dutch Bulb Exporters' Association contains 130 names, all of whom have agreed "—— subject to penalty, to invoice in future for wholesale trade, all charges for cases and packing at cost price."

Hillegom, Holland.—With a surplus last season, R. Van der Schoot & Son donated to the British Red Cross over 340,000 bulbs for planting about the military hospitals in France and England. The showing of bloom has occasioned comment that has indicated that the surplus was not misused.

Paris, France.—Rosarians the world over will learn with regret of the death of Jules Gravereaux. In his rosary at L'Hay he created, not merely a collection of roses unique in the whole world, but also instituted and prosecuted most important scientific work. His inestimable services were justly rewarded by the ribbon of the order Commander du Mérite Agricole and the badge of Officier de la Légion d'Honneur.

Boskoop, Holland.—All through the district it is said quantities of last year's crop of spiræa are still on hand, unsalable at any price. Iris also have been hard to move. This year many growers are growing vegetables instead of plants.

London, England.—In the glass houses operated for the metropolitan market from fifty to seventy-five per cent of the employees have joined the colors, with the result that, quite appropriately, the nurseries are being largely operated by women.

Copenhagen, Denmark.—In order to positively identify their Danish stock Hjalmar Hartmann & Co. have adopted a trade-mark, the use of which is hoped to avoid many war-time complications and be of peace value. Each parcel is sealed with a lead seal bearing the trade-mark, consising of two crossed H's in a circle, with a sea gull on the top, symbolizing the Danish sea climate, and three wave lines at the bottom representing the three Danish sounds.

Geraniums

SPRING BEDDING.

Sales of bedding geraniums will start soon, if they have not yet commenced, and it behooves us to get the plants in as good condition as possible for our customers. Of course you must have noticed that the average purchasers of geraniums or, for that matter, any other bedding plants, invariably prefer such as have a truss of flowers open, and that they will select small plants with a flower open rather than much stronger ones not in bloom. It is necessary, therefore, to cater to this taste and have as many plants carrying flowers as possible. Do not force the plants with liquid manure. That will only cause soft, flowerless wood to be produced. If they look a little starved, give them a little Bon Arbor, or even nitrate of soda in the water to tone them up.

Keep the plants spaced apart from time to time. If greenhouse bench space is limited, you can always use coldframes, especially if a little warm manure is well firmed before the plants go in. Plants not yet showing flowers should have a light, sunny bench, with plenty of fresh air. If they have been grown crowded together some distance from the light and are drawn, they will need all the remaining weeks between now and selling time to get into presentable shape.

How about your own stock for another year? The too common practice is to sell all the best plants and plant out any culls and left-overs in the field for stock. Those who persist in this will soon find disease attacking their plants, and will find themselves under the necessity of buying stock from a distance to replace that which is run out by their own folly. Keep back enough healthy plants for your own use. Never mind if they are small and only in 2-inch or 2½-inch pots. These, if given a shift, will make excellent plants to set out in June. If you have good cuttings still on your stock plants, put these singly in 2-inch pots of sandy loam on a warm, sunny bench. Pot firmly and nearly all will root and make nice plants in the field before fall. A single pinch will suffice for them.

DISEASED GERANIUM FOLIAGE.

Will you kindly give me some information as to the cause of the disease on the enclosed geranium leaf?

W. R.—Ind.

The leaf forwarded was much decayed when received. It had evidently been attacked by some fungoid disease. The cause of this is hard to determine. It may originate in the cutting bench by propagating from unhealthy plants, or may be due to improper cultural conditions. Pick off badly affected leaves and destroy any hopeless looking plants. Give a spraying of Fungine or Bordeaux mixture when the foliage is dry. Repeat the dose a week later. Ventilate freely; keep the temperature down to 50 degrees at night. Keep a dry atmosphere and avoid syringing the plants. Keep them well spaced and a little on the dry side at the root. Follow out these rules and you should be able to rid yourself of this trouble.

C. W.

POOR GROWTH OF GERANIUMS.

I am sending you some geraniums and should like to know what is wrong with them. The buds on the S. A. Nutt are small, and when they open they have a withered look. The pink ones have a good bud, but do not make a nice bloom. I used a black loam, with some old hotbed manure. The plants were touched with frost about two months ago, when the fire went out one cold night. They were in a temperature of about 42 to 50 degrees all winter. They have been in 4-inch pots since the last of January. Can you suggest a remedy or tell me the cause of this trouble?

G. H. P.—Pa.

The plants appear to have good roots, but the growth is puny and they have a starved appearance. If the plants have been in 4-inch pots since the end of January, they have pretty well exhausted the soil they are in and I would give the surface soil a scratch over and give them a sprinkling of fine bone. I would also give them a watering with nitrate of soda at the rate of a pound to twelve gallons of water, but do not continue watering with this, as it is a powerful stimulant. Give the plants a light, sunny, airy house, kept at 50 to 52 degrees at night. You should notice a marked improvement in them before Memorial day.

C. W.

GERANIUMS FOR STOCK.

I wish to grow a few thousand geraniums next year, but I have no stock plants. If I buy rooted cuttings, pot them in 2¼-inch pots and set them outside when the weather is warmer, will they make many cuttings by fall, or would they make more if I set them out in a bench in the greenhouse? About how many cuttings would I get from 1,000 plants?

G. S.—N. J.

If you can spare a bench in one of your houses, I would prefer to plant there rather than outdoors. Cuttings made under glass are firmer and less liable to damp off than outdoor-grown stock. If you had stock in 4-inch pots to plant out now, you would get double or treble the number of cuttings you can get from rooted cuttings purchased now. The last named should average you ten or twelve cuttings each by fall and they will break away and yield a good many more between that time and spring. Do not make the soil in the bench too rich for your geraniums. Use some well-rotted manure and add some fine bone to it. Use the latter as a top-dressing from time to time, as the plants need a stimulant.

THE GLADIOLUS

FOR CUT FLOWERS.

If you have not planted any gladioli outdoors yet, do so now. Cover the bulbs to a depth of five or six inches; then they will not be likely to blow over in wet or windy weather, as shallow planted ones will do. Of course all the gladioli should not be put out now; make successional plantings until the middle or end of June, to have flowers over a long season. The varieties to be grown will depend on local conditions. America still is the most popular variety, while Mrs. Francis King comes second in favor. Other good commercial sorts are Halley, Brenchleyensis, Baron Hulot, Willy Wigman, Panama, Augusta, Lily Lehman, Klondyke and Peace.

GLADIOLI FOR EARLY WINTER.

We have a house containing solid beds, which we plant in sweet peas the latter part of August. We should like to know whether it would be practicable to carry gladiolus bulbs through the summer dry and plant them down the side of the sweet pea rows, so as to have the blooms between Thanksgiving and Christmas. What is the best method of increasing the stock of gladiolus bulbs? How do you treat the cormlets?

W. F. H.—Md.

Gladiolus corms can be carried over dry in a cool cellar and planted as suggested. Of course you will not get spikes of the same quality as from earlier plantings. Gladiolus corms are increased in three ways: First, by natural division or increase of corms; second, by seed, which can be sown in beds or nursery rows and will flower the second and third years, and third, from cormlets, which appear in large numbers on the corms of some varieties. These cormlets, or bulblets, should be carefully collected and stored in paper bags, or, better still, packed in sand over winter and then sown in drills like peas outdoors. I find that the cormlets keep plumper if packed in sand than when stored away in bags. By saving cormlets it is possible to increase particular varieties in quantity. From seed a large proportion would not come true.

ROSES

ROSES FOR THE BEGINNER.

We have three beds, two of which are solid and one raised. The solid beds are each 4x60 feet and the raised bed is 3x60 feet. The three beds we intend to plant to roses for the retail trade. We want easy doers for a start, as this is our first attempt at growing roses. We are thinking of planting one solid bed to Double White Killarney; the other solid bed to Killarney Brilliant; the raised bed, which has a head room of three feet, to Hadley and Ophelia. Are these varieties as good as others in the same colors? How many plants would it take to plant the three beds, and how warm should they be grown at night? Any information would be appreciated. H. W. S.—Md.

In the solid beds both Double White Killarney and Killarney Brilliant will do well, but to a beginner I would recommend the old Killarney instead of Killarney Brilliant, for it is an easier grower and will stand more abuse. For the raised bed I would suggest Mrs. Aaron Ward instead of either Hadley or Ophelia, for it requires less head room than either of the others. Three feet is not enough head room for Hadley or Ophelia. As there is only room for 144 plants on the raised bed, I would not plant more than one variety, because even under the most favorable conditions you would not average more than 300 blooms per month during the winter.

Setting the plants fifteen inches apart in the rows, four rows to the solid beds and three rows to the raised bed, you will need 192 plants of Killarney; 192 of Double White Killarney; 144 of Mrs. Aaron Ward. The night temperature should be 60 to 62 degrees. W. J. K.

ROSE PROPAGATION IN HAWAII.

Can you tell me how to propagate rose cuttings successfully in this climate? The temperature at night is from 65 to 75 degrees and in the daytime from 85 to 95 degrees. Rose cuttings placed in sand in a shady place made a profuse growth of leaves for about three weeks and then suddenly died without having formed any callus or roots. I got only two or three plants from 1,000 cuttings. I could try layering, of course, but that is a great deal of work.

H. J.—Hawaii.

I think propagation by means of cuttings would be difficult in your warm climate. Layering, while slower, would be safe. Have you tried budding or grafting? The latter method should prove safe, provided you can secure suitable stock on which to bud. Perhaps some Review readers who have tried rose propagation in a warm climate will give their experience. C. W.

MILDEW ON RAMBLER ROSES.

Please tell me what is wrong with my Baby Rambler roses, of which I am sending a specimen. I got them last year and had them in 5-inch pots, moving them to a bed in August. The soil contained some loam and sand. I got the soil from a wood where the leaves had rotted. I feed the plants with liquid cow manure about every two weeks. Would keeping them too wet be the cause of the trouble? I am not watering them now and will let them dry out thoroughly. The temperature is 50 to 55 degrees at night. I have cleaned out my greenhouse and raked all the soil under the benches. Should I burn sulphur? The plants are still growing and are coming into bud.

M. C. P.—Ind.

The foliage forwarded was simply covered with mildew. If your plants as a whole are affected in this way, I am afraid it is a pretty hopeless proposition to try to clean them. You will simply ruin your plants altogether if you burn sulphur in the house. If you have steam pipes, paint a little on one of the pipes. If hot water is used, paint some on the flow pipe. You can also help the plants in some measure by spraying with Fungine, Sulphocide or some other reliable proprietary fungoid remedy, applying it as directed on the cans. Mildew is usually caused by cold drafts. Ventilation must be carefully given. The trouble is encouraged, also, by improper atmospheric conditions and wide fluctuations in temperature.

Your soil was not just suitable for roses. In potting again, use good decayed pasture sod with some rotted cow manure added. Do not use any leaf-mold or sand. Feeding with liquid cow manure when the pots are well filled with active roots is beneficial. This can be applied once a week.

C. W.

NOT RHEA REID.

I am sending you, under separate cover, a red rose which appeared among my stock of E. C. d'Arenberg. Kindly tell me what variety it is. Is it Rhea Reid? E. A. R.—Ill.

The rose sent was too badly wilted, on arrival, to be positively identified, but its foliage seemed to indicate that it was Hadley. It was not Rhea Reid.

W. J. K.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Peonies.

The season is a somewhat backward one, but we have had abundant rains; in fact, it is many years since we have had so moist an April, with the land so moist at planting time. The moisture suits hardy herbaceous perennials to a nicety and none appreciate it more than the peonies. They are much benefited by feeding when the growths are a foot or so in height. Use some quick-acting food, such as liquid cow or sheep manure or nitrate of soda. It is better if applied when the ground is moist. Dried blood, thinly scattered among the plants and hoed in, also has proved to be a good fertilizer.

Asters.

The earliest batch of asters should now go outdoors. Never mind if they get a little frost; it will not harm them and they are better outdoors than becoming rootbound in pots or flats. The aster land should be well prepared, preferably in the fall, but if that was not done, as early in the spring as possible. Manure well with cow or well rotted barnyard manure. Harrow the land thoroughly. Where stable manure is scarce, commercial fertilizer can be substituted, and I have found a good potato fertilizer to answer well. To make up for the practical absence of potash in these fertilizers, use some wood ashes, which you yourself may have saved or which you can procure locally. Have you remembered to make successional sowings of asters? If not, get in a good batch of American or Vick's Branching, and one of the Ostrich Plume section, such as Crego. The seeds will do just as well now if sown in the open air.

Winter-Flowering Begonias.

Plants of the winter-blooming begonias, like Cincinnati, Gloire de Lorraine, Melior, Mrs. J. A. Peterson and others, are now making much better growth and will need attention before they become potbound. Use a light compost, containing a good deal of flaky leaf-mold, in addition to some old, well screened cow manure and sand. If one-half the total compost is leaf-mold, only partly decayed, the plants will enjoy it all the better. Place the plants in a warm house, kept at 60 to 62 degrees at night. As to those who grow only a small number of these winter-flowering begonias, I would advise them to purchase plants now from some specialist rather than do their own propagating.

Hardy Climbers in Pots.

Every country florist will have more or less call for climbers at this season, and for many weeks yet. I have always thought it a good plan to pot up a number of these, so that they can be planted at any time through the summer or fall. Any unsold plants can be plunged outdoors and, if not sold now, may sell in the fall. Pot plants are more likely to give customers good results than those from the open ground, and it is a branch of the business which should be much extended.

All the rambler type of roses, clematis, Ampelopsis Veitchii and A. Engelmanni, honeysuckles, Euonymus radicans, wistarias, vitis, Hydrangea petiolaris, aristolochias, etc., can be successfully handled in pots, while the polyantha, hybrid tea and hybrid perpetual roses and hardy perennials, of course, are much more salable late in the season if carried in pots. To compensate for the extra expense entailed in potting and caring for these, customers are usually willing to pay fifty per cent more for them in the case of climbers and twenty-five per cent more for roses and perennials.

Evergreens in Tubs.

Such evergreens as bay trees, boxes, Irish yews, aucubas, bay laurels, hollies, Araucaria imbricata, etc., which have been wintered in a cold greenhouse or pit, should all be outdoors now. Some may be much cramped and starved and may need retubbing, but all that the majority will need will be a removal of some of the surface soil and a top-dressing of loam and sheep manure or bone. Keep these evergreens well watered and sprayed when they go outdoors, especially if they have been stored in a dark pit or cellar. The foliage is liable to scald sometimes, if a hot day follows their removal from a cool cellar.

PLANTS UNDER MAGNOLIA.

What are the best ferns or other plants to use for a bed under a magnolia tree? The tree is five feet or a little more from a residence and about fifteen feet from a row of shade trees that border the street. All the trees are on the north side of the street. The space around the tree has been spaded up and enriched. Is there a vine that grows under and climbs up the magnolia in Florida? If so, what is the name of it and would it grow here, in northern Tennessee? M. E. H.—Tenn.

Where the magnolia is trimmed up so that there is a free circulation of air under it, and the soil is limed each season to keep it sweet, we have succeeded in growing a good sod of Bermuda grass under it. Where we have added bone meal to the lime, we have had some degree of success with a mixture of bluegrass and white Dutch clover, where the lowest limbs are at least four feet from the ground and the trees do not stand closer than twenty or thirty feet.

We have succeeded with English Ivy under magnolia trees under similar conditions, and Vinca minor grows well under them. Where the limbs are allowed to come close to the ground we have never seen anything that would grow under them. I have made diligent inquiry about the Florida vine you mention, but have failed to learn anything definite about it. Perhaps some other reader of The Review can name the vine referred to. F. B.

Carnations at the Establishment of John Miller, McHenry, Ill.

MILLER'S CARNATIONS.

McHenry, Ill., is located in the picturesque lake district frequented by Chicago people seeking release from the confinement of city life; McHenry is visited each year by many Chicago florists, few of whom fail to call at the establishment of John Miller, who grows carnations for the Chicago market. All those who have enjoyed the hospitality of the establishment will be interested in the accompanying illustration showing the crop of White Enchantress coming on for Easter, as the photograph was made April 19. Mr. Miller not only has had a good season, but is looking forward to an exceptionally successful May, with Mothers' day and Memorial day, the carnation plants being in unusually good shape for this date because of the cool spring.

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

Cleveland, O.—The James Eadie Co. filed a petition in voluntary bankruptcy May 1 in the United States District court, scheduling liabilities of $6,249.27 and assets of $3,857.21. The claims are pretty well scattered among local and eastern houses supplying the trade. The James Eadie business is one of the oldest in Cleveland. James Eadie, his daughter, Jane, and his son, James, conducted the greenhouses and store with success for nearly forty years. The corporate title was used after 1908 and after Miss Jane Eadie died, in 1913, the business passed to Frank A. Friedley and Frank Schoen, long employees of the competing J. M. Gasser Co. In November, 1915, Messrs. Friedley and Schoen separated, the former taking over and continuing the greenhouses under the title of the Friedley Co., Mr. Schoen retaining the retail store, one of the best in the downtown shopping section. Later the store was removed to a room occupied jointly with a candy concern. Mr. Schoen has associated with him, as secretary and treasurer, Mark A. Copeland, a local attorney.

RUST ON THE QUEEN CACTUS?

Will you please advise me if the enclosed leaves of Phyllocactus latifrons, or P. stenopetalus, are affected with rust, and, if so, what kind of treatment can you suggest? Sometimes the leaves become skeletonized from these rusty patches, but the blooming qualities of the plants are not noticeably affected. It makes them unsightly, however. L. S.—Ky.

This may be a true rust or merely sun-scald through defective glass. If you are sure the glass is all right, I would advise spraying the plants occasionally with some such fungoid remedy as Fungine or Bordeaux mixture. C. W.

STEM-ROT ON ANTIRRHINUMS.

Will you please tell me what is the trouble with my Silver Pink snapdragons? They are planted in a solid bed and in the last week I lost eleven plants out of 150. The plants stand about three feet high. They wilt over night and there is a ring of a yellowish color around the plants at the ground. On examining the crown, I find that the disease looks much like the stem-rot on carnations. There are from six to fifteen spikes to the plant. What can be done? H. L. U.—Kan.

Your plants undoubtedly have stem-rot. The cause of this is hard to determine, but it is probably due to the cuttings having been left crowded together too long in the cutting bench. There is little you can do to check this trouble, but I would suggest that you give the bench a top-dressing of lime and soot and rub some of this in about the stems of the plants. This may assist in some measure. Too deep planting sometimes aggravates this trouble. C. W.

Springfield, O.—Opha Jackson, president of the American Rose & Plant Co., has let a contract for the erection of a $20,000 office and storage building. An addition to the greenhouses is being built.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

The market held up exceptionally well last week. The supply of stock was not large enough to create a surplus and carnations were sufficiently scarce to keep the price between $4 and $5 per hundred for good stock. Roses were plentiful and in fine shape. Sales were brisk and the cut moved readily. Bulbous stock still is with us, although it is deteriorating rapidly. The movement of this class of stock still cuts quite a figure in the market. Violets are gone, but there is a good supply of sweet peas, which are in fine condition and selling well.

Valley is not plentiful, but the cut is large enough to supply the demand. Greens are moving exceedingly well and some difficulty is experienced in taking care of all orders in this line.

The outlook for Mothers' day is bright, despite the shortage of carnations that is already felt. It is hard to understand just why people want nothing but carnations, because other stock of the right color is just as appropriate. The trade will have to use other stock in many cases, but should try to educate the public to the fact that it is not the kind of flower but the color of the flower that makes the gift appropriate.

Some inquiries have been received for plants for that occasion, and this shows a healthy trend in sales, almost insuring a perpetually increasing demand for stock for this day.

Various Notes.

The Racine Floral Co. inaugurated a novel display in its window recently. A live model showing fancy gowns and parasols, with bouquets and corsages to match, was the center of attraction and created much favorable comment. This concern reports that it had a fine Easter business and that there has been little falling off in trade since then.

The Flower Shop is putting in a new basement at the store at 611 Main street, Racine, Wis. This will greatly add to the facilities for handling the business and will be invaluable at holiday times, when large plant orders have to be handled quickly. Business has been exceptionally good and the proprietor is well satisfied with the season so far. H. J. S.

NEWARK, N. J.

The Market.

Business in Newark and vicinity slackened somewhat last week, but that was to be expected after the big holiday business. There was no slump, however, and business is on a good foundation.

Memorial day is the next big event. This does not help the florists in the center of the city as much as those near the cemeteries, where many have contracts for keeping graves decorated throughout the season. They now are doing the first work of the season along that line, thousands of pansies already having been planted. There has been a growing demand during the last few weeks for hardy rose bushes, potted hydrangeas, rhododendrons, azaleas, spiræas, marguerites, etc. There has been a flood of pansy plants coming into the market and they have met an active demand.

The demand for seeds has increased greatly during the last two weeks, and with the coming of more settled weather there will be a still greater demand.

Various Notes.

H. A. Strobell is selling many window boxes at the present time. The demand is caused by the celebration of the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the founding of Newark. Thousands of people are visiting the city to witness the many events planned, and the people were asked to beautify their places for the occasion.

George W. Harvey, of Rahway, reports an excellent Easter and now is preparing for Memorial day.

August C. Begerow had his store front decorated for the opening of Newark's anniversary celebration. The colors were orange and black, the celebration colors.

Davies & Davis, wholesale growers at Central avenue and Grove street, East Orange, have been getting their bedding stock in shape for the season. They are transplanting their mum cuttings and have a fine lot of geraniums for the Memorial day trade.

C. J. Connolly states that business is in a healthy condition.

Henry Hornecker, of East Orange, says this year's Easter trade was the best he ever had.

F. A. Kuehn has been busy with decorations in the cemetery opposite his place of business. He has a fine lot of geraniums and other bedding plants coming on.

Ernest Radany reports his Easter trade was better than expected. Cemetery work now is in full swing.

There was a unique display in the window of George Penek's flower store last week. It was a potted red rambler rose trained into the shape of a ship by means of small bamboo rods. The hull was made of green crepe paper, which hid the lower part of the bush, the pot, etc. At both stem and stern of the ship were small American flags. The ship was between three and four feet long. R. B. M.

USINGER'S UTTERANCES.

The H. Weber & Sons Co., of Fairmont, W. Va., reports a large sale of seeds. Funeral work and cut flower sales are keeping all hands busy.

J. L. Watts & Co., of Morgantown, W. Va., are busy with outdoor planting.

Judicious advertising is the reason given by A. H. Sherman, of Warren, O., for his increased business.

A retail store has been opened in the Phoenix hotel building, of Corry, Pa., by A. W. Warren.

Deming, N. M.—Mrs. Rura Bliss Knowles has started a florists' business, despite the Mexicans a few miles to the south, the Indians, the alkali dust and other pleasant things.

New Orleans, La.—It is reported that the partnership of A. Verlinde and M. Vander Eecken, who have conducted a florists' business at Castiglione and Rosiere streets, is to be dissolved.

New Orleans, La.—A check for several hundred dollars will be sent the Louisiana Anti-Tuberculosis League by the New Orleans Horticultural Society. The money represents part of the proceeds of the recent flower show given by the society at the Athenæum, of which the league was a beneficiary. Henry Scheuermann, C. R. Panter and P. A. Chopin were the men responsible for the sucess of the event.

Oklahoma City, Okla.—The Easter business of Furrow & Co. was excellent, averaging about fifty per cent better than that of last year. Lilies and hydrangeas easily took the lead in flowering plants. Baskets of plants ranging from $5 to $10 each in price sold quickly. The cut flower business, as a whole, was better than the plant trade, and by noon April 23 practically everything was sold. Special boxes of cut flowers at $3.50 to $10 were a great success and corsages were more popular than ever.

Shreveport, La.—R. L. Stringfellow is interested in large market gardens near Crichton and Mooringsport, La.

Alvin, Tex.—The prospect is for the largest and finest crop of cape jasmine buds ever shipped for Memorial day.

Atlanta, Ga.—J. P. Matthiessen, at one time connected with the Atlanta Commission Florists Co. and the Ponce de Leon Floral Co., has retired from the business.

Houston, Tex.—An impatient landlord recently filed a suit for $950 against the Forestdale Flower Shop and has asked the court to appoint a receiver for the business. An injunction also was asked restraining the removal of fixtures and other assets upon which the plaintiff claims a landlord's lien.

Portsmouth, Va.—The authorities recently had a spasm of blue law enforcement and the W. P. Cotton Floral Co. was brought into court charged with the violation of the Sunday labor laws; that is, keeping open Sundays. The judge decided that flowers do not come under the head of necessities and, for that reason, the sale of flowers on Sundays should be prohibited. Cigars, soda water and drugs, however, may be sold on the Sabbath, but not candy or magazines. Ice cream can only be sold when it is a portion of a drink served at the fountain. Portsmouth's Sunday laws are a liberal education.

THE ARNOLD ESTABLISHMENT.

The accompanying illustration shows the wholesale cut flower store of D. C. Arnold & Co., Inc., at 112 West Twenty-eight street, New York, as well as Manager William O'Sullivan and others of the force of salesmen. D. C. Arnold is president of the concern and Henry Thomas secretary and treasurer. The company has conducted a wholesale business in New York for four years. At Babylon, Long Island, it has a range that will total 130,000 square feet of glass when the two new houses are completed.

Carnations are the specialty of this house, which has introduced the popular variety, Mrs. Arnold, and shortly will offer a new red seedling of merit, still unnamed. Henry Thomas, the secretary, who is spending some weeks at Saranac Lake, is rapidly recovering his health and shortly will return to the city and his duties in the wholesale department. J. Austin Shaw.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Recessions in cut flower prices were inevitable April 29, for, notwithstanding those seven inches of snow at Boston and vicinity, New York reveled in a summer temperature. The week following Easter was as dull as usual, and prices slowly sagged until its close. With a continuance of the warmth and sunshine, the present week will see a flood of roses and carnations. Prices now average about one-half of the Easter quotations; in fact, they are so reasonable that they appeal to the heavy purchasers for the chain and department stores, and through these outlets the clean-up April 29 was generally satisfactory.

Some stock sold far below its true value. The southern lilac is here, of excellent quality. American Beauties are abundant. The best brought only $25 per hundred April 29 and, in quantities, as low as $15 was quoted. The best Hadley roses have receded in price to $35 per hundred and Prima Donna, Ophelia and the other specialties have acted in like manner. Cecile Brunner is not overabundant and maintains its popularity. Mock at its best makes a splendid center for florists' windows. The short-stemmed roses of almost all kinds sold as low as $10 per thousand. Even lower prices are expected before the week is over.

There is a large supply of carnations. Prices have been maintained wonderfully, a tribute to the ability of the carnation growers in this section. The best of the novelties, a few, sold at $4 per hundred April 29, but $3 was the average top price for these, and $2 was the bottom for the day. Undoubtedly there will be many for sale Saturday at $10 per thousand.

Longiflorum lilies are more than abundant and only the long-stemmed selects sell for 8 cents; 3 to 5 cents would be a fair average. Since Easter many lilies have been used in wedding decorations. Gardenias are on the street again, a season's shameful ending for this beautiful and once favorite flower. One could obtain any number of them at $5 per hundred. Valley certainly won the crown for advance at Easter. The price jumped to $8 and $10 per hundred, and some say even higher. At any rate, it was the Bethlehem Steel of the Easter market. Now the quotation is $4 to $5 and by Saturday the best probably will be selling at $3 to $4.

Cattleyas still are independent. Good gigas brought 75 cents to $1. The flower shows are given as the cause of the orchid shortage and high prices. It is said $2 will be the high-water mark for many a year to come. Violets are arriving in limited quantities. This week will probably end them for the season. Tulips are numerous and up to the high grade of the year. Daffodils, southern gladioli and lilacs are abundant. The market carries a great variety of spring flowers, such as pansies, daisies, sweet peas, Spanish iris, mignonette, callas, calendulas and forget-me-nots. There are a few freesias and flowering plants—the aftermath of Easter.

Mothers' day should, if properly advertised, bring a big day to New York, as it will to the smaller towns and cities.

Various Notes.

May 9 is the date of the next meeting of the New York Florists' Club. The essay committee's chairman promises a lecture, and there will be exhibits, refreshments and interesting details of the New York flower show.

The great business men's parade May 13 will have representatives from every trade in line. And it is said there will be a good squad representing all departments of the florists' business.

Lilac has been arriving from the south for a week at the headquarters of the Kervan Co., the New York Florists' Supply Co. and N. Lecakes. The quality of the stock is excellent and the shipments are rapidly absorbed.

L. B. Coddington, of Murray Hill, has been suffering for some weeks from an attack of the measles and H. E. Froment, who handles the output from Mr. Coddington's houses, has had a siege of the grip.

W. M. Bishop, of Badgley & Bishop, Inc., received a call from the stork April 27, when a fine young wholesale florist was left at his door.

The Brooklyn Wholesale Market, Joseph Levy, proprietor, has given up its branch and has concentrated at the old stand at Fulton street and Red Hook lane.

Phillips' new store at 352 Flatbush avenue, Brooklyn, is a beauty. William Phillips says the new icebox installed cost them more than $800. The entire store is handsomely decorated. J. V. Phillips, the veteran, is in charge. "The best Easter business in thirty years," was his verdict, and the verdict of most of the prominent Brooklyn florists.

The Loretz Flower Shop, at the corner of Flatbush avenue and Dean street, Brooklyn, where Mrs. Loretz is in charge, reports a splendid Easter, far ahead of expectations. Everything was sold and George Scott, of Flatbush, was called on for an extra load of plants late Easter evening.

The MacNiff plant auctions draw large numbers of buyers. The weather has been ideal for planting; nurserymen have been especially fortunate. The delay of spring has been worth a great deal to the nursery business here and everywhere in the east.

Charles Millang's branch store did a remarkable Easter business. Now bedding plants have the call. Mr. Millang says he will keep his branch open until the good old summer time arrives.

S. Woodrow was busy all of last week in Jersey, completing a landscape contract. He has many jobs booked for the season.

Goldstein & Futterman were greatly pleased with their Easter business.

M. A. Bowe's new store is elegantly fitted up, the mirror effect being especially attractive. The location, 332 Fifth avenue, close to Thirty-third street, is excellent.

William Kessler reports the best Easter since he began business.

A. M. Henshaw opened his new store at 127 West Twenty-eighth street May 1. One can hardly recognize the old store, which formerly was occupied by Cotsonas & Co.

Joseph Fenrich and family are already at their country home near Asbury Park, N. J., for the summer. Mr. Fenrich will continue business at the old stand, 51 West Twenty-eighth street. His store will be refitted and redecorated. J. Austin Shaw.

The Horticultural Society of New York will hold its annual spring exhibition May 13 and 14, at the Museum building in the New York Botanical Garden, Bronx Park. Prizes are offered for collections of herbaceous plants, shrubs and trees, tulips, narcissi, orchids, sweet peas and snapdragons. Prizes also are offered for plants of pelargoniums and calceolarias. Special prizes may be awarded by the exhibition committee for any exhibit of special merit. Schedules now are ready for distribution and may be had on application to the secretary, George V. Nash, Mansion, New York Botanical Garden, Bronx Park, New York.

OMAHA, NEB.

The Market.

The cold, rainy weather prevailing last week put rather a crimp in the flower business in these parts, but no one complained, as the Easter trade more than offset any slump coming on now. Many of the retailers claim that their sales were double those of last year.

Various Notes.

Charles Ederer sold out clean at Easter and only regrets that he did not lay in a larger supply of stock. His bedding plants are in fine shape and selling faster than during any previous season.

A. Donaghue is cutting extra fine Russell roses and sweet peas. He has several thousand tulips planted in his lawn —everybody knows he is a florist.

Oscar Herman is passing around the cigars again. The stork left another girl at his house last week, which makes the fourth. He says the boys ought to set up the cigars to him. Why, Oscar?

The Fernery had an excellent trade at Easter and reports that the business doubled that of last year.

Considering that it was their first Easter in business, the proprietors of the Flower Shop say they are more than satisfied with the volume of business done.

Fred Berlinghof, who was stricken with pneumonia last week, is reported to be somewhat better.

The Bowling.

Last week we journeyed over to Council Bluffs to try our hand on their alleys. Omaha won the game by the narrow margin of 157 pins. The score follows:

NEWPORT, R. I.

Under the auspices of the Newport Horticultural Society, E. L. Wilson, of the Arnold Arboretum, lectured at a public gathering in Music Hall, April 25, on the "Flowers and Gardens of Japan." Mr. Wilson, who has spent many years in other countries in collecting and studying their flora, was listened to by a large audience. He described the interesting pictures thrown on the screen to illustrate the Japanese gardens, plants and trees.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

With a quieter week we have had time to look over the Easter business. The local trade was good. Most of the florists report business better than ever.

Azaleas and lilies as usual were the favorites. Both were plentiful and of good quality. Many of the markets handled lilies and they sold as low as 12½ cents at retail. The better ones brought up to 20 cents. Bulbous stock of all kinds was plentiful and cheap.

Various Notes.

W. H. Davenport had a big Easter trade, but nevertheless had many lilies left on hand.

Ernest Chamberlain reports the best season he has ever experienced. He disposed of a tremendous stock of plants. His cut flower trade also was good.

Julius, the Florist, had some attractive baskets which he found no trouble in disposing of. Samuel Rusitzsky has left the employ of Julius.

William P. Pierce cleaned up well. A breakdown of his delivery car made it difficult to deliver orders, but he managed to get everything out on time.

A recent fire destroyed the office, boiler room and part of one greenhouse at the establishment formerly owned by William E. Mosher.

E. M. Pierce reports a successful Easter. He had a splendid stock of bulbous plants, which he disposed of at both wholesale and retail.

S. E. Shaw has a large house of stocks that will be in fine condition at Memorial day. His carnations are doing well.

Fred Reynolds is devoting his entire time to his store in the Olympia building, his other store and greenhouse on Court street having been sold.

H. V. Sowle did his usual big Easter business. W. M. P.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Since Easter, business has been fair. The supply has been good and sufficient to take care of an active demand. The shipping business is good.

Roses, including American Beauties, are in satisfactory supply. During April carnations were not any too plentiful, but this week they are coming into our market in large quantities. Easter lilies are plentiful. The same is true of sweet peas. Some excellent snapdragons may be had. Valley and orchids are rather scarce and in brisk demand. A limited supply of outdoor bulbous stock is available. Lilac has been meeting with a strong call from out-of-town buyers. New southern ferns now are in the market.

Various Notes.

E. G. Gillett's hanging baskets have been having an excellent sale this spring.

E. A. Forter had an auspicious formal opening of his new store May 1. The opening was largely attended.

C. E. Critchell has been having an unusually heavy call for green sheet moss and hanging baskets.

The Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange received its first southern ferns of the season last week.

Recent visitors were H. J. Vander Horst, of St. Marys, O., and Joseph Hill, of Richmond, Ind. C. H. H.

Malden, Mass. — More than 40,000 plants of Easter lilies were well timed by Kaulback & Son for Easter.

Weymouth, Mass.—The florists' business formerly conducted by Beechey Bros. has been purchased by W. W. Gordon, of Concord, N. H.

Providence, R. I.—B. Hammond Tracy, of Wenham, Mass., lectured at the April meeting of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society on the culture of gladioli, April 19.

Nahant, Mass.—The annual spring flower show at the greenhouses of Thomas Roland was unusually successful this year, a large number of people availing themselves of the opportunity to inspect Mr. Roland's high-grade stock.

Lawrence, Mass.—As usual, A. H. Wagland had a splendid showing of Easter flowering plants at his large conservatory on Broadway. Mr. Wagland holds a free flower show every year a week before Easter. It helps business greatly.

Pittsfield, Mass.—The Rosery, the flower store in the Waite building, has been closed. The store was one of the most attractive in the city, but it had not been on a paying basis for some time.

Bridgeport, Conn.—So large was the pre-Easter rush at the Main street store of James Horan & Son that it was found necessary to open another store on Fairfield avenue, between Broad and Harrison streets.

Bridgeport, Conn.—The establishment of G. F. Herthal recently came in for lengthy comment in the town's press. It was pleasing for Mr. Herthal to note that the article called his numerous flowering plants "most satisfactory Easter gifts."

Willimantic, Conn.—William A. Dawson was the principal speaker at the April meeting of the New London Horticultural Society. He spoke on the history and development of the carnation and advocated more up-to-date cultural methods on the part of wholesale growers.

OBITUARY

Ira G. Marvin.

Ira G. Marvin, aged 52, for many years the leading florist at Wilkes-Barre, Pa., died at his home, 359 Wyoming avenue, in the adjacent town of Kingston, at 11:20 p. m., April 30. Not having been in good health since the holidays, Mr. Marvin had been unable to leave his bed for nine weeks. The cause of death was heart trouble.

Since beginning the florists' and nursery business for himself in Wilkes-Barre in 1886, Mr. Marvin had taken a prominent place in the business representation of the city. Besides his retail stores he was an extensive grower, having first a range of greenhouses on South Main and South Franklin streets, and then extensive greenhouses at Firwood, from which place he was driven by a succession of flood losses, and his present houses on Pringle street, Kingston.

For many years Mr. Marvin had branch stores in the neighboring towns, and the trade he built up through years of catering to the flower lovers of the region became second to none in this part of the state. In the spring of 1915 his affairs became involved and he filed a petition in bankruptcy, although his assets much exceeded his liabilities. The estate still is in the hands of the court.

Ira G. Marvin was the ninth generation in the line of descendants in this country of Reinold Marvin, who settled in Connecticut in 1636. He was born February 11, 1864, at Stroudsburg, the son of Henry H. Marvin and Sarah A. Miller. His father and mother both dying when he was quite young, he spent his early childhood with his grandfather, Rev. George Miller, who was one of the pioneer pastors of Monroe county. He was a student at Fairview Acadamy, Brodheadsville. He located at Wilkes-Barre when a young man, following from the first the florists' and nursery interests and beginning business for himself in 1886.

Mr. Marvin was married November 12, 1891, to Sophie L. Ahlborn, daughter of Frederick Ahlborn, and is survived by his wife and the following children: Gertrude, George Guthrie and Ira Huston, and one brother, Steward Marvin, of Stroudsburg.

Frederick A. Bolze.

Frederick Bolze, who died recently at his home in Pleasantville, N. Y., at the age of 70, had the distinction of being one of the florists of New York city before the days of the Civil war, in 1859, to be precise. Mr. Bolze was born in Hanover, and was educated at the Royal College of King George of Hanover, receiving a special degree of merit, and soon after came to this country. He first started a florists' business on Fifth avenue, near Forty-second street, New York, but later moved to Lexington avenue and Fifty-fourth street. In 1896 Mr. Bolze disposed of his New York possessions and moved to Pleasantville, N. Y., where he established the greenhouse and nursery business in which he was actively engaged up to the time of his death. He was a member of the Knights of Pythias. He leaves four daughters and one son. New York florists attending the funeral were W. H. Siebrecht, Sr., and W. G. Badgley, of Badgley & Bishop.

Flowers at the Last Resting Place of Bertha Riessen Buechel, St. Louis.

John B. Savageau.

John B. Savageau, better known as John B. Sargent to the gardeners of Massachusetts, died of blood poisoning April 24 in the Leominster hospital, Leominster, Mass., at the age of 43. The deceased accidentally scratched one of his fingers a few days previous to his death and, thinking it not serious, did not give it proper care. Blood poisoning developed quickly and he was taken to the hospital for treatment, which was unsuccessful from the start.

Mr. Savageau was born in Masonville, R. I. When 14 years of age he moved to Leominster with his parents. He found employment there under Joseph Fuller and learned the business at the Fuller greenhouses. Later he went to South Lancaster, where for several years he worked for E. O. Orpet, now of Lake Forest, Ill. Three years ago Mr. Savageau returned to Leominster and established the florists' and greenhouse business in which he was engaged up to a few days before his death. He is survived by three children, five brothers and two sisters.

Mrs. Mary J. Stevens.

Mrs. Mary J. Stevens, proprietor of the Stevens Floral Co., of Port Huron, Mich., passed away April 25 following a lingering illness. Mrs. Stevens was the widow of the late D. E. Stevens, whose death occurred about four years ago. Since that time Mrs. Stevens had ably managed the business left to her care. She was born in Toronto, April 23, 1849. A daughter and son survive her.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

One of the principal features of the Easter business noted by Manager George Geraghty, of Dunlop's Flower Shop, Toronto, Ont., was the increase in orders by wire. More than 160 telegraph orders were received during the week preceding Easter, from all parts of the vast country between Nova Scotia and Vancouver. Another half-dozen were handed in April 24, including one from San Antonio, Tex., and some from Winnipeg, Man., for delivery the following week. An excellent plan is that with every express shipment a prepaid acknowledgment card is enclosed, so that the consignee may advise the consignor in what condition the shipment arrived. Should any complaint be received the order is duplicated. "We believe it a good policy, although sometimes we may get stung," said Mr. Geraghty. Of special note was a spray made with Marguerite Mrs. Sander; both the single and double blooms were exceptionally fine. I understand this is one of the most profitable things grown in bush form, for design work. The new store is 31x95 feet, handsomely equipped, and has a regular force of five women and six men to handle the retail end.

J. Gammage & Sons, of London, Ont., report an excellent season. William Gammage, Sr., is busy in the landscape department on some planting contracts for the Grand Trunk railway, which is beautifying its principal stations along the line. It is hoped to apply the idea throughout the entire system. Mr. Gammage, Jr., was a highly interested visitor at the National Flower Show and was favorably impressed with what he saw on this, I understand, his first official trip.

Colin Ogston, superintendent of the Kimball Greenhouses, Rochester, N. Y., is proud of a fine specimen plant of Dendrobium chrysotoxum, in a 5-inch basket, carrying nine perfect spikes of exquisite color.

John F. Malone, the new commissioner of Buffalo parks, is mapping out a project for making the Buffalo parks and gardens more attractive to the public, who showed their appreciation in connection with the recent plant decoration at the Elks' festival. W. M.

THE F. T. D. orders for Mothers' day probably will be heavier than they were for Easter.

THE rising cost of wire will preclude the low prices that sometimes are made to keep the wire-workers busy during summer.

THERE is a steady increase in the employment of women in large greenhouse establishments, where the routine tasks are well performed by them.

ALTHOUGH cow manure is unobtainable in most places, horse manure still is to be had in considerable quantity. As a spring mulch for carnations it is excellent and can be used without fear.

SLOWLY this trade is approaching the point, long since reached in most other lines, where regular settlement dates are insisted on. The slow pay buyer steadily finds himself at greater disadvantage.

IF importers in this trade may be said to have had troubles of their own in the last few months, it seems that their difficulties will be multiplied as time goes on. Some of the largest importing houses are said to be considering discontinuing business until conditions become more nearly normal.

NEVER a day passes but some Chicago florist calls The Review on the telephone to obtain an address to which an order can be sent in a town not on the Telegraph Delivery lists. If your town, Mr. Reader, is not represented in the Telegraph Delivery Department you can get all the orders for your section by putting in a card.

MORE COMMERCIALIZATION.

Talking about "commercializing" Mothers' day, the florists are not the only ones who seek to make a little something out of it. For instance, each Western Union message now contains a slip that reads:

Sunday, May 14, is Mothers' day, the day set apart in honor of the mothers of the land; the day on which everyone who is distant from his mother will delight in sending her a message of affectionate greeting. Mothers' day messages sent by Western Union will be delivered on special blanks appropriate to the occasion.

There isn't a word about sending flowers, but there is a cut of carnations that would better have been left off.

F. T. D. ORDERS BY HUNDRED.

In the Mott-ly Musings in this issue of The Review, George M. Geraghty, manager of the Dunlop retail store in Toronto, is quoted as stating they received, during the week preceding Easter, 160 orders from other florists for delivery in Toronto and vicinity—160 orders of the kind the trade has come to know as F. T. D. orders. It would be a quite respectable week's business for many a store, and all from out of town.

The F. T. D. business has grown to such a volume that it is surprising that there is any city of 25,000 or more not represented in The Review's telegraph delivery department. A card there (a half inch) can be carried for as little as 35 cents per week on yearly order—and it brings the orders. If your city is not in the list, there's a golden opportunity for you.

PUT IT JUST SO.

The man who advertises white carnations, or carnations of any color, as the emblematic flower of Mothers' day only lays up trouble for himself, and for all of us. Of course, the estimable lady to whom we are indebted for the idea asserts as loudly as lies within her power that the official flower is the white carnation and none other; but she is the same one who once told the editor of The Review that if the florists did not cease commercializing the day she would change its emblem to a button or a ribbon—so we have each to go our own way.

When Mothers' day was only a year or two old The Review appreciated that the occasion had annual possibilities far beyond the limits of the supply of white carnations; that the exploitation of the white carnation would be positively harmful to the trade and that the value of the day lay only in the general use of all kinds of flowers. To meet the situation a phrase was coined that since has come into general use:

For Mothers at home, flowers bright,
In Mother's memory, flowers white.

While nearly every reference to flowers for Mothers' day now contains this thought, and it has resulted in a truly wonderful benefit to the whole trade, a great many fail to use the couplet in exactly the words here given. Some fail to use the rhyming form, though it is the rhyme that clings in the memory; some retain the rhyme but destroy the meter, thereby giving offense to those who like verse to scan; some almost lose the thought in the looseness of their language and only a few watch the capitalization and the position of the apostrophe. In last week's issue of The Review eight of last year's Mothers' day ads were reproduced as examples of what to do or not to do. All of them showed the influence of the "bright" flower idea, but not one followed the quotation exactly; yet none of the variations was so good as the original. This year put it just so:

For Mothers at home, flowers bright,
In Mother's memory, flowers white.

HARDY CUT FERNS.

This is a trade in which the unexpected usually happens, and the indications are that this is the case with hardy cut ferns. During the late winter there was an evident general desire on the part of practically all who deal in ferns to push along the sales and clean up the stock in storage. One of the regular monthly advances in prices even was omitted. The result appears to be that, instead of a surplus, there now is less than the usual quantity on hand and May 1 brought a general advance in prices. In addition to the New England and Michigan ferns in storage, a few of the spring pick technically known as snow birds have appeared on the market. There also are small quantities of southern ferns ready for immediate use, but the holders of good ferns in storage do not fear the competition of spring stock before the middle of June. They are looking for something of a squeeze around Memorial day.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

This year, unlike last year, the Chicago market experienced no such after-Easter reaction as to cause a reversal of conditions. Instead of the inertia that usually follows the holiday rush there has been at least a normal demand. Small, to be sure, in comparison with the inflated demand of the week preceding, but still much larger than the trade, judging by experience, had expected. Prices on some items of stock dropped as a matter of course, but on the whole there was much less decline than is usual during a post-holiday week.

Perhaps Beauties experienced a greater change of condition than any other item on the market. Whereas they were extremely scarce and barely passable stock was selling at good prices during Easter week, the market last week was decidedly slack, prices were softening, and the supply, particularly of long-stemmed stock, was much more liberal. Demand, however, needed much coaxing. The supply of other roses continues large. Demand, too, is large enough to leave no grounds for complaint. Russell, without an effort, still leads the list. Ophelia may be given second place with little danger of contest. Ward, Sunburst and Milady, when well grown, sell themselves. Richmond and the Killarneys may always be depended upon to hold their own, though quite a few Killarneys were a little off color last week. Hoosier Beauty, though still somewhat of a stranger, is rapidly winning friends.

Carnations are holding up remarkably well, not only in the matter of supply, but in that of price and demand. Quality on the whole is good, though some Enchantress and Victory are a trifle off. The supply of Spanish iris is short enough to clear readily. Sweet peas seem to have gained the favor of the flower buying public. Everyone wants sweet peas and so, though the supply is large, more could be used. So great has been the clamor for valley, and so short the supply, that growers have been put to it to satisfy the demand. The result is, there is enough valley to go around, but much of it is far too green. The number of Easter lilies is almost unlimited and a buyer, providing he will undertake to purchase a quantity, can name his own price. And even this extreme measure does not serve to clear them. Good daisies move well, but there is little chance for any other kind. Snapdragons of first quality are proving unusually good property. Pansies and calendulas, too, move in a satisfactory manner. Bulbous stock is tottering on the brink, and both in quality and demand ceases to be a feature. Cattleyas still are almost unobtainable and prices range accordingly high.

May 1 was ushered in with rain and cold. Usually at this time of the year there is an abundance of outdoor stock on the market. This year, owing to the continued cold weather, the season is at least three weeks behind. The receipts of white lilac are erratic in the extreme, and purple is far from plentiful. The supply of gladioli, too, is sporadic.

While all green goods are moving well, adiantum leads the list with an unusually heavy demand.

April Weather.

When the trade compares the April record with that of last year there is another important difference besides the difference in the date of Easter. Last year the mean temperature for April was 56 degrees, while this year it was only 48 degrees. This will account in great measure for many of the differences in market conditions. This year, in addition to a much lower temperature, April gave us only five-sixths as much sunshine as we had in April last year. This year we had only fifty per cent of the possible. Growers, anxious to get stock into the field, will note that the rainfall was only 1.6 inches, which is more than last year, but 1.28 less than the normal.

Various Notes.

A wholesaler was incredulous when the assertion was made, by a Review representative, that last year Mothers' day business was almost two-thirds as heavy as that of Easter, long famous as the trade's big day of the year. But when he consulted his sales record he found this general estimate held good in at least that one case. How about others? Has the importance of Mothers' day been only half appreciated.

A consultation of physicians held last week resulted in C. W. McKellar going to Hot Springs, Ark., May 2, accompanied by Mrs. McKellar. Mr. McKellar has had a serious time for several weeks with pains in his head that were thought to be neuralgia, but the physicians have now determined that they resulted from abnormal blood pressure and have prescribed a Hot Springs treatment.

The Most Satisfactory Rose for Spring and Summer

THE purpose of this advertisement is to attract the attention of Retail Florists who have not yet tried our Mrs. Russell Roses—we want them to know that here is a Rose that is giving greater satisfaction than any other Rose on the market today. On the score of:

SIZE—It is the largest Rose on the market; much larger than the best Killarney; almost as large as Beauty.

COLOR—Russell is a pink Rose, but as we grow it, so dark many people call it red; does not fade in summer like other pink roses.

FRAGRANCE—The fragrance is strong as well as sweet; let your customer smell Mrs. Russell Rose and you have made a sale.

SUBSTANCE—The Russell Rose is full of petals; big, hard flowers that wither in time, but the petals never fall.

STEM—We are cutting Russells with stems up to four feet; strong, thick stems that hold the flower upright.

FOLIAGE—The foliage on Mrs. Russell is heavy, thick, dark green and plenty of it.

KEEPING QUALITY—Fine as the flower is, in size, color, fragrance, stem and foliage, the keeping and shipping quality is what makes it of special value to Retail Florists. As an evidence of the keeping quality, let us state that we shipped flowers from Union Grove, Wis., to the National Flower Show at Philadelphia and took first prize over locally grown Russells. We repeated the performance at the International Show in New York the next week. As we also took first prize at the Chicago Show, we can claim not only the finest Russells in America, but we can assert with confidence they will reach any Retail Florist anywhere in this country in first-class condition. In the homes of your customers, Russell will keep longer than any other rose and give greater satisfaction.

We Have 36,000 Russell Plants on Our Benches

These are plants now starting their second season—big, strong, bushy plants that are just in condition to give a splendid steady crop for Mothers' day, for Memorial day, for June weddings and right along through the summer. We shall cut in quantity every day for months.

Retailers who have tried this rose are using it regularly, but we shall not be content until the whole trade knows its excellence.

Send your orders to the E. C. Amling Co., 174 North Wabash Avenue, Chicago, our exclusive sales agents. We make no sales direct.

Caution

It is not hard to arouse enthusiasm, as is seen from the way inquiries have already been pouring in, but it is hard to supply the demand that has ill-advisedly been developed for carnations.

Let us combine in an effort to change the custom —push the "Mother's favorite flower" idea strong.

Judging from the requests we have already received for Carnations, they will be even shorter than last year. We will not accept any orders calling for White Carnations alone.

Do you want to cash in on the ever-growing popularity of the Peony?

Then come right to headquarters.

The House of Kennicott was the first in the business to appreciate the true commercial value of the Peony. Company have been acknowledged Peony headquarters.

The House of Kennicott not only leads in quantity, but stands supreme in the field for quality as well.

The enormous demand for Peonies makes it a question of importance to you as to whether you will be well supplied or not. Let us know what your requirements will be and we will protect you at a moderate price.

Now is the time for the man who believes in preparedness to place his Peony orders.

obtained on Killarney Brilliant and Ophelia by Weiss & Meyer Co., Elmhurst.

Peter Reinberg's carnation plants all went into the field before the end of April. He is thought to be the leader of the large growers in finishing this big spring task. Most of the other growers are prosecuting the work with all speed now that May has arrived.

The first of the southern Illinois peonies are expected this week by Erne & Klingel, who say their growers advise the crop for this year will be large and fine.

One day last week John Michelsen, of the E. C. Amling Co., was the guest of French & Salm, at Union Grove, Wis., where there are 36,000 plants of Mrs. Russell in three big Lord & Burnham steel frame houses. The firm started in business March 1, 1915, and its progress has been watched with much interest by the trade, especially for the fact that they had the temerity to plant the entire establishment to one new, comparatively untried rose. After fourteen months on the benches, the plants are in much better shape than at any time before, big, bushy plants that give no indication of needing a rest. Mr. Michelsen says that the way the bottom growths are shooting up would give delight to any grower. Mr. Michelsen went to Richmond May 3 to have a look at the carnations in the Hill establishment.

The discussion of prices seldom gets anyone anywhere, but N. J. Wietor says he is decidedly opposed to boosting prices at Mothers' day or Memorial day; he adds, however, that if the wholesaler does not charge what the traffic will bear, the retailer does so just the same and pockets that much additional profit. So there you are. Mr. Wietor believes the low prices of other stock soon will extinguish the special Mothers' day demand for carnations, so that all flowers will sell on an even footing.

If you want an interesting dissertation on credits get O. W. Frese, of Poehlmann Bros. Co., to talk on the subject, for it is the one to which he has devoted the most study in recent years. Mr. Frese believes that the trend of the times will soon make it necessary for all florists to give closer attention to the details of the business office. He thinks the decline of certain once apparently prosperous retail and general florists can be traced directly to a neglect of the financial end.

The Easter demand was a fairly good test of the esteem in which the different varieties of roses are held. Ward,

AGENTS FOR TO-BAK-INE

Richmond and Ophelia have made good in every particular in the greenhouses of Hoerber Bros., at Des Plaines, and now they are satisfied beyond a peradventure that Hoosier Beauty ranks with the best as a profitable rose to grow. Though not as prolific as Killarney, it has fine color when well done and with them it has proved a most excellent shipper.

In preparation for the June wedding season, George Wienhoeber is running an attractive card in the street cars that pass his door. It shows a bride with a large bouquet that cost "$8 and up." Mr. Wienhoeber is a skillful publicity man and on the card the name is printed in a special color that makes it stand out and cling in the memory.

A transfer of that part of the Wittbold greenhouse property which fronts on Buckingham place, 125 feet east of Halsted street, was made a matter of record last week. It is preliminary to the construction by Louis and Fred Wittbold of the Buckingham Court apartments on 125x225 feet of frontage. The tract was first conveyed by the Wittbolds to the Chicago Title & Trust Co., and then the trust company conveyed to the Buckingham Court Apartments. It is understood the building, which will be of high grade character, will contain thirty-eight apartments and one store and will cost in excess of $100,000. The George Wittbold Co. will occupy the store for retail purposes.

A man who is believed, from papers in his pockets, to have been Andrew Matson, a florist of 1749 North Western avenue, killed himself April 30 in a restaurant in Milwaukee. The man ordered and ate a large steak and was unable to pay for it. When the waiter insisted on the money the man swallowed poison and died in a few minutes.

Invitations have been issued by the officers for the meeting of the Florists' Club at the Hotel Morrison, Thursday evening, May 4.

Speaking of substitutes for white carnations for Mothers' day, H. B. Kennicott, of the Kennicott Bros. Co., says he has received word from his growers that he may expect white peonies in time for the Mothers' day rush. This should help some, he thinks.

The demand for adiantum last week was, according to Eric Johnson, of the A. L. Randall Co., almost unprecedented. During one day, he says, that house alone sold 22,000 adiantum. Nor was Mexican ivy slow, as 15,000 were sold the same day.

Another man has been added to the force of the J. A. Budlong wholesale establishment. April 30, Roswell Schupp, son of Manager Philipp Schupp, was a boy, but May 1 he became 21 years of age. He celebrated the occasion by taking a position higher up in the business. His old place as shipping clerk is now held by Henry Zwettler, formerly with the Great Northern Express Co.

The florists were represented in the 5-man team contest of the Illinois state bowling tournament by the following veterans of the game: Fred Price, Allie Zech, John Huebner, Joe Einwick and Peter Olsem. The contest took place in Bensinger's West Randolph street alleys at 7:30 p. m., May 3.

Gardenias, according to John Kruchten, are moving wonderfully well. The greatest difficulty, he says, in the handling of this flower is to get the growers to pack them properly for shipping.

Another victim of the epidemic of severe colds is Charles MacCauley, of the Riverbank Greenhouses, Geneva, Ill. Though not seriously ill, Mr. MacCauley was sufficiently incapacitated to forego his weekly visit to the offices of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association.

Of course every seedsman sends out calendars and catalogues, but D. D. P. Roy entertains the idea that a catalogue or an ordinary calendar will, in the course of events, be misplaced or destroyed, so, starting out with May, he is mailing a monthly art calendar to his customers.

The vacancies in the palm department of the Poehlmann Bros. Co., at Morton Grove, will soon be filled, as the company is expecting a large shipment of palms from Europe, according to H. M. Oeser. Thomas Conlon, superintendent of the plant department, expects a shipment of stove plants. The field crew is planting out 250,000 carnations under the direction of Tony Gabel.

After every means known to medical science had been exhausted, Miss Thora Clemensen, 14-year-old daughter of C. Clemensen, 7801 South Shore avenue, died April 29 of lympho-sarcoma. The funeral services were held May 2. Interment was in Oakwood cemetery.

A charter has been issued by the secretary of state to Mangel & Co., 17 East Monroe street, to deal in seeds, bulbs, plants and flowers. The capital stock of the new corporation is $5,000.

The first peonies of the season were received by Kyle & Foerster April 27. Since then they have been receiving small but regular shipments.

From their first season with it, Wendland & Keimel have pinned their faith on Milady. The present condition of their stock seems to justify them in it. Also, they assert that its salability at the present moment refutes the old saying about the departure of the demand for red roses with the arrival of warm spring days.

Peter Reinberg represents the trade and the county on the committee of prominent men which seeks to present a fund to the Alexian Brothers hospital upon the occasion this month of the fiftieth anniversary of the advent of the order in Chicago.

A few days ago H. M. Berner, of the American Greenhouse Mfg. Co., took a little run to the southland. He was gone only a few days, but that was long enough to sign up an order for a $20,000 greenhouse range with W. C. Alexander, president of the W. C. Alexander Cut Flower & Plant Co., of Bluefield, W. Va. Mr. Alexander was formerly of Charleston, W. Va.

Though not obtrusively evident at the time, there was an extraordinary demand for doves during the Easter rush. Joseph Ziska & Sons, who had been congratulating themselves on their ample supply, were completely sold out when the Easter rush ended. They are, however, expecting a heavy shipment from the east.

A willingness to pay bills and meet obligations generally, without coercion, is believed by Archie Spencer to be one of the best possible evidences of a renaissance in business. He has seen numerous examples of this willingness during the last few weeks, and, to him, the conclusion is inevitable.

Visitors.

Among the week's visitors has been J. J. Beneke, one of the best known of the St. Louis retail florists. Mr. Beneke has been in business at the same address for forty years, but last week sold his lease on advantageous terms and for the time being is a gentleman of leisure.

C. W. Crum, a former Chicagoan, recently at Des Moines and later in charge of the flower department in the Chapman grocery house at Minneapolis, is here for a visit with his parent at 2830 West Madison street.

J. J. Karins, representing Henry A. Dreer, Riverton, N. J., is in town.

Two members of the trade from Mount Clemens, Mich., visited the Chicago market this week. They were Achille Van Beversluys and John A. Carey.

La Salle, Ill.—Robert Simmen has made arrangements to open a branch store at Morris.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The nine week days since Easter may be best described by dividing them into two unequal parts, the first comprising the six days of April, the second the three days of May. The first, or April part, was most satisfactory, barring Thursday. The second, or May part, was unsatisfactory. The cool weather, the April weddings—there still is a lingering preference for weddings in April, rather than risking the poet's dire forebodings regarding May marriages—and the regular week-end demand account for the favorable first part. The hot weather accounts for the unfavorable second part. Prices have receded since Easter, as they naturally would, save in cattleyas and in valley. Cattleyas have held their extraordinary altitude with remarkable persistency. Valley remains unchanged, with predictions of an advance. These predictions are based on the scarcity of pips and the fact that no valley grower is likely to risk much of his precious stock in May.

All the other flowers have fallen in price to a degree that makes them attractive to the quantity buyers. The special feature of the market is the fine quality of the northern-grown, outdoor daffodils, in several varieties. Unlike most Easters, the market is not overloaded with Easter lilies. While there is no special demand for them, there is no excessive supply. Asparagus plumosus and ferns are selling a little better than flowers. Both the supply and the demand for gardenias are declining.

A Chat with Mr. Dreer.

There is a tall young woman of attractive appearance in charge of that portion of the Dreer store at 714 Chestnut street that lies to the east of the entrance. Immediately in the rear of her domain is a spiral stairway that leads to the second floor. Those who are classed by this young lady as among the elect are permitted to ascend this stairway unquestioned.

The front portion of the floor above is divided between the accounting, or financial, department, in charge of Herbert G. Tull, and the vegetable seed and advertising departments, in charge of Charles H. McKubbin. There is one room, the choicest of all, into which even such great chiefs of the House of Dreer as Mr. Tull and Mr. McKubbin go not unbidden. This room, looking out on busy Chestnut street, is shut in from the rest of the floor by a partition, with translucent but not transparent glass. Here, in the quiet secluSion of his private office, sat the head of the House of Dreer.

William F. Dreer is a man of dignified appearance, which is in quiet harmony with his courteous manners. While Mr. Dreer has been through the hurly-burly of active business through the earlier days of his house's struggle to reach its present height, he now is seldom seen by those to whom the name of Dreer is a household word. His chiefs know him and respect him highly. To their loyalty is due in no small degree the success that has so steadily continued. Mr. Dreer believes this loyalty essential in any enterprise, large or small.

Mr. Dreer chatted pleasantly of business conditions, of California and the lights in the floral world known in the east, whom he had met out there, such as G. L. Then he talked of his friends in Philadelphia in a way that showed his interest in all that was going on, touching especially on the pleasure he derived from many of his business friendships.

The banquet committee of the Florists' Club, which was intrusted with the entertainment for the National Flower Show visitors, the banquet being held in Horticultural hall March 29, has returned fifty-nine per cent of the contributions to the guarantors. This was made possible by the large number of tickets sold, a number much larger than the committee expected.

Edwin J. Fancourt reports that the number of trade tickets sold for the National Flower Show exceeded 47,900, or a little less than $12,000 worth. Philadelphia certainly gave the show splendid support.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Business conditions are suffering a relapse. An increased supply of stock is coming in and, as the demand is light, prices have fallen off considerably. The street boys bought up large quantities of roses April 29 and, as the weather was good, they moved the best part of them. Carnations have not suffered so much as some other stock as regards price. Peas, owing to the warmer weather, are rather short in stem. Some few lilacs are coming in and they will be in full crop next week.

The advent of warm weather has started the bedding plant season and, following on the heels of a late Easter, many growers are unprepared. As the majority sold all blooming plants at Easter, the quantity of available stock is none too large.

Various Notes.

Visitors last week included J. J. Goudy, of Dreer's; Chas. E. Meehan, F. J. Michell, I. Rosnosky and Sidney Bayersdorfer, all of Philadelphia; Geo. Hermann and Geo. W. Strange, of New York. W. F. E.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

The warmer weather has increased the production of stock of all kinds, but sales continue good and fair prices prevail. There is a glut of Easter lilies and these are being sold at the buyer's own price. This also applies to calla lilies.

Orders from northern points are aiding in the movement of lilac, which is coming in profusion. There also is a good sale for apple, flowering almond, cherry and peach blossoms, which are being used in decorations. Their sale this year is larger than usual and as a result the greenhouse products are suffering to a marked extent. Yellow and white marguerites are plentiful and are in good demand.

The local market is relieved of the supply of daffodils, jonquils and tulips and violets also are off the market. Sweet peas are fine and sell well, holding their price of $2 per hundred. Orchids are scarce and although the price of 60 cents each is quoted, there were a number of instances last week where as high as $1.25 each was obtained and the retailer was glad to get them at that price. Gardenias are moving in quantities at from $2 to $3 per dozen.

American Beauty roses are overplentiful and the price has fallen to $2 and $4 per dozen. Carnations are plentiful but hold up well at from $2 to $4 per hundred, with $5 obtained for some few specials.

The Easter business and the month of April are reported to have been the best in the history of the trade.

Class 3.—"Preparation of Ground for, and General Treatment of Hardy Herbaceous Perennials," awarded to "Filius Terræ," or H. E. Dorner, of Northampton, Mass.
Class 4.—"A Year's Vegetable Supply," awarded to "Ian," or John S. Doig, of Southborough, Mass.

In Class 2, "The Proper Grouping and Culture of Trees, Shrubs, Perennials and Annual Bedding Plants in the Ornamentation of Private Grounds," no award was made by the judges, as the papers submitted were not of sufficient merit to warrant an award.

The essay contest for President Craig's prizes of $25, $15 and $10, for the best three papers on any horticultural subject submitted by assistant gardeners, now is under way. The contest will close November 1, and the judges' decision will be rendered at the next convention of the association, which will be held in December. The papers are limited to 2,500 words. They must be signed with a nom de plume and forwarded to William H. Waite, chairman of the committee on essays and horticultural instruction, Box 290, Madison, N. J. The contestant also must send his full name and address enclosed in an envelope, with his nom de plume written plainly on the outside of the envelope, to the secretary, M. C. Ebel, Madison, N. J.

As considerable time has been allotted to prepare the essays, it is hoped that the number of contestants will be many.

Fort Morgan, Colo.—That all things come to him who waits, now is a truism to L. J. Reid, who has been conducting the Fort Morgan Floral Co. Mr. Reid took a competitive government examination some time ago and has been patiently waiting for the examiners to tell him that he passed. Finally the good news arrived and Mr. Reid has become a worker in the plant industry bureau of the Department of Agriculture at Washington, D. C. Mrs. W. Reid will manage the florists' business.

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

The Easter trade broke all records. "Sold out!" was the cry everywhere. It would not be well to print what the florists thought of the weather. It rained and froze, and we had sleet galore, but people nevertheless insisted on having their Easter flowers and plants. Where all the stock came from and where it went surprised all. Deliveries were hard to make because of the inclement weather. But, after all, it was a banner Easter.

Various Notes.

After using two large delivery cars all day April 22, William Desmond, of Donaldson's, had to press into service every car available for Sunday morning deliveries. It was the best Easter ever experienced.

The Minneapolis Floral Co. sold everything it had in bloom. Prices were good and local deliveries were not expensive. Many orders were delivered without wrapping, which is always an expensive item.

Mr. Carlson had a fine sale of potted and cut stock. His roses were extra fine.

The Nicollet avenue store of Miss H. B. Whitted looked as if it had been bombarded Sunday morning. Broken flower pots, wrapping paper and a few lengths of ribbon were the residue of a $10,000 sale. Miss Whitted reports the best Easter trade in years. More than 1,000 corsage bouquets were sold.

Thos. Lynes had a fine time. Sunday morning found him frantically calling up one grower after another in an attempt to buy lilies, but he could not get all he wanted. He had several church decorations and a large number of orders for corsage bouquets.

Mr. Mitchell, proprietor of the Lake Street Florist Shop, sold everything. He says it was the best Easter ever.

The Lakewood Cemetery Association had some of the finest lilies in the city.

About 10,000 sweet peas were cut. These were of the Christmas Pink type and have been flowering since November.

The New York Florists had a fine display of lilies and roses. All stock was sold. A great improvement in the Easter trade was reported.

Mr. Pangolas, of the Minneapolis Fruit Store, cleaned out all the stock he had. He reports quite a trade in corsage bouquets of sweet peas.

The Sunshine Florists had an excellent sale of all items. They featured baskets with individual plants.

Oscar E. Amundson, as usual, had a good display of azaleas and other plants and reports a splendid sale. Wm. Crum, formerly with Chapman, now is with Mr. Amundson.

Max Kaiser had a well deserved sale.

Four new delivery cars were placed on the road for Easter by local florists.

R. Latham, of Tenth street, south, had a fine display of lilies, azaleas, ferns, hydrangeas and rhododendrons, which had a quick sale.

William F. Holmes had a most successful Easter trade. His store was filled with blooming plants, cut flowers and Easter novelties. Mr. Holmes' store always has splendid window displays and it is here that the newest of novelties and latest creations are seen.

The New York Florists shared in the praise of the Minneapolis people for the magnificent displays and artistically arranged stores. F. E. B.

Business averaged good last week and most of the stores were busy. seems that there is plenty of money about, and that the conditions are not so bad as sometimes stated. The stores are well supplied with potted plants, including a large number of rambler roses, rhododendrons, azaleas and hydrangeas. There has been more than the usual display of marguerites in crocks of all sizes, which have moved well. They were used extensively for basket work and were most effective. The cut flower market was well supplied with all kinds of stock last week. Roses are abundant and have moved freely. They are resuming their usual prices. Carnations are plentiful and of good quality. They promise to be quite plentiful for Mothers' day. Violets are about over. Sweet peas are quite numerous and receive a large sale. Orchids sell fairly well. Gardenias move nicely. Valley is in good condition and sells well. Daffodils and jonquils are still holding up and are good sellers. Calendulas, myosotis, yellow and white daisies and cut hyacinths are used extensively for basket work. The supply of greens meets all demands. Bedding stock is ready and is moving, but somewhat slowly.

Various Notes.

Clarke Vick recently made a trip to Cleveland and brought back a new truck by road. The return trip was enjoyable and quite uneventful. The truck was purchased by George B. Hart, wholesale florist.

by Salter Bros. last week. Tables to seat 100 were placed in the shape of the letter U, with a raised staging at the top of the letter. The stage was tastefully decorated with a fountain, ferns and greenery. The tables were decorated with roses and jonquils. Large rhododendrons were grouped around the large hall.

The Kaelber Flower Store had a pretty window decoration last week, consisting of a large bank of pink rhododendrons and marguerites. Pretty French flower bowls enhanced the display.

Miss Margaret Crooke has made a fair cutting of America gladioli, which was received at the wholesale house Saturday. Although unusually early, they were of good quality and sold well.

Jacob Thomann & Sons report an exceedingly large business at Easter. They were busy last week and are receiving many orders for outdoor plants, of which they have a large stock.

H. B. Stringer, of G. B. Hart's, was home last week suffering with a bad cold that he contracted during the Easter rush.

The window display of the Rochester Floral Co. April 28 and 29 was of purple and yellow flowers. Mats of the same color completed the color scheme. Cut glass vases filled with jonquils were shown in the front.

C. J. Ford, of A. Herrmann, New York, was in town last week showing an extensive line of novelties.

H. E. Wilson is showing a new line of jardinieres and vases in art ware and also a pretty collection of fancy cut glass vases and baskets. Mr. Wilson did a record Easter business and carried a fine collection of plants.

E. R. Fry is doing a good business at both of his stores. His Easter trade was extremely heavy. H. J. H.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Business at the wholesale markets last week was light. On account of the Sunday closing, the demand for stock increased Saturday. Retailers report trade slow since Easter. The large supply of stock coming in daily is only half consumed. Low prices prevailed all week. Spanish irises, greenhouse-grown gladioli, valley and orchids had a good demand and therefore were not in oversupply. All varieties of roses are in oversupply, especially pink and white. The same may be said of carnations. These were offered at $4 per thousand April 28, and at that hardly moved. Sweet peas are plentiful, too much so. Fine double lilac is selling well. Daffodils are plentiful and violets are over for this season. Lilies and callas have crowded the wholesalers' tables all week. Fancy ferns sell at $3 per thousand. Asparagus is in good demand, as well as smilax.

Various Notes.

Reports regarding Easter business still are coming to hand and they are such that I repeat that St. Louis florists experienced one of the best Easter trades this year.

The executive committee of the spring flower show met April 24 at the office of the Bourdet Floral Co. The work of the various committees for this show was commended.

Miss J. Mottell, head of the office force of the Nicotine Mfg. Co., 117 North Main street, reports a number of large shipping orders last week. One came from New Zealand, on which was marked: "Saw your advertisement in The Review." J. S. Carter, head of the company, was a visitor in Chicago recently.

The leading retailers in the west end report a number of decorations booked for weddings and social functions to take place this month.

Oscar Kuehn, of the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co., spent Easter at the Missouri Botanical Garden and took several fine photographs of the Shakespearean garden, which was opened to the public April 23.

Charles and Henry Meyer, of Webster Groves, had a grand cut of sweet peas that were classed with the fancies for the Easter trade. They will have a large cut for Memorial day.

Planting-out time is at hand. Wm. Schray & Sons, Charles Beyer, F. Fillmore, J. M. Walther and John Held are waiting for the warm weather so that they may start working on the many orders booked.

Our local rose growers, Messrs. Pilcher, Werner, Cerny and Steidle, had a good cut of extra fine quality Russell, Ophelia and Killarney roses for Easter. The local trade consumed the greater part of this cut.

A visit to the office and storerooms of Lechner Bros., in the Caxton building, was interesting. I found them busy getting out large orders of bulbs for the local and outside florists. Martin

Lechner says they are much pleased with this season's business.

The H. J. Weber & Sons Nursery Co. consigned extra fancy double white and purple lilacs and Spanish irises to the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co., which were readily disposed of to the local trade at good prices.

Cut lilies were in heavy supply at the store of H. G. Berning last week. Roses and carnations, too, were in abundance, but the demand since Easter had been light in all kinds of cut flowers.

The retailers have taken up Mothers' day with more enthusiasm this year and all have display cards in the show windows. They look forward to a big business May 14.

Dr. George T. Moore, director of the Missouri Botanical Garden, who served on the board of jurors at the National Flower Show and at the New York spring show, returned recently, and reports that both shows were wonderful.

Paddy Patton, who has been under the doctor's care, was asked why he was skipping around so lively. He said the doctor told him to take three hours' running exercise and then skip an hour. At the time he was skipping.

Edwin Denker, of St. Charles, Mo., visited Davenport, Ia., recently to consult a specialist there in regard to his spinal trouble, which was resulting in the loss of the use of his left arm. He visited the wholesale market April 28 and reported much improvement in his arm.

George H. Pring, orchid specialist at the Missouri Botanical Garden, delivered an address on "The Mimicry of Orchids" before the Mothers' Circle at the Clifton Heights school April 15.

W. C. Smith, who bought the old Valentine place of six acres at Kirkwood, Mo., some time ago, will start a force of men planting out fruit trees this week.

J. J. Beneke left April 30 for a few days' visit to Chicago.

Robert Newcomb, of Chicago, called on the county growers last week.

Charles Young, president of the Retail Florists' Association, says the association will hold an important meeting May 15, at the Mission Inn Garden. The great importance of this meeting should bring out a good attendance.

The Market.

For several days after Easter the cut flower business was extremely dull, but beginning April 28 an improvement was noted. We have had an abnormal number of dark, sunless and rainy or snowy days right through the month. May opens under more pleasant auspices and we now hope to get some settled spring weather. Roses, with clearer skies, are coming in more freely and prices have softened somewhat, and there is more trouble in making clearances. Red varieties, like Hadley, Francis Scott Key and Hoosier Beauty, still are leaders in favor. Ophelia, Russell and yellows come next in popularity, with the several Killarneys bringing up the rear. American Beauties are in good supply and move well.

Carnations are making good prices, $1.50 to $4 being the prevailing figures, with Pink Sensation somewhat higher. There are small numbers of double violets, but the season for them is practically over. Sweet peas are in good demand and are the most popular flowers on the market. Easter lilies and callas are hard to sell. Some growers failed to flower some of their lilies for Easter and these now flood the market. Pansies, primroses and marguerites are all abundant. Yellow marguerites are plentiful and lower priced.

Mignonette is druggy; so are snapdragons. Spanish iris is good and the best colors sell satisfactorily. Gladioli as yet are not abundant and bring an average of $8 per hundred. Peach Blossom and Blushing Bride are the two leading varieties. Of narcissi and tulips the supply still is an ample one. Cattleya Mossiæ now is coming in more freely. Prices as high as $15 to $18 per dozen, at wholesale, were recorded for Easter. Gardenias are abundant and cheaper, but lily of the valley remains in short supply. Asparagus, both Sprengeri and plumosus, has continued to sell well.

Various Notes.

Those who were unable to visit the Philadelphia and New York shows should, if possible, come and see the May show in Horticultural hall, Boston, May 10 to 14. There are nearly $5,000 in premiums offered and the management fears that it will be difficult to find accommodation for all the exhibits promised. The time selected for the show is a busy one for gardeners and florists, but I hope a large number will find time to visit the exhibition.

John T. Gale, of Tewksbury, has finished picking violets, but his yellow marguerites are in heavy crop. These flowers are grown most successfully by Mr. Gale.

The cerise pink seedling carnation, No. 360, grown by the late Albert Roper, has attained great popularity in the local market here and sells on sight. It is the best seedling of this color yet introduced. Alice Coombs, Grace and Commonwealth are all arriving in fine shape.

Boston and vicinity were treated to one more snow storm April 28. The local weather bureau gave the fall as seven and two-fifths inches, but in the suburbs it was much heavier and evergreens and deciduous shrubs were weighted down badly. The snow, when melted, gave 1.13 inches of water. The total Boston snowfall to date now stands at eighty-five and one-half inches.

Elliott Fillson, salesman for Peirce Bros. at the Boston Flower Exchange, has been quite ill with tonsillitis. In his absence E. Allan Peirce officiated as salesman, a somewhat new calling for him and one which he found difficult for a few days. Peirce Bros. are strong now on Ophelia and d'Arenberg roses. They also have a nice cut of Hadley, Killarney, White Killarney and Sunburst.

H. W. Vose, of Hyde Park, is cutting a fine lot of Blushing Bride and Peach Blossom gladioli. He still has a good cut of tulips and narcissi, of which he grows heavily.

George W. Foster, of Wamesit, is shipping in a superior grade of Spencer peas to George Marshall. His carnations are doing remarkably well, especially Rosette, Pink Delight, White Wonder and Champion.

There is a wonderful increase in rock gardening in this section at present. The old idea that such gardens were impracticable here has been well exploded. Interesting plants now are flowering in the rockeries, and all who attend the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club May 16 and hear

Thomas Coles, an expert, discuss rock gardening, will have a rare treat. Club members will make a display of rock plants on this occasion.

There is no finer and more popular pink snapdragon seen in our markets now than Paul E. Richwagen's Virginia. The color seems to be just what the public wants.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hutcheon, of Stoughton, visited the recent shows in Philadelphia and New York as well as Washington and Baltimore. Mr. Hutcheon is shipping in fine Blushing Bride gladioli and Spencer sweet peas.

The Boston Rose Co. had on exhibition April 29 a bunch of a new hybrid tea seedling rose from the Montgomery Co. The outer petals were light, the inner ones deep pink. The color is quite distinct. In substance of flowers and foliage this novelty is all that could be desired.

The labor problem in and around Boston is acute this season. Both commercial and private establishments are finding great trouble in securing men, owing to more attraction of pay offered by the railroads, munition factories, etc., and increased pay has been found necessary to secure even ordinary laborers.

Mothers' day seems likely to be more pushed here than ever this year and growers of carnations are anticipating record sales of white varieties. If more of the retailers would only give prominence to the occasion in their stores, by letters or through advertising in the daily press, sales could be greatly increased. It would pay wholesalers, retailers and growers to combine and do some coöperative advertising for this day. W. N. C.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, John M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Thirty-fourth annual convention, Chicago, June 20 to 22, 1916.

THERE are rumors that the government will discontinue its experiments in bulb growing at Bellingham, Wash.

THE Hoxsie Nurseries, Hoxsie, R. I., are making a success of narcissus bulbs for the trade, specializing on Emperor and Golden Spur. The work has been going on for four years, following ten years' experience in Virginia. Tulips also are being grown in increasing quantity. The Rhode Island Golden Spurs, it is claimed, will force three weeks earlier than imported stock.

IT usually is considered that the mail-order seed season closes with April, but the first week in May finds quite a little still doing this year. The U. S. Department of Agriculture says the season is ten days late on the average this year and planting operations correspondingly behind. It appears that the mail-order seed business in April compares more favorably with last year than was the case with March, but that April has not done much to make good the deficit of the first part of the season. Counter trade still is active, rather ahead of the average first week in May.

AN IMPORTANT DISTINCTION.

A mere statement in a letter that the writer holds certain goods at a certain price must be interpreted as an invitation to negotiate with him on that basis, and not as an offer to sell, which may be turned into a binding contract by the person to whom the letter is written by signifying his willingness to buy at that price. So holds the Supreme court of Nebraska in the case of the Nebraska Seed Co. versus Harsh (152 Northwestern Reporter 310).

The company received a letter from the defendant stating that he had about 1,800 bushels of millet seed, of which he was mailing a sample. After stating that the seed was grown on sod, had been recleaned and was good seed, the letter closes: "I want $2.25 per hundredweight for this seed, f. o. b. Lowell." The company immediately wired and wrote that the "offer" was accepted. When the defendant refused to make delivery, the company sued him for breach of contract and won a judgment, but, on the defendant's appeal to the Supreme court, the judgment was reversed, the higher court declaring:

"In our opinion the letter of the defendant cannot be fairly construed as an offer to sell the seed. After describing the seed, the writer says, 'I want $2.25 per hundredweight for this seed, f. o. b. Lowell.' He does not say, 'I offer to sell to you.' The language is general, and such as may be used in an advertisement, or in a circular addressed to those engaged in the seed business, and is not an offer by which he may be bound, if accepted, by any or all of the persons addressed. The letter, as a whole, shows that it was not intended as a final proposition, but as a request for bids. It did not fix a time for delivery, and this seems to have been regarded as one of the essentials by the company, for in its telegram it requests the defendant to 'wire how soon can load.' The letter of acceptance was not in the terms of the offer. The defendant stated that he had 1,800 bushels or thereabouts. He did not fix a definite and certain quantity. It might be 1,800 bushels; it might be more; it might be less; but the company undertook to make the acceptance for 1,800 bushels—no more, no less. The defendant might not have this quantity, and therefore be unable to deliver; he might have a greater quantity, and after filling the order have a quantity of seed on hand for which he might not find a market. We may assume that when he wrote the letter he did not contemplate the sale of more seed than he had, and that he fixed the price on the whole lot whether it was more or less than 1,800 bushels. We do not think the correspondence made a complete contract. To so hold where a party sends out letters to a number of dealers would subject him to suit by each one receiving a letter, or invitation to bid, even though his supply of seed were exhausted."

No proof seems to have been made in this case whether the defendant wrote similar letters to other seedsmen. It would seem that, if he did not, the circumstance might have been fairly considered on the question whether he actually intended to offer the seed for sale or to merely invite an offer from the company, except for the fact that, because he did not offer a definite quantity, there was no basis for a mutual understanding as to the quantity to be delivered—an essential feature of every contract to sell goods. S.

FIELD TO BUILD HOME.

The following appeared April 26 in a Des Moines paper under a Shenandoah date line:

The old site of the old Mormon village of Manti, gone back to the virginal woods it was before the coming of the Mormons, has been purchased by Henry Field, president of the Henry Field Seed House, who will build a summer home there. Mr. Field paid $150 an acre for the five-acre tract of wooded land. It will become known now as Hickory hill.

Only a graveyard and one old house mark the spot of the one-time Mormon village. Manti was settled about 1847 and flourished for several years. A postoffice was established there and many stage coaches visited the town.

The coming of the railroad killed the town. The price of land about Manti, then $10 an acre, caused settlers to buy the lowland grounds where Shenandoah now stands for $5 an acre. The stores and other buildings at Manti were removed bodily to Shenandoah and the old Mormon village ceased to exist.

Many of the once well known figures of the Mormon church in Iowa are buried at Manti. One of these is Alpheus Cutler, a leader in the church, who predicted that the streets of the town would run blood to the depth of a horse's bridle. The prediction seemed in a fair way to be verified just before the start of the Civil war and during that conflict, as Manti was often visited by bushwhacking bands.

Mr. Field plans to leave the rare beauty of the spot untouched save for the erection of his summer home. He is wealthy and a lover of outdoor life.

MOTT-LY GLEANINGS.

"The seedsmen of Canada are passing through the most strenuous period of their history," said Manager Annandale, of the Steele-Briggs Seed Co., of Toronto, Ont. "Then add to this the freight embargo and demands from our branches at Hamilton and Winnipeg; in fact, we do not know where we shall eventually land, but we are doing our best to make the best of the situation. Fortunately, we have the sympathy of our patrons."

The J. A. Simmers Seed Co., Toronto, has several employees at the front, headed by J. A. Simmers, Jr. The overseas contingents are placing a heavy burden on those at home, who are doing nobly and praying for an early peace. Herman Simmers commented pleasantly on the way the concern had been helped with stock by some American houses.

Now that the William Rennie Co. is in its new store, nearly all the seedsmen are located in the same block, which makes it more convenient for the customer and centralizes the business.

J. A. Bruce & Co., of Hamilton, Ont., recalled the story of their illustrious namesake, who was inspired by watching the repeated efforts of a spider to spin its web. Success comes to those who similarly persevere.

Robert Thistle, of Stratford, Ont., has a large order for seed potatoes, which will be filled as soon as the weather permits. Carloads that should have been distributed are held up for various reasons.

James Hunter, of the Darch & Hunter Seed Co., London, Ont., believes this year will see a complete revolution in many ways and means. The inventive genius will be more in evidence and the labor problem solved in a great degree. Different methods in the uses and kinds of insecticides will be adopted with benefit to all.

The A. J. Morgan Seed Store, of London, failed to understand why we should be so unkind as to advance the price of sulphur, among other items. He always was given to understand that was on the free list. W. M.

SNAPS for FALL

The month of May is the proper time to sow seed of snapdragons for fall blooming. Plants started now from seed will be ready to bench in July. We strongly advise growing your own seedlings, as plants do not ship well in hot weather. We list the good ones as follows:

Seed of our famous Silver Pink (the 5-to-1 variety), at $1.00 per pkt., 3 for $2.50, 7 for $5.00.

Seed of Melrose, Garnet, Yellow, Buxton, Phelps' White and fancy mixed, at 35c per pkt., 3 for $1.00.

All orders cash. Free cultural directions. No plants to offer.

Stock is arriving for our new patented square dirt bands and pots. As soon as we can get our machinery by the freight embargoes we will be ready with samples. In the meantime we can furnish any size square plain band.

LILY BULBS THAT ARE GOOD

Lily bulbs are not good things to experiment with. You cannot tell by looking at the bulbs whether they are the kind you can depend upon, or whether they were dug from a diseased field. We know, however, just where our bulbs come from, and who grew them, and you may depend upon the bulbs you buy from us as being the best the price will buy. We sell all varieties, but for general use we recommend our Giganteum, selling as follows:

Size 6 x 8 inch.....$4.00 per 100;
$14.00 per case of 400; or
35.00 per 1000.

Size 7 x 9 inch.....$6.00 per 100;
$15.00 per case of 300; or
50.00 per 1000.

Size 9 x 10 inch ....$10.00 per 100;
$19.00 per case of 200; or
95.00 per 1000.

The above are for fall delivery, sound arrival guaranteed. And we deliver from fifteen different cities at the same price.

Preparing the Field for Planting.

In the preparation of the soil the best results can be obtained if the grower will have the soil analyzed. It will pay to have both a chemical and mechanical analysis. This will not only determine the amount of plant food contained in the soil, but also, what is more essential from the grower's point of view, the amount of plant food available for the crop. When this has been determined, the grower knows what will be required to carry the crop through.

The analysis may show that he has a soil with an excess of humus. He will then naturally use a base manure that contains a heavy percentage of phosphate and will eliminate the ammonia from it, thus neutralizing the tendency to rank and excessive growth in the early stages of the plant. The phosphate will produce hard, short, pointed plants. Well decayed stable manure or cow manure is the best to work into the soil, using the stable manure where the soil is heavy, to open and lighten it, and the cow manure where the soil is light, to give it weight and to supply moisture. It is impossible to dictate to the grower and say his land requires ten, twenty or forty tons of manure to the acre. That depends on the tilth and fertility of the soil, and always remember that we are growing fruiting plants and not foliage plants.

Soil Cultivation.

Remember that the soil is a living organism, and that it should be treated in such a manner that air, light and water will have free access to it. The finer the tilth of the soil, the better it can be cultivated. Deep cultivation, to break up the subsoil, providing you do not bring too much of the subsoil to the surface at once, is a fine thing for the soil. It breaks up capillary attraction and makes the soil drier and warmer in the spring, and also makes it more retentive of moisture in the summer.

After discovering the composition of the soil, whether it is heavy, light, dry or wet, whether it is subject to subirrigation, etc., you can start to manure it in a practical manner. In the first place, the soil may be short of lime. Now, lime is the basis of all fertility. It enables the plant to get the full benefit of the food contained in the soil. It is a first-class servant, but a bad master. Never on any account overlime your soil and kill its fertility.

The Use of Lime.

Lime is absolutely necessary to the good cultivation of the soil. To test the soil for lime, place a small sample of soil, made up from a mixture of about twenty samples taken from various parts of the land, in a pint glass and then pour on to it a 3-ounce glass of muriatic acid. If this effervesces and bubbles freely, the soil, as a rule, contains sufficient lime. If, on the other hand, it hardly bubbles at all, lime is necessary. Apply a dressing of fresh air-slaked lime, carbonate of lime, at the rate of 1,000 pounds to the acre. A medium dressing of fine lime is far better than a heavy dressing of rough lime, thrown on anyhow. Lime fixes the nitrates in the soil and breaks up the potash and phosphates, making them available for plant food. Half the battle in cultivation is won if you have clean, healthy soil to work upon. Liming, deep and thorough cultivation

An entirely new and distinct strain of Pansies. The main advantage of these new Pansies over all hitherto existing Pansies is the extreme earliness of flowering and their unusual hardiness. and surface working of the soil all lead to this condition of things.

Training the Plants.

In the truck garden the training of the plants is a problem of cents and dollars, and we want the dollars. Earliness is a great point in marketing and in obtaining good prices; so we must see whether there is some method by which we can bring a good proportion of our crop of fruit in early. From a large, practical experience in several climates, I am convinced there is such a method.

Estimate how many tomatoes you can dispose of at top prices. Get the best early variety that is suitable to your district and soil. Plant them out two feet apart, row to row, and one foot apart in the row. Stake the plants with strong bamboo canes, or use a top and bottom wire fixed on strong stakes, training them up strings fastened to the wires. Stop the tomatoes above the third bunch of bloom, leaving one leaf above the bloom to draw up the fruit. Allow no side shoots to grow; then all the energy of the plants will go into the development of these three bunches of fruit, and give you an extra early, paying crop of tomatoes. A simple matter of addition will convince the grower that, with reasonable care, he will come out ahead of the game.

Newburgh, N. Y.—The Palm Sunday flower show in the greenhouses of the Schaefer Co. was attended by more than 3,000 persons, and of these many were out-of-town visitors.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

SANTA BARBARA, CAL.

The Market.

Easter trade was good here, and a run of funeral work just afterward made a satisfactory clean-up of what stock remained. Lilies were plentiful, but the demand was good and cleaned them up well. As the season advances, the northern roses are better than those shipped in from southern points; consequently, much of the business is going that way. Spanish irises and sweet peas have been particularly good.

Various Notes.

Gleave's Flower Shop reports a fine clean-up for Easter. At the time of my call, a few days after Easter, all were busy with good funeral work. Some grand Ophelia and Hadley roses were shown.

A. Beverley, of Mission Nursery, reports the best season's business he has ever had. He has been cutting magnificent sweet peas.

The new plantings at the Cowles estate are coming out excellently and the condition of this beautiful place is improving steadily. William Donald, the clever landscape gardener here, has a fine cottage close to the home nursery, where he and his niece, Miss Burdette, dispense hospitality in a manner most satisfactory to visitors.

Stock is in excellent condition at the city nurseries.

Fine Easter lilies were grown at the greenhouses in connection with Mrs. Whipple's store and these were sold out clean.

H. R. Richards.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

"A disappointing Easter," was the general verdict of the retailers, though there were some exceptions. The quantity of pot lilies on the market was so far in excess of the demand that everyone was tired of seeing them around, and at least one of our oriental friends hit upon the happy idea of giving away a cut lily stem with every pot sold—a novel way of reducing stock. As a matter of fact, there was never a better illustration of the well known saying that "a late Easter is a poor one." Spiræas sold out well, the general idea being that they looked a little different from Easter lilies and were therefore favorites. Roses in pots met with a poor sale and cut roses were not of first-rate quality, or worth the money asked. There were practically no azaleas. Rhododendrons were also about over. A few cyclamens sold and also a few—extremely few—pots of valley. Carnations were, possibly, in better demand than any other flowers. Ferns sold well and a few early dahlias were soon snapped up. Funeral work helped out in the few days following Easter, but, taken as a whole, the week was far from good.

Various Notes.

Wolfskills' & Morris Goldenson bought heavily in plants and apparently made a fair clean-up.

We are much pleased with the results of our plant advertisements in The Review; orders have come in freely and from a wide range of territory.

Germain Seed & Plant Co.

Los Angeles, Feb. 25, 1916. By M. L. Germain, Pres.

Early in the week mail and telegraph orders were heavy at the new store of the Redondo Floral Co., on West Seventh street. Notwithstanding the large stock on hand, there was little left. Professors Borden and Knopf were both on the job, and dispensing the genial smiles for which both are famous. Large pans of lilies and good cut stock met with the best demand.

C. E. Morton and Mrs. Morton have returned from Arizona.

A call on George Eischen, at his new store at Ocean Park, showed everything in excellent shape and he is well pleased with business generally and for Easter. Mr. Eischen was one of the judges at the Santa Monica show, W. W. Felgate and J. McGilvray being the others. A highly successful show was reported.

At Sierra Madre the spring flower show opened April 27, with fine displays and a fair attendance. The principal trade groups were from the Ward nursery, at Sierra Madre, from Ed. Rust, of Pasadena, and from the Germain Seed & Plant Co., of Los Angeles. H. W. Turner, H. R. Richards, J. McGilvray and Jacob Dieterich were appointed judges, but, as Mr. Dieterich was detained on other business, W. W. Felgate officiated in his place.

The sweet peas grown for seed by the Germain Seed & Plant Co., at the Whittier road, are a magnificent sight just now, about twenty acres being planted with the finest Spencers and other kinds. The clear-cut blocks of color look fine from the road and attract a great deal of attention from passing autoists.

Fred Sperry, of the L. A. Floral Co., made a flying trip to Santa Barbara last week.

H. R. Richards.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Judging from reports, Easter business caused no disappointments in the local trade. There was an abundance of stock of good quality, weather conditions were favorable and stocks cleaned up closely all around at normal prices. Things seemed a little slow last week, but the after-holiday condition was not so pronounced as on former occasions. The warm days have brought in a flood of stock, which has been rather hard to make use of. The market is well supplied with late Easter lilies and good stock is selling at low prices. Many potted rambler roses have been brought in since Easter, as well as a lot of fine French hydrangeas and spiræas. Carnations are plentiful and cheap; the same is true of sweet peas, it being difficult even to move all of the first-class stock. There is an oversupply of roses, the cut of baby roses being particularly heavy. The latter are popular, but the quantities coming in exceed the demand. The crop of Spanish irises is at its height and sells well. A few tulips still are appearing and there is a good supply of peonies. Some cut pansies are offered and the supply is readily absorbed. The market is well supplied with gypsophilas, statice, straw daisies and cornflowers, and many marguerites and Shasta daisies are being used. There are many snapdragons, but only a few growers have really fine stock. Some Spanish broom is being cut and good scabiosas and stocks are offered. A few lots of America gladioli have come in and a limited quantity of gaillardias and coreopsis is appearing. Cattleyas are plentiful, including some fine specimens of C. Mossiæ plants in full bloom. The large quantity of stock makes it a buyers' market.

C. Kooyman has issued a new bulb catalogue and is taking many orders.

Mrs. R. E. Darbee, the Hyde street florist, reports a splendid Easter business, the demand for plants having been particularly good. She says the shipping business is holding up well since the holiday. She is sending out many Easter lilies, irises and Cecile Brunner roses. A feature of her shipping business is the opening of a large number of new accounts during the last three or four weeks with florists in Idaho, Montana and Nevada, who, heretofore, evidently have been depending upon other markets for their supplies.

At his place in San Jose, Charles Navlet, who operates the plant and seed stand in the Emporium department store, has about 10,000 roses growing in cans that will be in bloom for Decoration day. Being in cans instead of pots, it will not be necessary for purchasers to disturb the roots when setting them out in cemeteries or gardens, as the cans will soon rot in the ground. Some of these plants are being offered at the store and they sell readily.

Gardner A. Daley, landscape engineer for the MacRorie-McLaren Co., is going to Costa Rica on an extended pleasure trip. During his six months' absence he will make a study of the flora of that country. He will stop at his home in Long Beach, Cal., on his way down.

N. A. Baldocchi, of Podesta & Baldocchi, says they had an excellent Easter business, everything cleaning up nicely.

In their temporary quarters on Sutter street, the Misses Hannon did a big Easter business. They are quite comfortably settled in the new place and find that their Polk street customers seek the new location.

Pelicano, Rossi & Co. got in quantities of rambler roses for Easter and they sold out entirely. In one window they showed some fine Hiawatha plants and in the other equally fine Tausendschon, while the store was banked with these and other varieties of ramblers. Last week they had a special display of Cattleya Mossiæ plants from Carbone's place at Berkeley.

Besides largely supplying the trade in the San Francisco bay district with rambler roses for Easter, E. James, of Oakland, shipped about a carload of them to florists in Los Angeles.

H. Plath says he never before sold so many primulas as he did this Easter, and then he could not fill all his orders. He also disposed of many rambler roses, spiræas, lilies and other seasonable stock. In addition he made up a lot of baskets of potted primulas, azaleas and small ferns, which proved popular with the downtown shops.

Ferrari Bros. are building six greenhouses at their place on University avenue. They intend to branch out into new lines.

Henry Maier, partner of Jennie Crocker Whitman in the Burlingame Nursery Co. and superintendent of her estate at Hillsborough, underwent an operation for appendicitis at the Red Cross hospital, San Mateo, a fortnight ago. His condition is reported satisfactory. The Whitman family were due from the east and Mr. Maier was preparing the Hillsborough place for their home-coming when he was stricken with illness.

At a recent meeting of the Alameda County Floral Society held in the Oakland Museum, Prof. J. M. Gregg delivered a lecture on "Dahlia Culture."

Walter Armacost & Co., florists of Sawtelle, Cal., have sold their branch at Ocean Park.

Louis and Gerda Nelson, of Oakland, Cal., have filed a certificate of trade style as the Key Route Heights Nursery Co.

An express company official was sent to San Mateo a fortnight ago to look into the matter of rates on cut flowers from the peninsula district to San Francisco. Menlo Park, which is an important smilax center, enjoys a special rate on cut flowers, and efforts are being made to have the privilege extended to other parts of San Mateo county. There are 450 acres in the north end of the county devoted to the cultivation of violets alone, while quantities of roses, chrysanthemums, dahlias, carnations and many other flowers are grown in the county.

The Art Floral Co. had several large jobs which kept the force working until 2 o'clock two or three mornings during Easter week. Notable among them were the decorations at the Holy Cross and St. Ignatius churches.

A flower show was given this week in the Hotel Oakland under the auspices of the Alameda County Floral Society. It was managed by Mrs. A. J. Scannavino, who had charge of several flower exhibitions at the exposition. She was assisted by John Vallence, George C. Meeker and others.

Charles Willis Ward, of Eureka, Cal., was in San Francisco recently, and it is rumored that he contemplates buying a large tract of land near Oakland, with the intention of establishing a distributing plant for his nurseries.

The Golden Floral Co. has been granted permission by the state corporation commission to issue 485 shares at par, $50 per share, net to the company, which was organized among the Japanese florists about Los Angeles.

It is probable that Louis Derocjer, of Hollywood, Cal., will establish one of his big out-of-season garden truck plants at El Centro. He has 100,000 square feet of cucumbers at Hollywood.

The Market.

Good weather, with money a little easier, combined to make Easter this year a record-breaker for the Portland florists. There was not enough stock to meet the demand. Potted lilies and carnations were sold out early and then all sorts of potted plants—hydrangeas, rhododendrons, azaleas, spiræas, forget-me-nots, pelargoniums and even geraniums, with potted roses and decorated baskets—were cleaned up. One or two lots of lilies did not come in on time, but most of the growers brought their stocks into excellent condition. Carnations brought 75 cents to $1 per dozen; lilies 25 cents per bud, with most of the small buds counted. Roses and other cut stock brought better prices than they did a year ago. The general result is encouraging, as it is an indication that financial conditions have improved. Several stores opened branches to facilitate deliveries and many report that the rush was handled with less trouble than usual.

Seedsmen who handle plants made a clean-up and are greatly pleased with their success. Shippers were obliged to refuse entirely or only partially fill many orders from outside points.

Considerable activity in social circles continued throughout all of last week and, with a fair demand for funeral work, the stocks of cut flowers were well cleaned up every day.

Dealers in hardy perennials report that their sales so far this season have broken all records. Warmer weather, indicating that the season for frosts is over, has started a brisk movement in bedding stock and some of the florists are delivering filled window boxes and porch decorations.

Various Notes.

Oscar Johnson, who has a range of glass at Beaverton, has opened a flower store at 768 Gleason street, a location previously occupied by Hoffman Bros. He combines landscaping with his florists' business.

E. L. Shelton has taken a position as foreman of the greenhouse range at Twenty-third and Gleason streets, operated by the Swiss Floral Co.

C. C. Ruenitz closed his store at noon Easter Sunday, as he had nothing left to sell.

J. Nyberg, an onion grower of Tualitin, said that his land had been flooded twice this winter. The last time was in March and the soil is not as yet in a suitable condition for planting. He stated that several growers in his district will not try to grow onions this year, as the result will depend on midsummer weather, which is decidedly uncertain, and the demand from California.

Martin & Forbes have leased space for a new store in the Morgan building, across the street and a few doors west of their present location. Entrances and show windows are being provided by the owners on Washington and Park streets, which will permit an elaborate display of flowers. The company will fit up the interior and plans to make it up-to-date in every respect. The store will be opened June 1.

Max Smith last week displayed some forced salpiglossis. The stems were long and the blooms attractive.

Gustave J. Burkhardt expects a brisk spring business.

The Magnificent Lavender Freesia

THE only commercial colored Freesia in the world. A truly wonderful novelty that took many years to produce. The above cut will give some idea of its beauty. It represents a bunch of only twelve sprays photographed side by side with my new GIANT WHITE. One glance will satisfy anyone of its wonderful commercial merit, and no words are necessary to describe it except to say that the bunches figured measure nearly three feet tall, not including the vase. It is much larger and stronger in every way than Purity, one of its parents; has the same fine habit of growth and is very fragrant.

I offer it in two shades of color, a bluish lavender and a reddish lavender. Only good-sized, flowering bulbs sold

SEATTLE.

The Market.

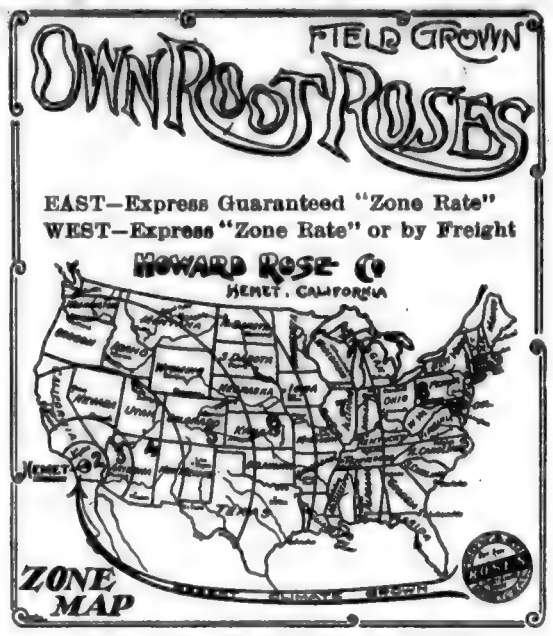
The later reports on Easter indicate a satisfactory trade. Of course, some stores did not do all the business they expected and some had an oversupply of flowers, which remained unsold, but the general verdict is that, compared with recent years, the sales were more numerous and the prices better. Lilies, as usual, were the predominent feature and the price of 25 cents per bloom prevailed in most of the stores, though some tried to catch a little extra trade by advertising them at 50 cents a pot, for inferior stock, carrying three flowers. The retail florists have to compete at these times with outsiders who jump into the business, and whose methods are generally detrimental to the good name of any florist. Of these there were the usual number and they all seemed to be doing a lively business. There was the usual supply of other potted plants, except roses, which appeared to be scarcer than in recent years. The sale for those offered was good, however, and hardly any were left over. There was little bulbous stock and few azaleas. Cut flowers moved well and have continued to do so since Easter. The supply in most cases is about equal to the demand.

Various Notes.

The staff of the Hollywood Gardens were taxed to the utmost to look after the large crowds patronizing their store. They had their usual large supply of flowers. Baskets filled with various plants were among their best sellers.

Rosaia Bros. had one of the finest displays ever seen in Seattle and cleaned up the greater part of their stock at good prices. Notable among their plants were some specimen Easter Greeting pelargoniums, which retailed at $2.50 and $3. The larger part of their stock was grown at Thomas and reflected great credit on the growers.

Mrs. L. W. McCoy, at her new location on Second avenue, had a large increase of business compared with recent Easters, showing the wisdom of having acquired a more prominent situation for her store.



The Burns Floral Co. reports a practical clean-up of all Easter stock.

The Orpheum Floral Co. had a tastefully arranged display in the windows and did a lively business. Cinerarias of the stellata varieties were among the notable showings.

The Harrington Co. had, as usual, a high-class, selected stock and has no complaints to make on the amount of business done.

The Woodlawn Flower Store, in its restricted space, did a large amount of business and had to get in additional supplies, though starting with what was considered a sufficient stock for all requirements.

Most of the carnation growers have their stock all planted out and the recent showery weather will prove beneficial to the young plants. The bedding season is in full blast and growers and retailers are extremely busy. T. W.

THE Niles Nursery Co., of Niles, Mich., has been incorporated at $25,000.

F. W. MENERAY and O. Meneray, proprietors of the Meneray Nursery Co., Council Bluffs, Ia., have incorporated at $10,000.

W. E. CAMPBELL, secretary of the Elm City Nursery Co., New Haven, Conn., suffered a painful accident recently when he stepped from a street car platform into an unguarded telephone manhole. His wrists were sprained and several ribs were damaged.

THE end of the 1915 apple crop is being forced on the market in a fashion that will not increase the demand for trees for orchard planting. When the Department of Agriculture reported that, April 1, thirty-three per cent of last year's crop still was in cold storage, the quantity being forty-four per cent greater than on the same date a year ago, it precipitated a rush to unload that has materially affected values and season's profits.

PROCEEDINGS recently were instituted in the Federal court at Louisville, Ky., by six stockholders of the Kentucky Nursery Co., seeking to have a receiver appointed to manage and to control the affairs of the company and to require Boone Gardiner to convey to the company two tracts of land alleged to have been transferred to him by M. L. Gardiner and R. L. Cullen, without the knowledge or consent of the stockholders. The court is asked to require the foregoing to deliver all the records of the company to the receiver and to make an accounting of all

Plants in 2½-inch pots, ready for bench or field

WINNER of the Silver Medal of the American Carnation Society, at Buffalo, 1915; also WINNER of the SAME MEDAL in the same class at ST. LOUIS, 1916; also of Silver Medal of S. A. F. and O. H., at St. Louis, 1916. The color is a most brilliant red. The size of the flower is 3½ inches. Stems 24 to 36 inches long, strong and stiff. We have never had a burst calyx, all flowers grading firsts; and, best of all, it is a constant bloomer, giving a steady run of flowers equal in number to the Enchantress family.

Price of 2½-inch plants is $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000. We will bill 500 at the 1000 rate

THE U. S. Department of Agriculture April 22 issued Farmers' Bulletin No. 351, a pamphlet of ninety-six pages, that will be of interest to nurserymen in the east who specialize on peach. The title of the bulletin is "The Terrapin Scale, an Important Insect Enemy of Peach Orchards." This pest is a serious one in peach growing districts of Pennsylvania and Maryland, but has not obtained much of a foothold in other sections. The purpose of the bulletin is to assist in limiting its spread.

The Market.

The writer has been so rushed with business the last two or three weeks that he has found it impossible to make the weekly reports. Trade conditions have been good all of that time, and the demand for cut flowers has kept up remarkably well for the season. Easter brought the best business it has ever given the city, as far as actual dollars' worth of business was concerned. There was a large supply of everything in readiness for the day, but I seldom have seen so complete a clean-up of stock. The demand was insistent early and late, and when one thing was sold out something else took its place. Naturally the trade is interested to know what sold best and whether there was any turning from the old favorites to new favorites. This would be hard to say from the experience here, for everything went in its turn. Lilies were the favorites, of course, and many desired nothing else, but there was not the usual feeling that lilies are the only appropriate flowers. Hydrangeas and tulips were even used for church decorations.

Spiræa was conspicuous by its absence. Its day seems to be over in this city. The trade do not take to it, apparently for the reason that it will not last in the homes of the buyers. Rambler roses in pots were in good demand and were all sold at good prices. There was a better assortment of varieties this year than usual. Tausendschon seemed to be the favorite.

Now that Easter is over, bedding plants are going out with a rush. Last week the weather was cool; in fact, it was close to the freezing mark every night, so that this week promises to be even better than last week for the sale of bedding plants. The quality of the geraniums and the salvias is the best I have ever seen, and the prices higher than usual. In recent years the bulk of the salvias sold at 50 cents per dozen and the geraniums at $1. This season 75 cents would be rather below the average for salvias and $1.50 for geraniums is about as low as they go. The quality is better; the profits are larger; the customer is more pleased.

Various Notes.

Geny Bros. are planning to do considerable rebuilding at their old place this summer. Oscar Geny, who has been under the care of a physician for some time, is improving, but still is unable to attend to his regular duties.

Floyd Bralliar is planting over an acre of cannas this season. He is making a full test of the new varieties offered this year, in comparison with a number of his own seedlings.

The Hillcrest School Farm has a remarkable showing of irises at present, embracing about 150 varieties. The demand for irises certainly is on the increase in this city.

The Joy Floral Co. had its carnations in the field before the Easter rush. I have never seen their greenhouses so completely empty as they were the day after Easter. They report the heaviest business they have ever done at this season.

Haury & Sons have their wagons on the street with pot plants of all kinds.

McIntyre Bros. are offering their new geranium, a sport of Tom Thumb, this spring. This geranium has been before the public two years and has proven a real winner for this locality.

Leslie Littel has nearly an acre in bulbs of various kinds this spring. The bulbs have made a wonderfully good showing.

Charles Tritschler, who erected a range of houses last summer and went into the plant business, has the reputation of having the best line of bedding plants ever offered in the city.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

The Market.

Easter business was exceptionally good this year. The weather was cold and rainy and kept most of the trade waiting, so that the greater part of the business was done on the last day, but everybody was ready for the rush. Plants of all kinds were in excellent condition. Azaleas were scarce and nearly everybody was out of lilies by night. Bulbous stock was good and plentiful. Some fine hydrangeas and rose bushes were on hand. Cut flowers held out fairly well excepting sweet peas. These were in heavy supply at the start, but the demand was enormous and they were soon gone. Violets were in demand, but as they were not in the market, roses and peas took their place.

Various Notes.

Henry Smith had his usual large trade and rented an extra store for display and sales.

Eli Cross rented an extra store for plant sales and reports a fine Easter trade.

Arthur Crabb cleaned up on everything and was well satisfied with the result.

Lewis Kunst reports the sale of 4,000 geraniums at Easter, as well as a good sale of fine Easter plants.

The Alfred Hannah Floral Co. had cleaned up on all lilies by 6 p. m. April 22, and there had been an extra large stock. A. F. C.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

Business was good all last week. There were plenty of flowers and the demand was active, winding up with a splendid Saturday, which cleaned up everything in sight. In fact, April proved to be a highly satisfactory month, both to the plantsmen and the cut flower growers. The conditions for this week do not look so favorable, as not a trolley car in the city is moving and there are no signs of a settlement of the strike of the street car employees. This strike, with that of thousands of molders and mechanics, is causing an extremely unsettled feeling. The effect is felt today and will undoubtedly become worse the longer the traction cars are tied up.

Various Notes.

Mrs. E. A. Williams had a full store one day last week, when she was visited by the kindergarten children from one of the schools. There were about fifty kiddies, all about 5 years old. After they had seen the flowers and plants and each one had received a bunch of flowers, they sang flower songs and songs of spring, and all concerned thought it a happy event.

The Florists' Club met May 2. Many of the members brought outdoor or seasonable flowers and the audience was entertained with lantern slides showing the flora of Washington state.

FIELD OR HOUSE GROWN CARNATIONS

WHICH?

THAT outdoor-grown carnation plants have under favorable conditions a superior vigor, even the house growing advocates promptly acknowledge.

The decrease in outdoor grown has been largely due to the inability to control watering conditions. To depend on Heaven's bounty is entirely too uncertain.

The Skinner overhead irrigation solves all that.

It turns an uncertainty into a certainty.

At planting time and lifting time alone, it is worth its cost.

In the last year we have perfected new nozzles for both inside and outside use. They throw a better stream, and throw it farther. They come pretty near to being a complete solution to all "nozzle plugging" or stoppage. A new drilling machine is another of our improvements. Also an automatic water operated turning appliance. "It works while you sleep."

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

WOULD BOILER BE SUITABLE?

Kindly let us know whether a second-hand marine fire-box boiler would be a good boiler for greenhouse heating. Would it be more economical in consumption of coal than a bricked-in tubular boiler? W. B.—Ont.

A marine boiler would give good results for greenhouse heating and would be quite economical of fuel. Whether it would excel a tubular boiler in this respect would depend upon the relation between the grate and fire surface in each. Thus, if either boiler has a large grate and a comparatively small fire surface, while it would be economical so far as the labor of firing is concerned, it would be likely to use a good deal of coal. On the other hand, a small grate and large fire surface might be economical in fuel consumption but require frequent attention.

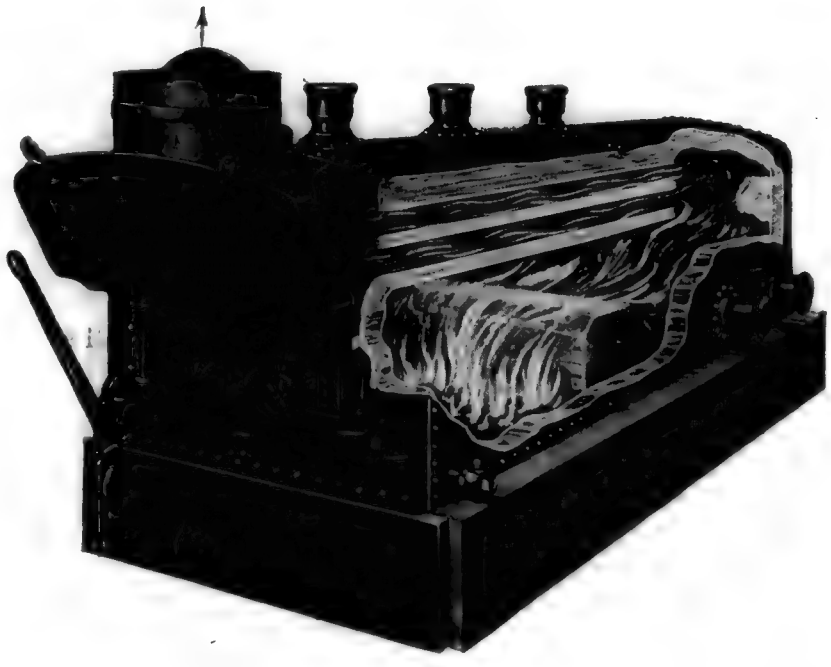
ABOUT PIPING UNDER BENCHES.

I intend to build an additional house, 16x70, which will be protected on the west side by another house. The other house has pipes running under the benches. In the new house I wish to use beds with concrete walls twenty-four inches high. In these beds I would place, first, twelve inches of cinders. Above the cinders I would put twelve inches of soil. I would distribute the return pipes along the bench walls, in sufficient number to give plenty of heat. Can ferns and geraniums be grown successfully without any bottom heat?

W. C. H.—Pa.

While there will be no difficulty in growing ferns and geraniums on solid beds, as described in the inquiry, a more rapid development can be obtained, especially with geraniums, if a part of the pipes are under the beds.

THE COAL MARKET.



As this is being written, the uncertainty in the labor situation is still the main factor in determining the status of the coal market, but the crisis in the wage dispute may be past, for better or for worse, before these words are printed. The unsettled state of affairs has produced among coal users a feeling of uneasiness and foreboding that is adding strength to the market. Actuated by the natural instinct for "safety first," the consumers are looking distrustfully into the troubled future, with its possible coal famine, and are "getting under cover" by either purchasing fuel for immediate delivery or signing contracts with reliable dealers. As stated a week ago, the contract transactions predominate, but there is also a good proportion of spot business.

Fortunately for the florists, the trade in smokeless coal is, apparently, the weakest spot in the market and a little difficulty is experienced in maintaining the present circular prices on mine-run, $1.35 f. o. b. the mines and $3.40 f. o. b. Chicago. "The smokeless situation," says the Black Diamond, "has improved a little within the last week, not because the demand is better, but because the operators have kept unsold coal off the market. Major producers are holding to circular on mine-run, but occasionally make concessions of 10 or 15 cents in order to move accumulated lump and egg."

BUFFALO.

The Market.

With the sunshine roses have become abundant again, with the exception of Beauties, which, while they may be had, are of inferior grade. Ophelia and Russell roses continue to clear daily, but White Killarney and Killarney are dragging. The supply of carnations is normal again, although at the first of the week they were scarce, because of the Easter clean-up. They are of good quality and the percentage of splits is small.

Sweet peas clear rapidly one day; the next day the sale is druggy. The weather, of course, rules the sweet pea situation, as the majority of the peas are used in corsages, that is, outdoors. Sweet peas are being used in the place of roses and violets for that purpose. Valley has not recovered from the tremendous Easter demands, and as for cattleyas, there are none to be had at any price. Gardenias are sufficient, of good quality and move at a reasonable price. Of Easter lilies there is a limited supply. Callas did not experience a large demand and are more plentiful.

Of miscellaneous stock there are some items that are quite plentiful, such as yellow and white daisies, pansies, calendulas and mignonette. Bulbous stock is not abundant and is of rather poor grade. The supply of greens is sufficient for all needs at present.

Various Notes.

Although the supply was heavier this year than ever and the stock good, W. J. Palmer & Son had to stop selling flowers of all kinds at 7 o'clock April 22. There was such a tremendous demand that it easily exceeded the supply. Plants also sold out; by closing time there was not a presentable plant left.

Saturday, April 29, Miss J. Schultz, of Tonawanda, N. Y., was married to Mr. Ard, of Buffalo. The ceremony was performed at Lancaster, N. Y. The trade wishes the couple happiness and success.

Galley Bros. had a splendid Easter and had no difficulty whatever in delivering orders.

S. A. Anderson reports one of the busiest Easters of many years. There is not a florist in the city whose Easter business was not just as good as in previous years and it is safe to say that it was better with many of them.

Every florist now is looking forward to Mothers' day. The market promises to be good at that time, especially in sweet peas, carnations and roses. There also will be good seasonable plants available. A. E.

LANCASTER, PA.

Thursday evening, April 27, the Lancaster County Florists' Club held its annual ladies' night in the Brenneman hall. There were upwards of fifty in attendance. The whole affair was of the nature of a jubilee after the strenuous Easter season. The committee in charge consisted of A. M. Herr, L. Landis, E. J. Weaver, Frank L. Kohr and Rudolph Nagel, to whom the members are indebted for the successful arrangements of the evening.

The retail stores furnished the decorations, which were quite elaborate. Beautiful corsages of orchid peas were presented to the ladies.

After the dinner bowling teams were organized, and progressive "500" was indulged in. Others enjoyed billiards and still others just sat around and chatted with friends.

In bowling the high score prize for ladies was awarded to Mrs. Ella Lehman. Our genial friend, Dennis Connor, carried off the honors in the men's class. Other prizes in bowling were awarded to Charles H. Tucker and Mrs. B. F. Barr. The prize-winners in "500" were Mr. and Mrs. Willis B. Girvin, David Rose and Mrs. Albert M. Herr.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y.

The monthly meeting of the Oyster Bay Horticultural Society was held in Firemen's hall, April 26, at 7:30 p. m. President Walker occupied the chair. The secretary read a number of letters from various ladies and gentlemen offering prizes for the spring, summer and chrysanthemum shows.

The president appointed as judges Messrs. David Hothersoll, Wilson and Humphreys, and their decisions were as follows: Best pot schizanthus, Joseph Robinson, society's prize; vase of stocks, Joseph Robinson, cultural certificate; antirrhinums, Frank Kyle, cultural certificate; carnations, C. Milburn, honorable mention; three heads of cauliflower, C. Milburn, honorable mention; basket of spinach, C. Milburn, honorable mention.

A prize of $5 was offered by an anonymous donor for twenty-five carnations at the May meeting.

Joseph Robinson gave an interesting talk on growing stocks in 4-inch pots. James Duthie read an essay on "The Uses of Native Shrubs for Native Planting," written by L. P. Jensen. It was greatly enjoyed by all present.

The exhibits for May will be one vase of flowering shrubs, twelve tulips and two heads of cauliflower. J. T. I.

The Market.

The weather has been good during the last two weeks and business has been satisfactory. The demand has been far ahead of the supply. Easter was the largest Chattanooga ever had. Florists had all they could do and sold out clean on lilies and pot plants, which were in good supply.

Various Notes.

The Forest Hills Cemetery company is moving the houses purchased from the Chattanooga Floral Co. last fall to its range at the cemetery. Business is reported to be satisfactory.

W. F. Haeger is planting two houses to Russell roses. The work is nearly completed.

Mrs. J. W. Crouch has a fine supply of bedding stock that is moving rapidly.

The funeral of John A. Patton last week saw the largest floral display ever turned out in this city. The business was well divided among the retailers.

G. A. K.

MOLINE, R. ISLAND, DAVENPORT.

The Market.

Business last week was a little slow, but Easter had used up some of the available supply of cut flowers. There was no overabundance of cut flowers, except possibly roses, which were in heavy supply and lower in price. Carnations barely filled the demand. Daffodils are near their end and tulips are about out of the market. Sweet peas are plentiful but selling well at a moderate price. Lilies also are plentiful and their prices are lower. Potted plants continue in good demand and sell readily.

Various Notes.

Ludwig Stapp, of Rock Island, will finish glazing his three new houses in a few days and expects to plant to roses immediately.

Henry Gaethje, of Rock Island, has a splendid Magnolia Soulangeana at the entrance to his greenhouses. It stands about fifteen feet high and has several thousand blossoms. Mr. Gaethje reports that his Easter business was a record-breaker, having sold out of cut flowers completely and most of the potted plants.

Forber & Bird, of Davenport, had the misfortune of badly smashing their delivery car last week. The machine skidded into a curb, breaking both front wheels, the windshield and lights. The driver was unhurt.

The Market.

The weather has been good during the last two weeks and business has been satisfactory. The demand has been far ahead of the supply. Easter was the largest Chattanooga ever had. Florists had all they could do and sold out clean on lilies and pot plants, which were in good supply.

Various Notes.

The Forest Hills Cemetery company is moving the houses purchased from the Chattanooga Floral Co. last fall to its range at the cemetery. Business is reported to be satisfactory.

W. F. Haeger is planting two houses to Russell roses. The work is nearly completed.

Mrs. J. W. Crouch has a fine supply of bedding stock that is moving rapidly.

The funeral of John A. Patton last week saw the largest floral display ever turned out in this city. The business was well divided among the retailers.

G. A. K.

MOLINE, R. ISLAND, DAVENPORT.

The Market.

Business last week was a little slow, but Easter had used up some of the available supply of cut flowers. There was no overabundance of cut flowers, except possibly roses, which were in heavy supply and lower in price. Carnations barely filled the demand. Daffodils are near their end and tulips are about out of the market. Sweet peas are plentiful but selling well at a moderate price. Lilies also are plentiful and their prices are lower. Potted plants continue in good demand and sell readily.

Various Notes.

Ludwig Stapp, of Rock Island, will finish glazing his three new houses in a few days and expects to plant to roses immediately.

Henry Gaethje, of Rock Island, has a splendid Magnolia Soulangeana at the entrance to his greenhouses. It stands about fifteen feet high and has several thousand blossoms. FORT WAYNE, IND.

The Market.

Trade during the week following Easter was brisk. Corsages were in heavy demand and weddings called for many decorations and bouquets. There was the usual funeral work and a good counter trade.

Cut flowers were in exceptionally good supply, considering the great demand of the holiday. Roses are plentiful in both long-stemmed and medium lengths. The shorter stems are in heavy demand for corsage work. Shawyer, Russell, Richmond, Killarney, Sunburst and Ophelia are the leading varieties in both quality and quantity. Carnations are quite plentiful now, although Easter Sunday it seemed as if they would not be plentiful for many weeks, so complete was the clean-up. The demand is not so active as for roses. Snapdragon is in good supply at present and sells extremely well. Spanish irises are in good demand. Cattleyas are scarce—almost unobtainable, owing to the unusually large demand at Easter. Gardenias are plentiful. Some fine valley is being shipped in from the western market at 60 cents per dozen wholesale. The supply is limited. There are no western violets at this late date and the eastern violets shipped in are in poor condition.

The bulbous stock—daffodils, jonquils, freesias, poeticus narcissi and tulips—is in moderate supply. Hyacinths are over for the season. Yellow and white daisies, marguerites, forget-me-nots, lilacs, sweet peas, pansies, primulas and mignonette are in lively demand for corsages. Sweet peas are plentiful in the Spencer varieties. Greens are abundant.

Various Notes.

Charles G. Sauers, a landscape artist from La Fayette, Ind., has been engaged to lay out the grounds surrounding the new school just north of the city.

Table decorations for the Round Table banquet last week were executed by the Flick Floral Co.

Edgar Wenninghoff was taken ill the Friday before Easter with a sudden attack of appendicitis and was rushed to the St. Joseph hospital. He now is well on the road to recovery. Some fine calceolaria plants are being shown in the Wenninghoff Flower Shop. R. F.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Since Easter this market has been short of stock, and the shortage is expected to continue until summer, unless a sudden drop in business occurs. Funeral work was the chief item of trade last week. Everybody now is preparing for a big trade for Mothers' day. The bedding season is expected to start this week. Bulbous stock is practically off the market; only a few blooms strayed in last week. Carnations are of good quality and the demand for them exceeds the supply. Roses are plentiful and help to fill the vacant spots left by other flowers. Extra fine American Beauties are scarce, which is the only shortage in the roses. Sweet peas are not plentiful. Greenhouse-grown gladioli have made their appearance. There was a large lot of Asparagus plumosus placed on the market last week, but it now is all sold.

Various Notes.

Nelson Jarrett has his greenhouses well filled with bedding stock of all kinds. He has built an addition, 20x50 feet, which is well filled with stock. After the spring rush he intends to extend the length of his house to 116 feet.

Adolph Mohr has his place ready for the spring business. He has some nice Lorraine and Cincinnati begonias in 2½-inch pots.

A. F. Barbe will have his large house ready next week. He intends planting it to roses exclusively.

R. S. Brown & Son report that shipping business to southern points is heavy this season. They still are busy shipping stock throughout this section.

The St. Mary's Greenhouse has been busy filling porch boxes. Bedding stock here is good.

The Rosery reports that funeral work April 28 was extremely heavy. Mrs. Ellsworth has been confined to her room with tonsillitis, but is expected to be around again in a few days.

W. J. Barnes received a large shipment of boxwood trees of all shapes. He is cutting some fine carnations for this time of the year.

John Stevens has finished planting out 65,000 carnation plants in the field. He now is cutting gladioli from his benches. He has 10,000 bulbs planted and is well satisfied with the percentage of blooms.

Henry Kusik & Co. say if it isn't wire designs it is something else in wire work that keeps them busy. They now are rushed with orders for hanging baskets. There was a shortage of cut flowers at this place and they sometimes found it hard to fill orders. Relief from this situation is expected soon.

Mrs. E. F. Biel, of Beloit, Kan., was a visitor here last week.

T. J. Noll & Co. report business keeping up well. The iceboxes are cleared of all cut stock every evening.

Half Iron Frame Talk No. 5

Roof Bracings

YOU have seen plenty of Pipe Frame and Half Iron Frame houses put up within the last two or three years, that, even in fairly good widths, have only a pipe cross tie between the columns.

You and I know such a tie can be of very little use, especially when it sags by its own weight, as you and I have so frequently seen it do.

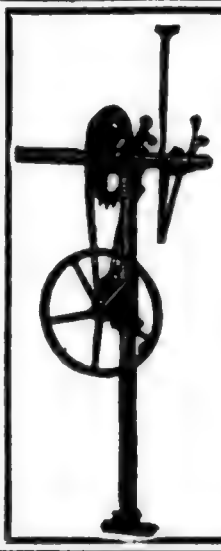
When the wind blows against the roof, instead of its making the frame solid as a rock, that pipe tie often gives, loosening up the glass.

Now look at the cross tie in the cut and see the way we braced it to the column and tied it to the ridge.

This is our latest method of framing our Half Iron Frame house. It is the same, in fact, that we have used in our Full Iron Frame.

Of course, our Half Iron Frame is the next best house to our Full Iron Frame.

But why build the next best?



Why not have the best?

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

After a good clean-up at Easter, the growers and retailers now are putting forth their energies for a big business at Memorial day. It is expected, however, that stock of all kinds will be high and scarce. The florists are making preparations to meet an expected demand for white flowers on Mothers' day, May 14. Last week prices dropped to normal, except on violets, valley and choice roses, which are still slightly stiff in price.

Various Notes.

Peter S. Byrnes, of Wickford, had the decorations for a large wedding at Kingston last week.

John T. Burke, of Burke & Burns, has the sympathy of the trade in the death of his father, Thomas Burke, 75 years of age, which occurred April 27 as the result of being struck by an electric car near his home.

William E. Chappell has recovered from the injuries received last autumn by a fall down a flight of stairs.

Eugene McCarron, of Hope street, is contemplating several large improvements at his greenhouses this spring.

Frederick Deitz was a business visitor to New York last week.

Johnston Bros. have several large decorative orders for social functions during the next ten days. They have been unusually busy this season.

Appleton & Co. have nearly a score of men busy on outdoor work.

Charles Smith and his son, Joseph, motored to Boston a few days ago, combining business with pleasure during their stay there.

Walter S. Macrae was a member of the committee in charge of a reception of the Odd Fellows of Rhode Island last week. W. H. M.

Chisholm, Minn.—Although only a village, the park and boulevard system of Chisholm ranks higher than that of many a large city, considering in the contrast the size of the city and then applying the ratio. J. L. Phillips is the man who is putting Chisholm on the map in this respect. There is a municipal conservatory 30x100 feet that supplies the plants, shrubs and trees for the park on Longear lake, and shortly there will be thirty-five miles of boulevards. Chisholm was completely demolished by fire in 1910, but today it is a garden village, thanks to Mr. Phillips, park superintendent.

Detroit, Mich.—John Breitmeyer's Sons were given a splendid write-up in the Detroit Saturday Night of March 25. Two full pages were given to an exhaustive article on the foundation, growth, success and policies of the company. There were twelve illustrations, giving views of the main store, known as the House of Flowers, on Broadway, the three branch stores and portraits of John Breitmeyer, the founder, Philip Breitmeyer, the son, Harry Breitmeyer, the grandson, Albert L. Winckler and Frank Danzer, managers. The late Elbert Hubbard came in contact with the new Breitmeyer store when he was in Detroit for a lecture engagement some time ago. Writing of his experience afterward, Mr. Hubbard called the store the "House of Flowers" and spoke highly of the wonderful interior. Philip Breitmeyer subsequently adopted "House of Flowers" as the name of his Broadway store.

INDEX TO ADVERTISEMENTS AND TABLE OF CONTENTS—PAGES TWO AND THREE

The one style fitting is used both to clamp the column to the purlin and to clamp the cross tie to the column.
They are made to fit all the usual sizes of pipe.

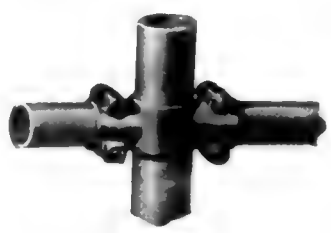
Note how the faces of the fitting are slanted to give both an extra clamping grip, and make the edge dig into the pipe, giving a never-slip grip.

Outside and inside view. All bolt holes are square so they will hold without turning when being tightened up.
The bolts are sherardized.

New Malleable Fittings

FOR PIPE FRAME HOUSES

THE advantage of malleable iron fittings over cast-iron ones, is that they can be drawn up as tight as you please without danger of breaking.



They can be made half the weight of cast-iron fittings, and still actually have more strength.

We have made these new fittings of ours with what we call a pinch-draw grip.

You will see from the illustration that the faces of the shoulders that carry the bolts are tapered. When the bolts are drawn up, the faces come more evenly together and at the same time cause the edges of the fitting to dig into the pipe, giving a biting hold, as well as a squeezing one.

Split Cross No. 1497 for ridge column and cross ties. It has that same pinch-draw grip as No. 1470.

This shows how No. 1497 is used.

They are furnished with special sherardized bolts.

We make them in all the customary sizes of pipes used in standard pipe frame houses.

Send for Special Growers' Prices.

The florist may obtain any of his favorite colors of the Grandiflora type in the Spencers. Flowers gigantic in size (often 2 inches in diameter), stems stiff, 12 to 15 inches long; the foliage and flower extraordinary in appearance.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

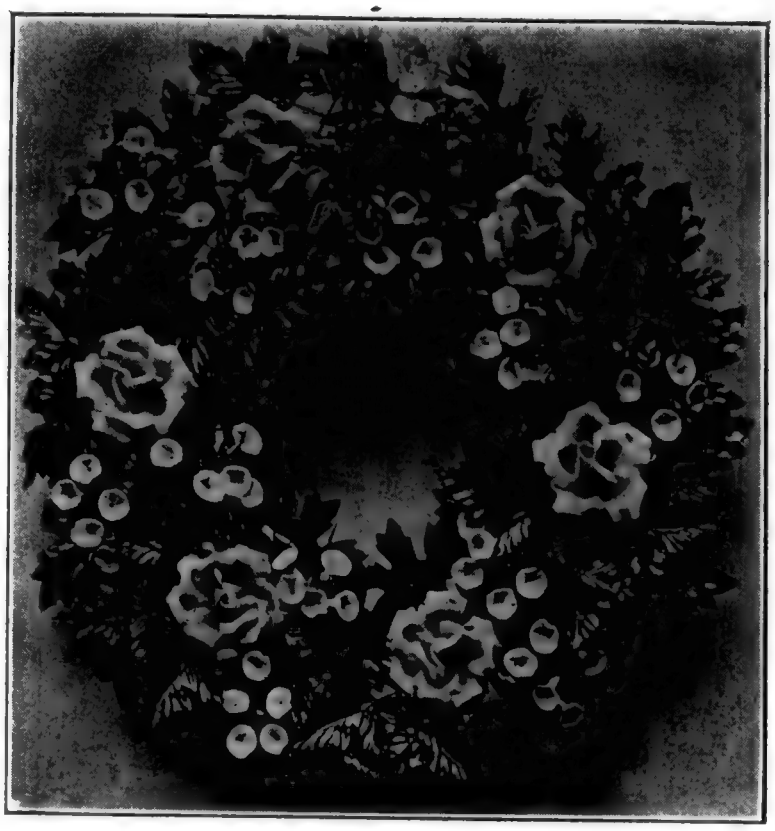
Goes on the Press Wednesday Morning, May 17, 1916

ADVERTISING FORMS CLOSE TUESDAY, MAY 16, AT 5 P. M.

And That's Enough Said

¶ It is an issue that comes out at exactly the right moment to help its readers in the purchase of stock for Memorial Day and to cover shortages on stock for spring planting



WHAT HAVE YOU TO OFFER?

¶ You receive so many compliments from advertisers in The Review, about good results obtained, that we are afraid you will not care very much for our mite of acknowledgment. But to state facts: We owe The Review the establishment of our business. The kind information you have given us at times has helped us along wonderfully, and last year, when the time came to offer our stock for the first time, we concluded to advertise in The Review only. The expenses for that year's ads were $8.40, and this year $7.20. As for the results: Last year we sold over 6000 bulbs; this year, so far, over 12,000, and the few we have left will surely go with another two insertions of a Classified ad.

SOUTH PARK FLORAL CO., (MYER HELLER) Newcastle, Ind.

"AND DEPONENT SAITH FURTHER, AS FOLLOWS:"

Out of a great mass of testimonials in support of the excellent character of Cypress for greenhouse construction, we have singled these few for your consideration:

Arthur Cowee, Gladiolus Specialist, proprietor of "Meadowvale Farm," Berlin, N. Y., writes: "My houses are now ten years old and I have not yet been obliged to spend one dollar in repairing any woodwork, with the exception of some of the posts. My only regret has been that I have not used CYPRESS for the benches, which I think would have been cheaper for me in the end than using hemlock, which, of course, with us is very much cheaper per thousand."

That's the point—CYPRESS literally CHEAPER in the end. Mr. Cowee names the proper system—FIGURE THE COST BY THE YEAR.

John C. Moninger Co., Greenhouse Builders, Chicago, say: "We first began using CYPRESS exclusively for greenhouse construction in 1885, using it previous to that time in conjunction with pine. The greenhouses built with clear CYPRESS, free of sap, 21 YEARS AGO, are being used today by their owners, and the wood is found perfectly preserved and free of any decay or rot." Ask this prominent concern about the "cheaper" substitutes, and why they won't use them nor attempt to dump inferior values onto their customers.

The Dingee & Conard Co., Rose Growers, West Grove, Pa., say: "We have used CYPRESS lumber for greenhouse building for many years, and we find that there is no lumber we can secure so satisfactory for that purpose." Nothing in that about a "cheaper substitute," is there?

Bobbink & Atkins, Importers, Nurserymen and Florists, Rutherford, N. J., are not backward in coming forward: "We would say that CYPRESS lasts with us from two to three years longer than any other wood for table purposes, and ITS LIFE SEEMS TO BE ENDLESS WHEN USED IN ORDINARY GREENHOUSE CONSTRUCTION. We use CYPRESS solely in our plant tub department."

Wagner Park Conservatories, Sidney, Ohio, rise to remark: "We use NOTHING BUT CYPRESS in the construction of our greenhouses, as we find it the most economical, on account of it outlasting other kinds of wood." No comfort there for the "substitute" lumbers.

Bassett & Washburn, Growers and Wholesale Dealers in Cut Flowers, Chicago, testify:

"We formerly used hemlock and pine, but found that 2-inch stock lasted only about four years, while so far, we have had no 'Pecky' CYPRESS rot out in 10 or 12 years. We use clear CYPRESS for all our roof work, ventilators, etc., and it is very satisfactory. We think it is the only kind of lumber for the purpose." Not bad, is it?

"PECKY" CYPRESS FOR THE BENCHES—NOTHING BUT!"

Draw freely on our Cypress Pocket Library—they are free. Vol. 3, "The Only Greenhouse Wood"; Vol. 22, "Cypress for Silos and Tanks," and Vol. 28, "Cypress for All Trellises and Arbors." Write for what you need, or hope to need, or ought to need.

CARNATIONS.
What you want for late stock is the "best" not the "cheapest." My stock is strong and clean, the large, thrifty cuttings that will catch up with or surpass much earlier potted stock. Get samples and see for yourself.
ALICE.
Don't overlook Alice. It is an easy, quick grower, both in field and bench, and will produce a great abundance of blooms early, when blooms mean money. Most of the big growers are greatly increasing their stock for next winter. I grew 500 for a party last summer and this is what he writes:
Lakewood, N. J., Apr. 10, 1916. Dear Sir: "About 'Alice,' we would advise planting a good lot of it. It is a fine color, a good keeper, and a fine yielder. It will keep twice as long as any Enchantress type of carnation.'—A. S. MacBean.

COLEUS.

YELLOW TRAILING QUEEN.
In introducing this valuable plant to the trade, we feel confident that it will make a place for itself. A sport from TRAILING QUEEN, another grand plant for boxes, vases, hanging baskets and bordering beds. It droops or hangs down 2 feet or more, not one little vine, but a clump of them. Center of leaves bright yellow, bordered with olive green, with deeply serrated edges intermingling with yellow. Has all the good qualities of TRAILING QUEEN, differing only in color, which makes it a fine trailing mate. This is a very attractive novelty. Order now to work up stock for spring sale.

PANSIES.

PANSY PLANTS IN ALL SIZES.

PANSY PARK PERFECTION is a thoroughbred strain of Show and Fancy Pansies. It includes every variety of Giants known; the reds, bronze and fancy sorts in good numbers, and all the colors in the right proportion for the retail trade. The growing of Pansy seeds and plants a specialty for over 40 years. I have received thousands of testimonials from florists and amateurs in all parts of the country, like the following samples: From Mr. J. McCabe, Washington, D. C.—"This is the 7th year I have used your Pansy plants, and each year have found them satisfactory in size of flowers, colors and other respects." From the Wisconsin Nurseries, Union Grove, Wis.—Pansy plants at hand. The size and quality of the stock makes us forget all about our troubles with the other fellow who sent us plants that looked as if they had been grown five to the square inch." Stocky field-grown plants from July sown seed, September transplanted, in bud and bloom, all colors, mixed, $1.00 per 100, $8.00 per 1000. From August-sown seed, October transplanted, in bud, $7.00 per 1000, $4.00 per 500, $1.00 per 100. Strong, stocky, field-grown plants from seed sown in August, thinly broadcast, in sandy soil, causing extra fine roots; many in bud, some in bloom, all colors, mixed, $5.00 per 1000, $2.75 per 500. Medium-sized plants which will come in bloom the latter part of May, $4.00 per 1000, $2.25 per 500. Cash with order. L. W. Goodell, Pansy Park, Dwight, Mass.

PELARGONIUMS.

PELARGONIUMS.

Listen:—Gus Obermeyer, Parkersburg, W. Va., April 24, 1916, in ordering 100, says: "The 50 Easter Greeting I got of you last fall were certainly fine for Easter and I sold all and could have sold many more at 75c each in 5-in. pot. Will want more later on for stock. The only trouble I find with them, THEY BLOOM TOO MUCH. The only way I could get plants of any size was to keep buds pinched off until near selling time." Gus is originator of that gold medal canna, "WEST VIRGINIA." Don't you think he knows a good thing? And don't you think the above is a good adv. for Easter Greeting? It's the same old story, and easy for you to prove. 2¼-in. E. G. and Lucie Becker, 8c; 3-in., 10c; 4-in., 16c; 3-in. Wurtembergia, 12c; in any quantity. This gives the small buyer an equal chance. Better give 'em a trial this season, you'll want hundreds next. Sold under our iron-clad guarantee.
S. C. TEMPLIN,
EASTER GREETING SPECIALISTS, GARRETTSVILLE, OHIO.

Did you see our display adv. and special offer on page 121 of the issue of April 13? If you did not, you had better see it at once and take advantage of this special offer while it lasts. If you don't, you may regret it later. These plants are from 2½-in. pots and are good, strong and healthy, and ready to shift; all in bud and bloom. They will make fine stock for Memorial Day. Try them and be convinced.

BY THEIR FRUITS YE SHALL KNOW THEM

The A. F. Amling plant, Maywood, Ill., in process of construction. This range of glass, 400x550, is the largest single range ever contracted for at one time. Why did they choose the AGEMCO? Read the Fable.

The Fable of the House Builder

Once upon a time there was a man who did wish to build for himself a house. He made known his desires about the town. Straightway all of the builders of the country did gather themselves together in front of his home and each did pester him to have them do the work on the new house.

Frenzied by the turmoil of the many clamoring builders the man did say unto them: "Speak you one at a time, and in turn. I will give all an audience."

The first of the builders to speak did clamor of the fact that he had builded houses in the same way for over forty years.

"I'll have none of you," said the man with disgust, to the first builder, "you do boast of being behind the times."

The second did prate of his equipment, of how sharp his tools were, and that they were of the most recent design. "Surely," said he, "with such tools I can do the best of building."

But the man told him to go, saying: "I am not making purchase of tools. It is a house that I wish."

Then came a third man; said he: "No man on earth can build a house in less time, nor using less material or for less money, than I."

He, too, was sent about his business by the man, who said: "Such a house would be worse than no house at all; be gone."

Still a fourth builder did come; with him he did have plans. He did tell the man what he would do, and just how and why he did do so.

The man was pleased and did rejoice. "At last," cried he, "here is a man of brains. He does know how, why and wherefore to build. This man shall build my house."

"JUST AROUND THE CORNER FROM THE WHOLESALE FLOWER MARKET"

The Conservatory as an Advertiser

BUILT FOR ST. ADELBERT'S CEMETERY AT NILES, ILL.

AGAIN we want to point out the logic of having a greenhouse in connection with your flower store.

Annually you spend hundreds, perhaps thousands of dollars for advertising your flowers and you are very careful to see to it that you spend your money to good advantage.

Now stop and consider a conservatory in connection with your store. Anyone who sees your place even at a distance immediately knows it is a floral establishment. Advertising signs could not tell the fact so well. Customers like to step into a conservatory, it's pleasant; they like to see the growing plants.

Another good point is that you can take your plants from the salesroom occasionally and place them in the conservatory to revive and freshen them up a bit.

But the best part is that while your plants are growing they are also acting as advertisers.

We have built many conservatories in connection with stores and we are very anxious to co-operate with you. Our estimates and sketches are furnished free of cost or obligation to buy. Write us about your needs, we can help you.
